The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — the twin skills of speaking and dialogue in twenty books: a journey from the Breath to the Harvest, growing the Arab child's voice step by step through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ, Amer 2024) — a language lived through the body and presence, not memorized cold.

THE SINGLE THREAD — the living cord binding the twenty books is PRESENCE. Every skill is presence reaching one step farther: the BREATH is presence of the self (“I am here”) → the Voice, presence heard → the Gaze, presence toward the other → Listening, presence for the other ... until the ROOT, presence that endures. THIS BOOK IS THE ZERO POINT — THE FIRST HEARTBEAT, THE DNA OF ALL THAT FOLLOWS, bound to the mother project (TrT: the body and presence) by that same cord.

Integration Map — the place of this book within the one living system.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

⚠ Caution for the guide. Before practising deep-breathing exercises, review the children's health conditions. A child with asthma, an anxiety disorder, or a respiratory sensitivity may be affected by prolonged deep breathing. For them, keep the breath natural and short (a single breath), and never ask a child to hold the breath.

📖 How to use this book. It holds two tellings of the tale — a brief telling (3 minutes, for the youngest, age 4) and a full telling (7 minutes, for ages 5–6). Choose what suits your child's attention.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Seed — from “asleep” to “awakening” within this very book
AGE BAND	4–6 years · overlap to 7 for the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	n–f–s (Nafas, breath): the beginning of presence
ROOT FAMILY	nafas · anfās · tanaffasa · mutanaffas (all from n–f–s)

METAPHOR	The seed breathes in the darkness of the soil before it opens
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Jabir ibn Hayyan (the scientist) + Grandmother Ramla (a feminine model of wisdom)
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor the seed (the child's sleeping spirit)
COUNTER- CHARACTER	The Hasty Wind — symbolic (non-historical), embodying haste; it learns patience
MASTERY CRITERION	Asleep: breathes with a reminder ← Awakening: places the palm and breathes consciously, unprompted
CASEL DOMAIN	Self-Awareness
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR pre-A1 (slow speech supported by pictures and pauses) · ACTFL Novice Low (isolated words, gestures, and formulaic presence) · CASEL Self-Awareness

The Heart of the Book

Before a child learns to speak, he learns to breathe with awareness. The breath is the first presence — the first word the body utters before the tongue — and a child's first proof that he is here.

📖 Historical footnote. Jabir ibn Hayyan was a pioneering Arab scientist of the second Hijri century, reckoned among the founders of the experimental method in chemistry, renowned for exact observation and patience in trial — the very virtue we borrow here: a patient listening to silent things.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

👤 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root only through the body, never through analysis. He does not parse letters; he feels the breath — the phonetic sensation of n-f-s: the hum of n at the nose, the soft push of f as air brushes the lip, the whispered s like a slow leak of air. The morphology below is for the teacher alone, that the guide may see the household from which the word is born.

Each book in “The Art of Expression” rests upon one root that teaches the skill; then, for the guide, we open a window onto that root's family — the words born of it — to show that language is one interwoven household.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
n – f – s	nafas · anfās · tanaffasa · mutanaffas

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. Every word here derives from the single root (n-f-s); “tanaffasa” follows the pattern “tafa ‘ ‘ ala,” its initial tā' augmentative, not radical. Hence we speak of a “root family,” not a “second root,” to keep morphological precision.

— The Full Telling: “Noor Breathes” —

For reading aloud with the child (ages 5–6) · seven minutes · with five original plates in the seed palette

❧ I. NOOR THE SEED SLEEPS IN THE DARK OF THE SOIL, BREATHING WITH THE RAIN ❧

Plate I — In the dark furrow, the seed breathes with the falling rain.

In a far-off land there was a sleeping seed named Noor. She did not speak — for how should a seed speak while it lies in the darkness of the soil?

Yet she breathed. Whenever morning woke, she drew a deep breath with the rain; and whenever evening fell, she loosed a warm sigh into the earth.

❧ II. THE HASTY WIND RUSHES BY SHOUTING, AND NOOR IS FLUSTERED ❧

Plate II — “Quickly! Speak!” cried the Hasty Wind, and the little shoot trembled.

One day a Hasty Wind passed. It ran without pause and cried in every quarter:

“Speak, Noor! Quickly! Why are you silent? Whoever does not speak fast is not heard!”

Noor was flustered. She tried to speak swiftly, like the Wind, and found no word; and the more she hurried, the more her chest drew tight.

III. THE WISE JABIR AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA SIT IN STILLNESS, AND BREATHE TOGETHER

Plate III — The wise Jabir and Grandmother Ramla lay a palm on the belly and breathe as the seed breathes.

In that moment, beside the soil, sat the wise Jabir ibn Hayyan and, with him, Grandmother Ramla — for the two of them knew the speech of silent things.

Each laid a palm upon the belly and drew a deep, slow breath, exactly as the seed. Then Grandmother Ramla said, in a voice like a breeze:

“Noor, heed not the Hasty Wind. You are speaking now. Every breath is a word. The rain hears you, and the soil answers.”

Said Noor, still flustered: “But I do not know the words.”

Jabir smiled and said:

“Words are not in the mouth. They are in the belly. Feel your roots. Do you feel the rain entering? That is the first letter. Do you feel the soil growing warm? That is the last. And you, between them — a whole word.”

❧ IV. NOOR DRAWS A DEEP BREATH WITHOUT HASTE, AND HER CHEST WIDENS ❧

Plate IV — A calm breath in, a calmer breath out; and the seed's chest widens into light.

Noor drew a deep breath, unhurried. A calm inhaling... then a calmer letting-go. And her chest widened. And for the first time she felt that she was — here.

❧ V. NOOR OPENS INTO A FLOWER AND SAYS “I AM HERE,” AND THE WIND GROWS STILL ❧

Plate V — “I am here,” said the flower with a pulse; and the Wind, at last, grew still.

And she said — not with a tongue, but with a pulse: “I am here.”

This was the first speech the seed learned — before she opened and before she grew. She said it with her body, not her mouth.

As for the Hasty Wind, it paused a moment, and breathed itself... and grew a little still. For it had learned that some speech asks for an unhurried while.

❧ The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Lay your hand upon your belly. Draw a deep breath. Did you feel that you are here — that you exist before you say a thing?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

For a child of four — short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

There was a tiny seed named Noor. She did not speak, but she breathed.

A Hasty Wind came and said, “Quickly! Speak!” So Noor was afraid, and her chest drew tight.

Grandmother Ramla sat beside her and said gently, “Take a breath. Every breath is a word.”

Noor breathed slowly... and her chest widened. And she said, “I am here!” And the Wind grew still.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I am here" — the child says it upon a deep inhaling	Binding the self to breath and place
Bodily movement	Palm on the belly + inhale (3s) + exhale (5s) + eyes closed	Awareness of the breath as a source
Relational warmth	Looking into the eyes of the one beside him before he opens his mouth	The dawn of present-connection
Sensory alternative	Laying a friend's or parent's hand upon his belly to feel his breath	Wordless, sensory communion
English bridge	"I am here before I speak."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A sleeping seed — the child takes a conscious breath with a reminder from the companion. ← An awakening seed — he lays his palm upon his belly and breathes consciously unprompted. Thus the degree names a journey, not a fixed point.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; below CEFR pre-A1, at ACTFL Novice Low). The child can use a conscious deep breath — hand on the belly — to communicate to another the message "I am present and ready," in response to a partner's smile, even before uttering the words "I am here." Thus body-language is placed inside the communicative frame — the theory's fullest proof.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Awareness)

- Names his feeling in a single word after the activity (e.g., calm, at ease).
- Pauses two seconds before speaking — unprompted.

- Tells the inhaling from the letting-go bodily (points to his chest rising and falling).
- Shows a readiness to repeat the activity and asks for it himself.

The Four Inner Senses of the Breath

Beyond the five outward senses, TrT awakens the child's interoception — the quiet inner senses by which the body knows itself. The breath is their first doorway. Guide the child to notice, without naming them as terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN THE BREATH	A GUIDING WHISPER
Weight (heaviness)	The body settling, growing heavy and rooted as the breath slows	“Feel yourself growing heavy, like a seed sinking into warm soil.”
The in-between (interoception)	The soft stir between chest and belly where the breath turns	“Where does the breath stop and turn around inside you?”
Balance	The gentle sway steadying as the breath evens out	“Sit like a still tree; let the breath make you steady.”
Warmth	The warm air leaving, the cool air entering	“Is the breath you let out warm? Is the breath you take in cool?”

🌱 Why this matters. A child who can feel weight, warmth, balance, and the inner turn of the breath owns an inner compass for calm — the bodily ground on which every later skill (voice, gaze, listening) will stand.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👂 Safe-stop protocol. If the child feels dizzy, short of breath, or uneasy, halt the activity at once, return to natural breathing, and reassure with a touch or a calm word. Conscious breathing is an invitation, never a compulsion.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Motor difficulty	It suffices to watch his belly rise and fall, or to use a companion's hand.
Visual impairment	Replace “looking into the eyes” with hearing the companion's breath or a gentle touch of the hand.
Hyperactivity / attention	Shorten to a single breath, tied to a game: “blow a feather, slowly.”
Sensory sensitivity (dislikes touch)	No touch at all; it is enough to watch a doll's breathing.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Use a Visual Timer showing the breath's span, reducing auditory stimuli and harsh light.
Social anxiety	Begin breathing alone in a quiet corner, then move gradually to a single companion — no group at first.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the sitting — the screen-box. Lay all devices in a closed box. Do not war upon the screen; offer instead a fairer thing: the presence of a living person.

ii. During the sitting — the shared breath. Do not instruct your child — breathe with him. A child learns not by command but by imitation. Seeing you lay a palm upon your belly and close your eyes, he will follow, unbidden.

iii. After the sitting — the daily breath-moments. Make “the breath-moment” a custom: on waking, before eating, before sleep, on returning from school. One minute is enough.

🌟 Make it measurable. Keep, upon the fridge, a small ledger: “How many breath-moments did we take today?” — a little star for each. At week's end, count the stars together. So the habit turns from a vague feeling into a number the child sees, and grows.

“The screen teaches the child to be there. We teach him to be here.”

Weekly reflection: In what moment did the breath help most?

- The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book One Unit -

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development for tracking a skill's growth — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory, aiding the teacher, and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure works. The full Scale (JPS) holds five dimensions raised cumulatively across the books: body awareness · emotional regulation · social presence · active listening · bodily expression. Book One teaches but two, so it would be developmentally false to measure dimensions not yet taught. This unit therefore measures only what this book taught (8 items), joining the full scale by degrees.

Filled twice — before beginning, and after three weeks. To lessen bias it is filled by two independent raters (teacher and parent), neither seeing the other's answer. The three marks are behaviorally anchored — choose by what you see, not by impression:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Answers or acts at once, body restless; no self-initiated breath or pause.
● sometimes	Pauses or breathes only when the guide raises the “calm-hand” cue; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, lays a hand on his belly and takes a clear breath before he speaks or acts.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). Compare the two raters item by item. Where they agree, record the mark. Where they differ by one step (e.g., ◦ vs ●), record the lower mark and note it for the next observation. Where they differ by two steps (◦ vs •), do not average: the two raters observe one shared session together, then reconcile against the anchors above and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements — a high count signals the anchors need re-reading, not the child re-testing.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
nafas (نَفَس)	the air that comes and goes in your chest	breath shahīq (شَهِيْق)	when you draw the air inward	inhale zafīr (زَفِير)	when you send the air out of your chest	exhale
ḥuḍūr (حُضُور)	to be truly here, in body and heart	presence
mahla (مَهْلَة)	a calm while you take before you act	pause

Output (Arabic): «أَنَا هُنَا — قَبْلَ أَنْ أَتَكَلَّمَ.» — Before your voice comes, your body says you are present.

English Bridge: “I am here before I speak.” — Before your voice comes, your body says you are present.

Questions of Understanding

- What was Noor doing while she lay in the dark of the soil? RECALL
- Why did Noor's chest draw tight when she tried to hurry like the Wind?
INFERENCE
- Show me with your hand how the seed breathes — and where did you feel the breath in your body? SENSORY-MOTOR
- When the Hasty Wind came, did you feel confusion and curiosity at once?
SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Hasty Wind was afraid that no one would hear it. Have you ever felt you must be loud or fast to be seen? What could we say to the Wind to help it feel heard without hurrying? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When do you feel that you are truly “here”? PERSONAL LINK

Before I speak, I breathe; for the calm breath says: I am here.

🌱 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child the rule in three steps: (1) A stop-signal — say within: “Stop; I am a seed.” (2) Take three calm breaths. (3) Say to yourself: “I can grow calm,” then speak. Remind him: so did Noor when the Hasty Wind flustered her — she stopped, breathed, grew calm, then spoke.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE TALE

The drawing. Ask the child to draw his own seed “Noor” breathing beneath the earth. What does his seed feel? In what colour does he draw its breath?

The play. Two children — one the calm “Noor,” one the “Hasty Wind” — then they trade. Who could grow still like Noor?

Audio. The mark opens the tale in a calm voice, with a breath-music beneath.
(The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — the zero point. This book is the zero point of the cumulative arc of “The Art of Expression.” No book comes before it; from it all begins. The breath we learn here becomes, in time, the wellspring of voice, of tone, of silence, of presence. Who masters not this point will labour at what follows.

Looking forward — Book Two (“The Seed’s Voice”) »

“You have learned to say ‘I am here’ with the breath. Now you shall learn that this breath can come forth as a voice — for the voice is a breath that trembles.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs seed → strain → calm → growth, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — conscious breathing is an invitation, never a command.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees are consistent with the arc.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor is “flustered,” not “terrified”; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — a bidirectional memory bridge binds this book to the whole.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — every skill becomes a sensory anchor of the body.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — seed = breath = awakening; the metaphor holds throughout.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Wind learns; it is understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “You are speaking now” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a male sage and a female elder share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 🐼 The approved root (n-f-s) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (phonetic sensation for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🐼 The sub-degree is graduated (asleep→awakening), two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR pre-A1 and ACTFL Novice Low.
- 🐼 The four CASEL criteria are set as observable outcomes.
- 🐼 The two heritage figures are documented (Jabir + Grandmother Ramla), and the Wind marked symbolic, not historical.
- 🐼 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive, closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- 🐼 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor, and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🐼 A caution + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and social anxiety) — zero coercion.
- 🐼 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🐼 The cumulative echo is bidirectional, with an integration map — zero disconnected episode.
- 🐼 The scale measures only the book's two dimensions (8 items), behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — zero measuring burden.
- 🐼 The questions hold a sensory-motor and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- 🐼 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated — the English carries no tashkīl by nature.
- 🐼 Five original plates in the seed palette, each with poetic alt-text for the screen-reader + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- 🐼 WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, a skip-link, a table of contents, and print folios in place.

🗨️ Proactive health caution. This book involves making sounds and touching the throat. Review health conditions: a child with throat sensitivity, hoarseness, or inflammation keeps to whispering without straining the voice. Never force a child with Selective Mutism to make a sound — it is enough for him to touch his own throat, or a vibrating surface (a tapped wooden box), to feel the tremor. Touching another person's throat is only ever done with their permission.

The Heart of the Book

After discovering his breath, the child discovers that this breath can tremble and become a voice. Voice is not loud noise — it is an honest vibration that carries the self into the world. And the smallest true voice is more eloquent than the loudest hollow thunder.

📖 Historical footnote. Al-Khalil ibn Ahmad al-Farahidi was an Arab scholar of the second Hijri century, founder of the science of prosody (‘arūḍ) and of the phonetic study of Arabic; he arranged the letters by their points of articulation, from the throat to the lips. From him we draw here the precise listening to how a sound is born.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

👂 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body, never through analysis. He does not parse letters; he feels the voice being born — the phonetic sensation of ṣ-w-t: the airy hiss of ṣ passing with no tremor, and the humming t and the round w that make the throat quiver. He learns by laying a palm on his throat, not by naming a pattern. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
ṣ – w – t	sawt · aṣwāt · ṣawwata · muṣawwit

👤 How to explain it to the child. “The word sawt (voice) has siblings! When you make a sound you are şawwata-ing, and you are a muşawwit (a sound-maker). All the sounds together we call aşwāt. One family from one father: ş-w-t.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (ş-w-t) is hollow — its middle radical is the weak letter wāw. The wāw is silent in “sawt” and vowelled in the plural “aşwāt.” This is a natural variation of the hollow root, noted for the teacher without burdening the child.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Voice” —

For reading aloud with the child (ages 5–6) · seven minutes · with five original plates in the seed palette

❧ I. NOOR HAS AWAKENED AND LEARNED THE BREATH, BUT HAS NO VOICE YET ❧

Plate I — The breath rises to the throat, but melts into silence: no voice yet.

After Noor learned to breathe, she opened her eyes for the first time. She felt something small stirring in her chest, wanting to come out... but she did not know how.

She tried to say “Good morning” to the rain, but only air came out — with no sound, a faint whisper like a breeze. Noor grew a little sad and said to herself: “Do I even have a voice?”

She laid her palm on her chest — as she had learned last time — and felt the breath fill it. Then she traced it with her palm as it rose: from the chest... upward... to the throat, warm, as if searching for a way out. “My breath rises to here... so what if it trembled?”

II. THE HOLLOW THUNDER ROARS, AND NOOR FEELS HER VOICE IS WORTHLESS

Plate II — “BOOM! Who hears your tiny voice?” — and Noor hid behind a leaf.

Suddenly the Hollow Thunder roared in the sky. Inside, it feared no one would hear it, so it thought shouting was the answer. Its voice was very loud, filling the place:

“I am the loudest voice in the sky! BOOM! Who hears your tiny voice, Noor? The beautiful voice is the loudest, the strongest, the biggest! BOOM!”

Noor hid behind a leaf. Her small voice seemed worthless before that huge roar. And every time she tried to make a sound, she remembered the Thunder and fell silent.

III. AL-KHALIL AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA PLACE THEIR PALMS ON THEIR THROATS AND TEACH NOOR

Plate III — “Touch: does the throat quiver?” — the voiceless sss is still; the voiced zzz trembles.

Beside the soil sat the wise Al-Khalil ibn Ahmad, the man who gathers sounds as others gather pearls. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before.

Al-Khalil said calmly: “Noor, a voice is not a size, but a vibration. Put your hand on your throat — or feel your trunk — and see what happens.”

Grandmother Ramla laid her palm on her throat and said: “Try with me. When I say ssssss... — touch: does my throat quiver?”

“No... it doesn't quiver. This is a sound that does not vibrate the throat (adults call it voiceless) — air passing without a tremble.”

Then Grandmother said: “Now I say: zzzzzz... or I hum mmmmm... touch my throat now.”

“It's quivering! Your throat trembles, Grandmother! This is a sound with a pulse that vibrates the throat (adults call it voiced) — a breath that trembles into a voice!”

🐦 IV. NOOR TOUCHES HER THROAT AND FEELS THE TREMOR FOR THE FIRST TIME 🐦

Plate IV — Beneath her small palm, a warm tremor: her own voice, at last.

Noor laid her small palm on her throat. She took a breath — as she had learned last time — then made it tremble: “mmmmm...”

And suddenly... she felt the tremor beneath her palm! A small, warm vibration. Her voice! Her very own — not the Thunder's, not anyone else's. Small, yes, but real, and hers alone. And so Noor made a sound for the first time — she became a little sound-maker, her breath trembling into a voice.

❧ V. NOOR RELEASES HER FIRST VOICE, AND THE THUNDER QUIETS TO LISTEN ❧

Plate V — A small, honest voice; and the Hollow Thunder stilled itself to listen.

Noor said, in a small, trembling but clear voice: “Good morning.” It was the first real voice of her life.

And something wondrous happened: the Hollow Thunder stopped roaring... and listened. At first it did not understand why it had stopped. Noor's voice was too small to be heard, and yet... it heard it. It asked itself, puzzled: “Why did I listen to a voice so small? I, who fill the sky with roaring!”

It listened again... and discovered the secret for itself: “Ah... her voice has something in it — a meaning, a light. But my roar, however loud... is empty. I shouted because I feared no one would hear me. But a voice is not heard by its loudness, rather by what it carries.” And for the first time, the Thunder lowered its roar — not from shame, but because it had understood.

And the Thunder learned — from itself, not from anyone — that the true voice is not the loudest, but the one that carries a heart.

👉 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Place your palm on your throat. Say: mmmm... Do you feel the tremor? That is your voice waking up — your voice, yours.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

For a child of four — short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor had learned to breathe. But when she wanted to speak, air came out with no sound.

The Thunder roared loudly: “BOOM! Your voice is small, it can't be heard!” So Noor fell silent.

Grandmother Ramla said: “Put your hand on your throat, and say: mmmm.” Noor did... and felt the tremor!

Noor said in a small, true voice: “Good morning!” The Thunder listened, and learned that a small, honest voice is more beautiful.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	“My voice is mine” — the child says it with his palm on his throat	Ownership of, and confidence in, the voice
Bodily movement	Palm on throat + saying “ssss” (voiceless) then “mmmm” (voiced)	Telling vibration by touch
Relational warmth	Places his palm on his own throat or on a shared vibrating surface; never touches another's throat except with permission	Safe shared sound
Sensory alternative	Places his hand on a tapped wooden box to feel the vibration	Perceiving vibration without voice
English bridge	“My voice is mine.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. An awakening seed (beginning) — makes a simple sound with a reminder. ← An awakening seed (mastery) — touches his throat and tells for himself the sound that vibrates it (zzz) from the one that does not (sss). This paves the way to Book Three (the Gaze).

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR pre-A1 / ACTFL Novice Low).
The child can make a small honest voiced sound — hand on the throat — to send another the message “I am here, and this is my voice,” choosing truth over loudness, even without full words.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Awareness)

- Names his voice as “his” and expresses pride in it.
- Pauses before raising his voice, realizing the loud is not the more beautiful.

- Tells, by touching his throat, the sound that vibrates it from the one that does not.
- Shows readiness to repeat making a sound and asks for it himself.

The Four Inner Senses of the Voice

The voice is felt before it is heard. TrT awakens the child's interoception — the inner senses by which the body knows its own sound. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN THE VOICE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The tremor (interoception)	The small quiver under the palm when the sound is voiced	“Where under your hand does the buzz live?”
Warmth	The warm breath turning into a warm sound at the throat	“Is your ‘mmm’ warm inside your throat?”
Weight (soft vs. strong)	The difference between a whisper's lightness and a hum's fullness	“Make it as light as a feather, then as full as a bee.”
Balance	Steadying a sound so it is neither a shout nor a vanishing breath	“Hold your voice level, like carrying water without spilling.”

 Why this matters. A child who can feel the tremor, warmth, weight, and balance of his own voice owns it from the inside — and will never mistake loudness for truth.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👂 Safe-stop protocol. If the child's voice is strained or his throat is uncomfortable, stop at once and return to whispering or comfortable silence. Voice is an invitation, never an obligation — and never breath-holding or shouting.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Hearing impairment	Focus entirely on tactile vibration : palm on the throat or on a vibrating instrument — the lesson is originally sensory, not auditory.
Selective Mutism	No sound is ever required; he touches his own throat or a tapped box to feel the vibration, and that suffices without pressure.
Hoarseness / throat sensitivity	Keeps to whispering (voiceless) only; voiced sounds wait until the throat is rested.
Hyperactivity / attention	Tie it to a game: “make the bee buzz mmmm” for a short spell.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Use a visual timer, reduce sudden sounds; the Thunder scene may be skipped if it distresses him.
Social anxiety	Makes his sound alone first, then with a single companion, before any group.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box, then listening. First place all devices in a closed box, as in Book One; a true voice cannot be discovered amid screen-noise. Then sit a moment in silence and listen together for the smallest sound in the room (a clock, a breath, a bird), to ready the child's ear to prize small sounds.

ii. During the session — the shared vibration. Place the child's palm on your throat as you hum, then his palm on his own throat. The sensory comparison is the lesson. Do not correct the “beauty” of his voice — celebrate merely its existence.

iii. After the session — the voiced/voiceless game. Through the day, play: “Does this sound vibrate the throat or not?” (zzz voiced, sss voiceless, fff voiceless, mmm voiced).

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many new sounds did our child discover today?” — a star for each voiced sound he tells apart himself. Count the stars at week's end.

“The Thunder teaches the child to be loud. We teach him to be honest.”

Weekly reflection: When did the child's small voice carry the most meaning?

- The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Two Unit -

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The full Scale (JPS) has five dimensions raised cumulatively. Book One measured body awareness and the dawn of presence. This book adds a new dimension — vocal expression — and briefly reviews the prior one. Thus the scale grows with the child.

Filled twice — before beginning, and after three weeks — by two independent raters. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Falls silent or only whispers air; does not link breath to a voiced sound.
● sometimes	Makes a voiced sound only when the guide cues it; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, lays a hand on his throat and makes a clear voiced sound, and tells it from a voiceless one.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). Compare the two raters item by item. Where they agree, record the mark. Where they differ by one step, record the lower and note it. Where they differ by two steps (◦ vs •), do not average: the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

The New Dimension — Vocal Expression

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	●	•	NOTE
Makes a conscious voiced sound when asked	◦	●	•
Touches his throat and tells the pulsed sound from the pulseless	◦	●	•
Expresses that his voice is “his,” with confidence	◦	●	•
Is not distressed by his small voice before loud voices	◦	●	•

👤 Quick review of the prior dimension. A single observation suffices: does the child still link breath to voice (takes a breath, then makes a sound)? We do not repeat a full table, so as not to burden the rater.

Pre-measurement: _____ Post-measurement: _____ · Two-step disagreements this round: _____

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis; its anchored readings are gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
sawt (صَوْتُ)	the breath when it trembles so we hear it	voice / sound majhūr (مَجْهُور)	a sound that makes the throat tremble (e.g., z, m)	voiced mahmūs (مَهْمُوس)	a sound that passes with no tremble (e.g., s, f)	voiceless ihtizāz (اهْتِزَاز)	a small tremble you feel under your palm	vibration muṣawwīt (مُصَوِّت)	one who makes a sound	a sound-maker

Output (Arabic): «صَوْتِي لِي — وَلَوْ كَانَ صَغِيرًا.» — Your voice belongs to you; its worth is in its truth, not its loudness.

English Bridge: “My voice is mine — even if it is small.” — Your voice belongs to you; its worth is in its truth, not its loudness.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did only air come out, with no sound, when Noor first tried to speak?

RECALL

- Why did the Hollow Thunder listen to Noor's small voice in the end?

INFERENCE

- Place your palm on your throat and make a sound that vibrates it, then one that does not — which is the voiced one?

SENSORY-MOTOR

- Have you ever felt both shy and proud when you spoke up softly?

SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS

- The Hollow Thunder was afraid no one would hear it, so it shouted. Have you ever felt you had to be loud to be noticed? What could we say to the Thunder to help it feel heard without shouting?

EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER

- When is your small voice more beautiful than a loud one?

PERSONAL LINK

My voice is an honest tremor, not loud noise; and the smallest voice with my heart in it is more eloquent than a hollow thunder.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child the rule in three steps: (1) Place your palm on your throat. (2) Take a breath, then let it tremble into a clear sound. (3) Say what you want with truth, not loudness. The Thunder listened to Noor because her voice carried meaning — not because it was loud.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE VOICES

The drawing. Ask the child to draw “his voice”: if your voice had a colour and a shape, how would it look? Waves? Stars? Let him draw his own vibration.

The play. Two children: one the loud, empty “Hollow Thunder,” the other “Noor” with her small, honest voice — then they trade. Who made his voice carry meaning?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, with sound-examples of the voiced and voiceless. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book One (“The Seed's Breath”). “Remember how you laid your palm on your chest and said I am here? Now move your palm from your chest to your throat and say: mmm — do you feel the tremor? It is the same breath you learned, but it travelled upward and trembled into a voice. The voice is the child of the breath.”

Looking forward — Book Three (“The Seed's Gaze”) »

“You have a breath, and now a voice. But before you speak with anyone, you must first see them. In the next book you will learn the language of the eyes — how to look before you utter.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs silence → discouragement → discovery → true voice, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — making a sound is an invitation; the mute child is never pressed.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees are consistent with the arc.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels “worthless,” then owns her voice; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — a bidirectional bridge binds this book to One and Three.
- Zero passive activity — every skill becomes a throat-touch, a felt tremor.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — breath → tremor → voice; the metaphor holds throughout.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Thunder learns to listen; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “a voice is a vibration, not a size” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male scholar (Al-Khalil) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (ṣ-w-t) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (throat-vibration for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR pre-A1 and ACTFL Novice Low.
- The four CASEL criteria are set as observable outcomes.
- The two figures are documented (Al-Khalil al-Farahidi + Grandmother Ramla), and the Thunder marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of being unheard), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (throat-touch), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A health caution + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with hearing impairment and selective mutism) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional, with an integration map — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds one new dimension (vocal expression), behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol, and reviews the prior — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory-motor and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the seed palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, and front & back covers in place.

The Seed's Voice

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and return them to the body, the breath, and the living voice.

Having learned to breathe, little Noor discovers that her breath can tremble into a voice. When the Hollow Thunder mocks her small sound, a wise scholar and a grandmother teach her — by a palm laid on the throat — that a voice is not a size but a vibration, and that the smallest honest voice is more eloquent than the loudest empty roar. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen, no drill — only the child, the breath, and the first true word.

“My voice is mine — even if it is small.”

The Juthur system • The Art of Expression — the twin skills of speaking and dialogue in twenty books. This book closes the journey of the Seed: after the breath and the voice, Noor learns to see the one she addresses — and her shell splits open, ready to become a bud — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — the cord binding the twenty books is PRESENCE. The Breath was presence of the self; the Voice, presence made audible. THIS BOOK IS PRESENCE TURNED TOWARD THE OTHER — THE GAZE, THE FIRST SILENT BRIDGE BETWEEN TWO SELVES, and the close of the Seed. It reaches back to breath and voice, and forward to true listening.

Integration Map — the gaze completes the Seed and opens the way to the bud.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👁️ Proactive educational caution. This book trains looking into the eyes. For some children (especially on the autism spectrum) direct eye contact can be distressing. Never force a child to look into the eyes — a look toward the forehead or the nose suffices. The aim is to turn toward the other, not to stare.

🌱 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale is the close of the Seed's journey: after breath and voice, Noor learns to see the one she addresses, so her shell splits and she is ready to become a bud.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Seed — a cracking seed (the highest degree, the close of the Seed stage)
AGE BAND	4–6 years · overlap to 7 for the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	n-ẓ-r (Naẓar, sight): to see the other before you address him
ROOT FAMILY	naẓar · naẓra · nāẓir · manẓar · minẓār (all from n-ẓ-r)
STATION (MAHATTA)	The Gaze — the first bridge between two selves before speech
SENSORY ANCHOR	Looking into the eyes for a moment (about three seconds) and seeing the small reflection in them
METAPHOR	The seed's shell splits, and it sees the light and the world for the first time
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Hassan ibn Thabit (the poet of insight) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor the seed (the same — she cracks, readying for the bud)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Wandering Mist — symbolic (non-historical), embodying distraction and not seeing the other; it learns to see
MASTERY CRITERION	Cracking: turns toward the one who addresses him and looks at him a moment before he speaks

The Heart of the Book

After the breath and the voice comes the first real bridge toward the other: the gaze. To see the one you address before you speak — to see yourself reflected in his eye, and to be seen. This is the first silent dialogue; and by it the seed's shell splits, and it is ready to grow.

📖 Historical footnote. Hassan ibn Thabit al-Ansari (d. 54 AH) was the poet of the Prophet ﷺ, among the most famed poets of Madinah. From his life — not the mere letters of his name — we draw the value of insight (baṣīra): to see the person and the meaning deeply before you speak, for the honest word begins with an honest gaze.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body's eyes, never through analysis. He does not parse letters; he looks — and discovers the small living reflection of himself in another's eye. The anchor is a felt, relational seeing. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
n – ṣ – r	naẓar · naẓra · nāẓir · manẓar · minẓār

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word naẓar (looking) has siblings! A quick look is a naẓra; one who looks is a nāẓir; a beautiful sight is a manẓar; and the tool that sees the far is a minẓār (a telescope). One family from one father: n-ṣ-r.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (n-z-r) is sound (no weak letter). From it come both seeing with the eye (naẓar) and reflecting with the mind (naẓara fī l-amr, to consider a matter) — two meanings from one origin.

The Full Telling: “Noor's Gaze”

For reading aloud with the child (ages 5–6) · seven minutes · with five original plates in the seed palette

❧ I. NOOR BREATHES AND HAS A VOICE, BUT SHE SPEAKS WITH HER EYES FAR AWAY ❧

Plate I — She spoke, but her eyes looked away, and her words drifted off unheard.

Noor had learned to breathe, and to make her breath a voice. She spoke a great deal now! But she spoke with her eyes cast to the ground, or to some far place — never at the one she was speaking to.

She said much to the rain, but she did not look at it. And she felt her words getting lost in the air, never arriving. And all the while, her little shell had begun to crack, just a little...

❧ II. THE WANDERING MIST DRIFTS, SEEING NO ONE, AND NOOR COPIES IT ❧

Plate II — The Mist drifted everywhere and saw no one; behind a hazy pane, Noor felt alone.

That day the Wandering Mist drifted by. It swept along everywhere, its eyes vacant, looking at no one, speaking to everyone and to no one at once. It said to Noor in a foggy voice:

“Looking is a waste of time, Noor! Just talk, and keep your eyes to yourself. I look at no one, and I am everywhere!”

Noor tried the Mist's way: she talked and talked without looking. But her words kept scattering, reaching no one's heart. She felt a strange loneliness, as if she were speaking from behind a pane of misty glass.

III. HASSAN AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA TEACH NOOR THE SECRET OF THE GAZE, AND A DEWDROP REFLECTS

Plate III — “Look at me, three seconds. What do you see?” — and Noor saw her own small self reflected.

Beside the soil sat the poet Hassan ibn Thabit, the man who sees the meaning before he says it. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before.

Grandmother Ramla said tenderly: “Noor, speech without a gaze is like rain without earth — it falls and grows nothing. Look at me now, into my eyes, just three seconds. What do you see?”

Noor looked shyly into Grandmother's eyes... then her own eyes widened in wonder: “I see... I see my own small self in your eyes, Grandmother! A tiny picture of me lives there!”

Grandmother smiled: “Some children see their picture, some see the colour of the eye or its shine — and all of it is beautiful. What matters is not what you see, but that you see your friend, and that he feels you see him.”

Hassan smiled and said: “That is the secret, Noor. When you look into the eye of the one you speak to, you see yourself in him, and he sees himself in you. You become, together. This is the first dialogue — before any word.”

🌙 IV. NOOR LIFTS HER EYES AND LOOKS CLEARLY, AND LIGHT ENTERS THROUGH HER CRACKING SHELL 🌙

Plate IV — She lifted her eyes and looked; the shell split, and the light poured in.

Noor lifted her eyes — those eyes that had looked far away — and looked straight ahead. And when she looked, a wondrous thing happened: her shell split further, and the light came in through the crack. She began to see more clearly, and to feel that she was... larger.

For the first time, Noor was no longer alone behind the glass. Between her and the world there was now a bridge — a bridge made of a gaze.

❧ V. NOOR LOOKS AND SPEAKS, AND HER WORDS ARRIVE; THE MIST CLEARS AND SEES FOR THE FIRST TIME ❧

Plate V — “I see you,” — and the word arrived; the Mist parted and, at last, saw.

Noor looked at the rain, three seconds, then said in the voice she had learned: “I see you.” And this time, her word arrived! — because it came out of an honest gaze.

And the wonder happened: the Wandering Mist stopped drifting for a moment... and tried. And for the first time, it looked — truly looked at Noor, and saw her. It whispered in wonder: “I... I was everywhere, but I never saw anyone at all. Now I see you... and I see that I was lonely.” And the Mist began to learn — not all at once, but little by little — that whoever does not look neither sees nor is seen; and it knew it would need time and practice, as Noor had once needed.

Then Noor looked at her split shell, and knew that the journey of the Seed was complete, and that she was ready to become a bud.

🐣 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Look at the one beside you, three seconds. Did you see your small picture in his eye? Now — speak.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

For a child of four — short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor had learned the breath and the voice. But she spoke with her eyes far away, so her words did not arrive.

The Wandering Mist passed and said, “Look at no one!” So Noor copied it, and felt lonely.

Grandmother Ramla said, “Look into my eyes, three seconds.” Noor looked... and saw her own small picture in the eye!

Noor looked at the rain and said, “I see you!” Her word arrived, and the Mist cleared and saw. And Noor's shell split — she was ready to become a bud.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I see you, and so I speak to you" — he looks into the eyes, then begins his words	Binding the gaze to the start of speech
Bodily movement	Looks into the speaker's eyes about three seconds and sees his small reflection in them	Embodying eye contact
Relational warmth	Trades a look and a smile with his companion before talking	The gaze opens the door of affection
Sensory alternative	The mirror game: he studies his own eyes in a mirror, then his companion's eyes	Fixing the gaze through the senses
English bridge	"I see you before I speak."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A cracking seed (beginning) — looks toward the other a moment with a reminder. ← A cracking seed (mastery) — turns toward the one he addresses and looks at him before he speaks, unprompted (a reassured look, not a fixed stare). With this the Seed stage is complete, and he is ready for the Bud.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR pre-A1 / ACTFL Novice Low).

The child can turn toward a partner and hold a brief, warm gaze to open a conversation — sending the message "I see you, I am with you" — before, and as the ground of, his first words.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Awareness & the seed of Social Awareness)

- Looks toward the one he addresses before he begins to speak.

- Describes that he “saw” the other (e.g., I saw his eyes, I saw his smile).
- Realizes that the gaze is a two-way exchange (he sees me and I see him).
- Turns toward the other and looks, without turning his face away or covering his eyes.

The Four Inner Senses of the Gaze

The gaze, too, is felt before it is understood. TrT awakens the child's interoception of connection. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN THE GAZE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The turning (orienting)	The gentle turn of the whole self toward another	“Turn your face and your heart toward your friend.”
The reflection (being seen)	Seeing his own small self living in another's eye — and being seen back	“Can you find your tiny picture in your friend's eye?”
Warmth	The soft warmth of a met, welcomed gaze	“Does a kind look feel warm, like sunlight?”
Balance (glance, not stare)	A look that is neither a hard stare nor an escape	“Look softly, then let your eyes rest — a look, not a stare.”

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the turning, the reflection, the warmth, and the balance of a gaze owns the first tool of every dialogue — to be present with another, not merely near.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👤 Safe-stop protocol. If the child feels uneasy or tense from direct looking, stop at once. Looking into the eyes is an invitation, not an obligation, and a long stare is not the goal — turning toward the other with affection is.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Eye contact is never imposed; a look toward the forehead, nose, or shoulder suffices. Turning toward the other is the aim, not staring into the eyes.
Visual impairment	Replace looking with turning the face toward the source of the voice, or a gentle touch on the hand that says: I am attending to you.
Social anxiety	Begin with a doll or a picture, then one familiar companion, before any group. Start with a fleeting glance (one second), then two, then three — each look is enough.
Hyperactivity / attention	Tie the gaze to a fun game: how many colours can you see in your friend's eye? For a short spell.
Sensory sensitivity	No long staring; a fleeting glance suffices and grows gradually with the child's comfort.
Cultural difference	In some cultures direct eye contact with elders is impolite. This is respected; a look between peers, or a courteous turning, suffices.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the Gaze-Box. This week, give the device box a new name: the Gaze-Box! The screen pulls the gaze away from faces and busies the child's eyes from the eyes of those who love him. Put the devices in, and return the child's gaze to the eyes.

ii. During the session — the mirror in the eye. Sit before the child and say: look into my eye, can you see your small self there? Most children are amazed at the reflection. Make the gaze a warm game, never a duty.

iii. After the session — three seconds before speaking. Train the habit gently: before the child asks for something, he looks into the eyes three seconds, then speaks. Notice how the arrival of his words changes.

🏆 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: how many times did our child look into the eyes before speaking today? A star for each time he does it himself. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches the child to look at glass. We teach him to look at a human being.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Three Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The two prior books measured body awareness and vocal expression. This book adds a new dimension — the seed of social awareness (the gaze) — and reviews what came before. With it, the three dimensions of the Seed stage are complete.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible (otherwise one direct observer). The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Speaks with eyes cast away; does not turn toward the one he addresses.
◐ sometimes	Looks toward the other only when reminded; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, turns toward the one he addresses and looks a warm moment before he speaks.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). Compare the two raters item by item. On agreement, record the mark. On a one-step difference, record the lower and note it. On a two-step difference (◦ vs •), do not average: the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

The New Dimension — The Seed of Social Awareness (the Gaze)

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	◐	•	NOTE
Looks toward the one he addresses before speaking	◦	◐	•
Turns toward the one he addresses and looks, unprompted	◦	◐	•
Describes that he saw the other's eyes or smile	◦	◐	•
Realizes the other sees him too (the gaze is mutual)	◦	◐	•

👤 Close-of-Seed review. As this book closes the stage, one integrative observation suffices: has the child come to take a breath, then make a voice, then look — in sequence and with growing confidence? We do not repeat the earlier tables, so as not to burden the rater.

Pre-measurement: _____ Post-measurement: _____ · Two-step disagreements this round: _____

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis; with this book the three Seed-stage dimensions are complete, gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
naẓra (نَظْرَة)	to look with your eyes at a thing or a person	a look / glance nāẓir (نَاطِر)	one who looks and beholds	one who looks manẓar (مَنْظَر)	a place or a beautiful sight you look upon	a view / sight in 'ikās (اِنْعِكَاس)	your small picture seen in an eye, water, or mirror	reflection
baṣīra (بَصِيرَة)	to see with your heart and mind, not only your eye	insight

Output (Arabic): «أَرَاكَ — قَبْلَ أَنْ أَتَكَلَّمَ.» — Before you say a word, look at the one you address; the gaze is the start of the conversation.

English Bridge: “I see you before I speak.” — Before you say a word, look at the one you address; the gaze is the start of the conversation.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's words get lost at first and never arrive? RECALL
- Why did the Wandering Mist feel lonely, though it was everywhere?
INFERENCE
- Look into the eyes of the one beside you for three seconds — what did you see in them? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt shy and curious at the same time when you looked into someone's eyes? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Wandering Mist looked at no one, and so felt alone. Have you ever felt unseen? What could help the Mist learn to see others — gently, a little at a time? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When do you feel your words have truly “arrived” at the other?
PERSONAL LINK

Before I speak, I look; for an honest gaze is the first bridge between me and you.

🏆 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child the rule: “Before you ask for something or say something important, look into the eyes first, then speak.” Noor's words arrived only when a gaze went before them.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO SEE THE GAZE-BRIDGE

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a large eye, and in its centre a small picture of the person he loves to see. Who lives in your eye?

The play. Two children (or a child with a doll or a mirror): one is the Wandering Mist who speaks without looking, the other asks him to look. Then they trade. How does the feeling change when one truly looks at the other?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and shows how a gaze becomes a bridge between two people. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — the Seed's journey completes. “First you learned to breathe (I am here), then to make your breath a voice (my voice is mine), and now to look before you speak (I see you). These are the three steps of the Seed: a breath, a voice, a gaze — and by them your shell has split.”

Looking forward — Book Four (“The Bud's Listening”) »

“Your shell has split, and you have become a bud! You now carry a breath, a voice, and a gaze. In the coming stage — the Bud — you will learn the greatest gift you can give a person: to truly listen to him.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs unseen words → loneliness → the mirrored gaze → arrival, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — looking into the eyes is an invitation; no child is forced to stare.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Seed arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels a “strange loneliness,” not terror; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge sums the whole Seed journey and opens the Bud.
- Zero passive activity — every skill becomes a felt gaze and a seen reflection.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — breath → voice → gaze → the splitting shell; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Mist learns to see, over time; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “speech without a gaze grows nothing” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male poet (Hassan) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (n-z-r) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the felt gaze and reflection for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Seed arc (breath→voice→gaze), with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR pre-A1 and ACTFL Novice Low.
- The four CASEL criteria are set as observable outcomes, with an age-appropriate seed of social awareness.
- The two figures are documented (Hassan ibn Thabit + Grandmother Ramla), and the Mist marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (drifting, unseen), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the gaze, the reflection), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (eye-contact sensitivity) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and cultural difference) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it sums the whole Seed and opens the Bud — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds the seed of social awareness, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol, completing the three Seed dimensions — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the seed palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, and front & back covers in place.

The Seed's Gaze

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and return them to the body, the breath, the voice, and the living gaze.

Little Noor can breathe and speak now — but her words keep getting lost, because her eyes look away. When the Wandering Mist tells her to look at no one, a beloved poet and a grandmother teach her — by a gaze of three seconds — to find her own small reflection in a friend's eye. And when at last she looks and says “I see you,” her word arrives, the Mist clears, and her shell splits open: the Seed is ready to become a Bud. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen, no drill — only two selves, and the first bridge of a gaze.

The Juthur system • The Art of Expression — the twin skills of speaking and dialogue in twenty books. Noor has become a bud. Carrying a breath, a voice, and a gaze, she now begins the first true skill of dialogue: to listen — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT); (نظرية القراءة الملموسة; Amer 2024), a language lived through the body and presence.

THE SINGLE THREAD — the cord binding the twenty books is PRESENCE. In the Seed, presence turned inward and toward the eye: breath, voice, gaze. NOW, IN THE BUD, PRESENCE TURNS FULLY TOWARD THE OTHER: TO LISTEN — TO RECEIVE A WHOLE SELF BEFORE ANSWERING IT. The gaze opened the eyes to the other; listening opens the heart. It reaches back to the gaze and forward to the question.

Integration Map — listening is the first full turning toward the other; the fourth station of presence.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🚫 Proactive caution. This book trains attentive listening and settled sitting. A child with hyperactivity may find long stillness hard — accept a short listening (two seconds), then increase gradually, and do not read movement as a failure to listen.

👶 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues directly: Noor has become a bud, carrying breath, voice, and gaze — and now she learns to listen.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Bud — a closed bud (the opening of the Bud stage)
AGE BAND	7–9 years · flexing from 6 to 10 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	s-m-‘ (Sam‘, hearing): to listen with the heart, not the ear alone
ROOT FAMILY	sam‘ · sāmi‘ · masmū‘ · sammā‘a · istama‘a (all from s-m-‘)
STATION (MAHATTA)	Listening — receiving a whole self before answering
SENSORY ANCHOR	Sitting with a straight back and listening until the speaker finishes, before replying
METAPHOR	The closed bud listens to the light and the water in silence before it opens
THE TWO INSPIRING FIGURES	Judge Ibn Jama'a (author of the manners of listener and speaker) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the bud — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Garbled Echo — symbolic (non-historical), embodying interruption and replying before understanding; it learns to listen
MASTERY CRITERION	A closed bud: sits upright and listens until the speaker finishes, then replies, and paraphrases what he heard
CASEL DOMAIN	Social Awareness

The Heart of the Book

Having learned breath, voice, and gaze, and having become a bud, Noor begins the first skill of real communication: listening. Speech is half the conversation; its lovelier half is to listen. Whoever does not listen speaks much and understands nothing.

📖 Historical footnote. Badr al-Din Ibn Jama'a (d. 733 AH) was a great judge and scholar who composed Tadhkirat al-Sami' wa'l-Mutakallim fi Adab al-'Ālim wa'l-Muta'allim — “The Memorandum of Listener and Speaker” — giving the manners of listening their own foundations. From him, fine listening became the key to knowledge.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of listening, never through analysis. He does not parse letters; he listens — a straight back, a face turned to the speaker, a held silence until the end. The anchor is a felt act of receiving. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

s – m – ‘	sam‘ · sāmi‘ · masmū‘ · sammā‘a · istama‘a

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word sam‘ (hearing) has siblings! One who listens well is a sāmi‘; words that arrived are masmū‘; the tool a doctor hears with is a sammā‘a (a stethoscope); and when you listen with all of you, you say istama‘ tu. One family from one father: s-m-‘.”

👂 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (s-m-‘) is sound. From it come sam‘ (perceiving sound with the ear) and istimā‘ (listening with intent and attention) — a gentle difference worth noting: we hear much, but we listen little.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Listening” —

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the bud palette

❧ I. NOOR HAS BECOME A BUD; SHE TALKS A GREAT DEAL AND LISTENS TO NO ONE ❧

Plate I — She spoke and spoke; the rain's important words drifted past, unheard.

Noor had become a lovely green bud! And with her was all she had learned: a breath, a voice, and a gaze. She grew to love talking very much — she talked and talked; but whenever anyone else spoke, she was busy preparing her reply and did not listen.

The rain told her something important, but she did not listen — she was busy with what she herself would say. So she did not understand what the rain wanted, and answered with a reply that had no place.

II. THE GARBLED ECHO ANSWERS BEFORE IT HEARS, AND CHAOS SPREADS

Plate II — The Echo replied to half of what it heard, and the words clashed and tangled.

That day the Garbled Echo drifted by. It answered everything before hearing it whole, so its words got mixed and clashed. Someone asked it, “Have you eaten?” and it answered before hearing the end of the question: “Yes, the weather is nice!” — because it replied to half of what it heard.

“Listening is slow, Noor! Reply fast like me, don't wait for anyone to finish. The quickest to answer is the cleverest!”

Noor tried the Echo's way: she began replying before anyone finished. But her replies fell out of place, and everyone laughed, and she was sad. No one understood her — because she had understood no one.

III. JUDGE IBN JAMA'A AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA LISTEN TO NOOR WITH FULL ATTENTION

Plate III — They listened, calm and unbroken, until she finished — and her words arrived.

Beside the soil sat the judge Ibn Jama'a, who wrote for people the manners of listener and speaker, and taught how a learner listens with courtesy in order to learn. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before.

Noor spoke, and Ibn Jama'a and Grandmother listened to her calmly, without interrupting, until she finished. And for the first time, Noor felt that her words... arrived.

Then Ibn Jama'a said gently: “Noor, do you know why your words arrived just now? Because we listened to you. This is how knowledge is built: by the manners of listening! Whoever listens well learns more. Try: sit with a straight back, look at me, and listen until I finish before you reply.”

❧ IV. NOOR SITS UPRIGHT AND LISTENS, AND A LEAF OPENS FROM HER LIKE AN EAR ❧

Plate IV — A leaf opened like an ear, and she heard what lay behind the words.

Noor sat with a straight back, fixed her eyes on the face of the one speaking to her — as she had learned in the gaze — and listened calmly until he finished. And a lovely thing happened: a small leaf unfurled from her, like an ear that receives the world.

And for the first time, Noor heard what she had never heard before: she heard what lay behind the words. She heard the rain saying it was tired, and the wind saying it was lonely. Listening opened for her a door into the hearts of others.

❧ V. NOOR ANSWERS BEAUTIFULLY AFTER LISTENING, AND THE ECHO QUIETS AND LEARNS ❧

Plate V — A fitting answer, born of listening; and the Echo's tangled lines lay ordered at last.

After Noor had listened well, she spoke. And her answer this time was lovely and fitting, because she had understood first. She said, in the voice she had learned and with an honest gaze: “I listen to you, so I understand.”

And the wonder happened: the Garbled Echo stopped... and listened, for the first time. And when it listened, its words became clear and ordered. It whispered in wonder: “I used to reply fast, so I neither understood nor was understood. Now I have listened... and I understand.”

And the Echo learned that a lovely reply begins with lovely listening. From that day, Noor the bud listened before she spoke — and everyone around her loved her.

🕒 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Sit with a straight back, and listen to any sound around you for five seconds. What did you hear that you never noticed before?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor became a bud, and loved talking very much, but she listened to no one.

The Garbled Echo passed, replying before it heard; Noor copied it, and no one understood her.

Judge Ibn Jama'a said: “Sit with a straight back, and listen until I finish before you reply.”

Noor listened... and heard what lay behind the words! Then she said, “I listen to you, so I understand.” And the Echo listened, and learned.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I listen to you, so I understand what you did not say"	Binding listening to understanding
Bodily movement	Sits upright, looks at the speaker, and listens until he finishes before replying	Embodying attentive listening
Relational warmth	Paraphrases what he heard ("I heard that you...") so the speaker feels understood	Listening tells the other his worth
Sensory alternative	Counts silently to five after the speaker stops, before he replies	Fixing unhurried patience through the senses
English bridge	"I listen to you, so I understand."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A closed bud (beginning) — listens a moment before replying, with a reminder. ← A closed bud (mastery) — sits with a straight back, listens until the speaker finishes, then replies unprompted, and paraphrases what he heard. (The child may count silently to five if he likes — a gentle suggestion, not a rule.)

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A1 / ACTFL Novice Mid). The child can listen to a partner to the end, then show he understood by briefly restating what he heard — "I heard that you..." — before he gives his own reply.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Social Awareness)

- Listens without interrupting the speaker until he finishes.
- Waits his turn to speak, without haste.
- Paraphrases what he heard before he answers ("I heard that you...").

- Sits with a straight back, his face toward the speaker.

The Four Inner Senses of Listening

Listening, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of attention. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN LISTENING	A GUIDING WHISPER
Stillness (settling)	The quiet of a body that has grown still to receive	"Let your body grow calm, like a bud in the rain."
The waiting (the pause)	The held breath of five seconds before a reply	"Wait, and count softly to five before you answer."
Hearing behind words	Sensing the feeling beneath what is said	"What did his voice feel, under the words?"
The upright body	The alert steadiness of a straight back turned to the speaker	"Sit tall and turned toward your friend, like an open ear."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the stillness, the waiting, the meaning beneath words, and the upright turning owns the door to every heart — and answers only after he has truly received.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👉 Safe-stop protocol. If the child feels bored or unable to sit, stop and shorten the listening time. Listening is an invitation, not a punishment, and long sitting is not the goal — attending to the other with affection is.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Hyperactivity / attention	A quiet movement (a stress ball) is allowed while listening; shorten to two seconds and increase gradually.
Hearing impairment	Rely on watching the speaker's face, lip-reading, and gesture; here listening is visual, not only auditory.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Show what is expected with a picture or a schedule, reduce distractions, and accept listening without direct eye contact.
Social anxiety	Begin listening in a familiar pair before a group, without demanding an immediate reply.
Language-learning difficulty	Simplify the paraphrase sentence; accept expression in a single word or a gesture.
Cultural difference	Respect differing norms of listening; some cultures listen in full silence, some with encouraging echoes.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. The screen speaks and does not listen; and we teach the child what the screen cannot: to listen to a human being.

ii. During the session — the game of the lovely echo. After one of you speaks, the child repeats what he heard: “I heard that you...”. This turns listening from passive silence into active understanding.

iii. After the session — five golden seconds. Train the habit: after the speaker stops, we wait five seconds before replying. Notice how speech grows calmer and deeper.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child listen to the end without interrupting?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches the child to reply fast. We teach him to listen deeply.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Four Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Seed stage completed the dimensions of body, voice, and gaze. This book — the opening of the Bud — adds the first full social dimension: active listening. (The gaze at the close of the Seed was a preparation and seed of this awareness; here its full dimension begins.)

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible (otherwise one direct observer). The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Interrupts, or prepares his reply while the other speaks; does not receive the whole.
◐ sometimes	Listens to the end only when reminded; paraphrases only if prompted.
• often	Unprompted, sits upright, listens to the end, and restates what he heard before replying.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). Compare item by item. On agreement, record it. On a one-step difference, record the lower and note it. On a two-step difference (◦ vs •), do not average: the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
saṁ ‘ (سَمِعَ)	to attend with your ear and your heart	hearing
sāmi ‘ (سَامِع)	one who listens with care	listener
masmū ‘ (مَسْمُوع)	speech that arrived and was understood	heard inṣāt (إِنْصَات)	to fall silent and listen with all of you	attentive listening
mustami ‘ (مُسْتَمِع)	one who listens with intent and attention	attentive listener

Output (Arabic): «أُنْصِتْ إِلَيْكَ، فَافْهَمْ مَا لَمْ تَقُلْ.» — Before I answer, I truly listen — even to what you did not say.

English Bridge: “I listen to you, so I understand.” — Before I answer, I truly listen — even to what you did not say.

Questions of Understanding

- What did the closed bud do in silence before it opened? RECALL
- Why did the Garbled Echo not understand what was said to it? INFERENCE
- Listen to a sound around you for five seconds — what did you hear that you never noticed before? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt eager to reply and unsure at once, before someone finished speaking? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Echo replied fast because it feared being slow. Have you ever rushed to answer to seem clever? What could help the Echo feel calm enough to listen first? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did you feel someone truly listened to you? How did it feel? PERSONAL LINK

Before I answer, I listen; for whoever listens well, answers beautifully.

🧠 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When another is speaking, count silently to five after he stops, then speak.” Listening begins by not rushing the reply — as Noor learned.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE LISTENING

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a large ear, and around it all the lovely sounds he loves to listen to (his mother's voice, the rain, a bird, a story).

The play. Two children: one tells something that happened to him, the other listens, then repeats what he heard. Did he get it right? Then they trade roles.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and the difference between one who replies fast and one who listens first. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Three and the close of the Seed. “In the Seed you learned the breath (I am here), the voice (my voice is mine), the gaze (I see you). Now — your shell split and you became a bud — you begin a deeper skill: to listen. The gaze opened your eyes to the other; listening opens your heart to him.”

Looking forward — Book Five (“The Bud's Question”) »

“When you listen well, questions blossom in your head. In the next book you will learn to ask a lovely, gentle question that opens hearts and deepens understanding.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs talking-not-listening → chaos → attentive listening → a fitting answer, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — listening is an invitation; the restless child is met, not punished.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees open the Bud arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels laughed-at and sad, then understood; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the close of the Seed to the coming Question.
- Zero passive activity — listening becomes an upright body, a held silence, a paraphrase.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — the closed bud listening before it opens; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Echo learns to listen; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “fine listening is the key to knowledge” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male judge (Ibn Jama'a) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 🌱 The approved root (s-m-‘) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the posture of attentive listening for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🌱 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, opening the Bud arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A1 and ACTFL Novice Mid.
- 🌱 The four CASEL criteria (Social Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- 🌱 The two figures are documented (Judge Ibn Jama'a, author of the manners of listener and speaker + Grandmother Ramla), and the Echo marked symbolic, not historical.
- 🌱 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of being slow), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- 🌱 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (upright sitting, listening to the end, paraphrase), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🌱 A proactive caution (hyperactivity) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and hearing impairment) — zero coercion.
- 🌱 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🌱 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the close of the Seed and opens the Question — zero disconnected episode.
- 🌱 The scale adds active listening — the first full social dimension — behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 🌱 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- 🌱 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 🌱 Five original plates in the bud palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- 🌱 WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, and front & back covers in place.

The Bud's Listening

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and return them to the body, the voice, the gaze, and the gift of true listening.

Noor has become a bud. She can breathe, speak, and see — but she loves talking so much that she listens to no one, and her replies fall out of place. When the Garbled Echo urges her to answer before hearing, a wise judge and a grandmother teach her — by an upright body and a held silence — to listen to the very end, until a new leaf opens from her like an ear and she hears what lies behind the words. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen, no drill — only two selves, and the gift of being truly heard.

The Juthur system • The Art of Expression — the twin skills of speaking and dialogue in twenty books. Having learned to listen, Noor the bud finds her head full of questions — and now learns to ask a lovely, gentle question that opens hearts and knowledge, through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, reaching farther. Listening opened the child's heart to receive the other; NOW THE QUESTION IS PRESENCE REACHING OUT TO THE OTHER — A GENTLE HAND KNOCKING SOFTLY ON THE DOOR OF UNDERSTANDING. Listening gives birth to the question; and so the question follows listening at once. It reaches back to listening and forward to gentleness.

Integration Map — a good question is listening turned outward: the fifth station of presence.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👉 Proactive caution. This book encourages asking. Some children are shy to ask, fearing a mistake — reassure them that there is no wrong question, and never laugh at any question however simple it seems, for ridicule kills curiosity.

👑 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor the bud has listened, and questions were born in her head — now she learns to ask them beautifully.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Bud — an opening bud (the middle of the Bud stage)
AGE BAND	7–9 years · flexing from 6 to 10 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	s- 'l (Su 'āl, question): the key of knowledge, half of learning
ROOT FAMILY	su 'āl · sā 'il · tasā 'ul · tasā 'ala · mas 'ala (all from s- 'l)
STATION (MAHATTA)	The Question — presence reaching out to understand
SENSORY ANCHOR	Raising a hand and asking one clear question in a calm tone
METAPHOR	The bud opens, asking the sun: how do I grow? — and the answer comes as light
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Imam al-Shafi'i + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the bud — she grows across the books)
COUNTER- CHARACTER	The Insistent Downpour — symbolic (non-historical), embodying the hurried, attacking question that waits for no answer; it learns to ask gently
MASTERY CRITERION	An opening bud: raises a hand and asks one clear question in a calm tone
CASEL DOMAIN	Social Awareness & Relationship Skills
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR A1 (simple communication supported by asking and pauses) · ACTFL Novice Mid · CASEL Social & Relationship Skills

The Heart of the Book

Having learned to listen, Noor discovered many questions in her head. A lovely question is a key: by it we understand the other, we learn, and we build a bridge. But a question is of two kinds: one that attacks and does not wait, and one that listens and opens. We learn the second.

📖 Historical footnote. Imam Muhammad ibn Idris al-Shafi'i (150–204 AH) was a great Arab scholar, founder of one of the schools of jurisprudence. The scholars are reported to have said, “Good asking is half of knowledge” (without attributing it firmly to one speaker). From al-Shafi'i's life we draw the manners of the question that open the doors of knowledge.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of asking — a raised hand, a calm breath, a single clear question, and then a waiting silence. He does not parse letters; he asks, and feels the door open. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
s – ' – l	su 'āl · sā 'il · tasā 'ul · tasā 'ala · mas 'ala

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word su 'āl (question) has siblings! One who asks is a sā 'il; a matter we ponder and ask about is a mas 'ala; when we share a question it is a tasā 'ul; and when you ask yourself quietly you say tasā 'altu. One family from one father: s- ' -l.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (s-’-l) is hamzated (its middle letter is a hamza). The hamza appears in “sa’ala” and “su’āl,” and its written seat changes with the vowel — a natural orthographic variation noted for the teacher.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Question” —

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the bud palette

❧ I. NOOR THE BUD HAS LISTENED WELL; HER HEAD FILLS WITH QUESTIONS SHE IS SHY TO ASK ❧

Plate I — Questions filled her head, but shyness kept them tucked away.

After Noor learned to listen, she began to hear many new things. And the more she listened, the more questions were born in her head: why does the rain fall? how do the trees grow? what is behind the hill?

But Noor was shy. She thought that whoever asks looks as if he does not know, so she kept her questions locked in her chest. And with every question she swallowed, something vague stayed inside her, never made clear.

II. THE INSISTENT DOWNPOUR RAINS ATTACKING QUESTIONS, WAITING FOR NO ANSWER

Plate II — “Faster! More questions! No time for answers!” — a barrage that opened no door.

That day the Insistent Downpour passed by. It rained questions like a barrage, one atop another, without waiting for an answer to any:

“Who are you? Why are you small? Where were you? Why don't you answer? Faster! More questions! No time for answers!”

Noor stammered under the downpour. The Downpour asked much but did not want to understand — it only wanted to attack. So its question opened no door; rather it closed hearts in fear.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR AL-SHAFI'I'S WISDOM OF THE CALM QUESTION

Plate III — “A question is a door,” she said, “and listening is its key.”

Grandmother Ramla opened an old book that held the wisdom of Imam al-Shafi'i — known for his love of knowledge and the fineness of his questions.

She said tenderly: “Noor, do not be shy to ask. Whoever asks learns, and whoever swallows his question stays lost. But a lovely question is not like the Downpour — it is calm, and single, and it waits for the answer.”

Then Ramla quietly raised her finger, passing on al-Shafi'i's wisdom: “This is how we ask, Noor: we raise a hand, ask one clear question, then listen for the answer. A question is a door, and listening is its key.”

❧ IV. NOOR CALMLY RAISES HER LEAF AND ASKS ONE CLEAR QUESTION ❧

Plate IV — One calm, clear question rose to the sun — and a door opened inside her too.

Noor raised her small leaf — as a pupil raises a hand — and took a calm breath (as she had learned before), and looked with an honest gaze, then asked one clear question: “Sun, how do I grow up and become a tree?”

It was a lovely question: calm, and clear, and honest. So Noor waited for the answer, listening. And when she asked like this, she felt a door open — not only outside, but within her too.

• V. NOOR ASKS BEAUTIFULLY, HER BUD OPENS MORE, AND THE DOWNPOUR CALMS AND ASKS GENTLY •

Plate V — A good question, and the bud opened wider; the Downpour softened to a single, patient drop.

The sun answered Noor warmly, and she learned something new. And with each lovely question she asked and each answer she listened to, her bud opened more, and she came nearer to becoming a branch.

And the wonder happened: the Insistent Downpour calmed... and for the first time, it asked only one question, quietly, and then waited. It whispered in wonder: “I used to ask so much and learn nothing. Now I asked one question and listened... and I learned!”

And the Downpour learned that a question is not an attack, but an invitation to understand. From that day, Noor asked beautifully — she learned, and taught, and everyone she asked came to love her.

👂 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of one question you would love to know the answer to. Raise your hand calmly — how will you ask it in one clear sentence?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor listened well, and her head filled with questions, but she was shy to ask.

The Insistent Downpour passed, raining attacking questions with no wait for answers; Noor stammered.

Grandmother Ramla said: “Raise your hand, ask one calm question, then listen for the answer.”

Noor raised her leaf and asked, “How do I grow?” and she learned! And the Downpour calmed and asked gently.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I ask" — he raises his hand and asks one calm question	Binding the question to courtesy and calm
Bodily movement	Raising a hand + a calm breath + a gaze + one clear question, then listening	Founding the manners of asking
Relational warmth	Waits for the answer, listening, and does not interrupt the one answering	Binding the question to listening
Sensory alternative	Uses a "?" card he raises instead of his hand, if speaking is hard	A question without verbal strain
English bridge	"I ask, so I learn."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. An opening bud (beginning) — asks one question with a reminder and encouragement. ← An opening bud (mastery) — raises a hand and asks one clear question in a calm tone unprompted, then listens for the answer.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A1 / ACTFL Novice Mid). The child can ask one clear, calm question to learn something he does not know, and then listen to the answer to the end — turning curiosity into a bridge, not a barrage.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Social Awareness & Relationship Skills)

- Raises a hand and asks one clear question.
- Asks in a calm, not attacking, tone.
- Waits for the answer, listening, without interrupting.
- Is not ashamed to ask, seeing in it learning, not weakness.

— The Four Inner Senses of the Question —

A question, too, is felt in the body before it is spoken. TrT awakens the child's interoception of courage and curiosity. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN ASKING	A GUIDING WHISPER
The stirring (curiosity)	The bright pull of wanting to know	“What tugs at you to know? Follow that pull.”
The calm before asking	A steady breath that turns a blurt into a clear question	“Breathe once, then ask slowly and clearly.”
The courage (not shame)	The small brave warmth of raising a hand	“Feel your brave hand rise; asking is strength.”
The open waiting	The quiet of holding still to receive the answer	“Ask, then grow still and listen for the door to open.”

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the pull of curiosity, the calm, the courage, and the open waiting will ask questions that build bridges — and keep learning all his life.

— Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion —

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. If the child is shy or afraid to ask, he is not forced. Asking is a courage built gently. He may whisper his question into a companion's ear first, or raise a question-card. Encouragement, not compulsion.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Shyness / social anxiety	Begins by whispering the question to a familiar companion, or writing it, before asking before a group — no pressure.
Speech / communication difficulty	Raises a “?” card or points to a picture instead of the spoken question; a question is accepted by any means.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	A fixed, clear question form is taught (e.g., “Why...?”) to practise, and repeated questions are met with patience.
Hyperactivity / attention	The question is tied to movement: he physically raises his hand, then asks; movement aids self-regulation.
Hearing impairment	Make sure the child heard the full answer (by watching the face or in writing) before a new question.
Cultural difference	Respect cultures where asking an elder is seen as boldness; encourage asking among peers in a safe space.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. The screen gives ready answers and kills the question; we want to revive the child's curiosity and his courage to ask.

ii. During the session — the game of the single question. Encourage the child to raise a hand and ask one lovely question about anything. There is no silly question. Celebrate every question.

iii. After the session — the bedtime question. Before sleep, ask the child: "What was the loveliest question that crossed your mind today?" Make the question a beloved habit.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: "How many calm, lovely questions did our child ask today?" A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

"The screen gives the child answers. We teach him to ask the questions."

- When did a question you asked help you understand something new?
PERSONAL LINK

A lovely question is half of knowledge; and whoever asks calmly opens a mind and a heart.

🏆 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you don't understand something, raise your hand and ask one clear question — and don't be shy. A question is courage, not weakness.” By asking, Noor learned what she did not know.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE QUESTIONS

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a large, beautiful question-mark, and inside it draw all the things he wonders about (the stars, the sea, how a bird flies).

The play. Two children play “Twenty Questions”: one thinks of a thing, and the other asks calm questions one by one to discover it. Who asks the loveliest questions?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and the difference between an attacking question and a calm, lovely one. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Four (“The Bud's Listening”). “You learned to listen (I listen to you). And when you listen well, questions blossom. Listening gives birth to the question, and the question is the fruit of good listening — that is why the question comes right after listening.”

Looking forward — Book Six (“The Bud's Gentleness”) »

“You have learned to listen and to ask. In the next book you will learn to wrap all your words in gentleness — for a kind word opens what nothing else can, and makes your question and your listening lovelier still.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs shyness → the attacking barrage → the calm question → learning, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — asking is a courage built gently; the shy child is never forced.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees sit consistently in the Bud arc.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels shy, then brave; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds listening to gentleness.
- Zero passive activity — the question becomes a raised hand, a calm breath, an open waiting.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — the bud asks the sun and opens; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Downpour learns to ask gently; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “a question is a door, listening its key” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male imam (al-Shafi'i) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (s- ' -l) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the raised hand and calm question for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A1 and ACTFL Novice Mid.
- The four CASEL criteria (Social Awareness & Relationship Skills) are set as observable outcomes.
- The two figures are documented (Imam al-Shafi'i + Grandmother Ramla), and the Downpour marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of silence), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (raised hand, calm question, open waiting), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (shyness; no ridicule) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and speech difficulty) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds listening and opens gentleness — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds the manners of asking and initiative, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the bud palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, and front & back covers in place.

The Bud's Question

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and return them to the body, the voice, and the courage to ask living questions.

Noor the bud can listen now — and her head fills with wonderful questions she is too shy to ask. When the Insistent Downpour fires questions like a barrage that waits for no answer, a great imam's wisdom and a grandmother teach her — by a raised hand and a calm breath — to ask one clear question and then listen. And when she asks the sun, “How do I grow?”, a door opens outside her and within, and her bud unfolds a little more. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen with ready answers — only a child, a curiosity, and the courage to ask.

“I ask — so I learn.”

The Juthur system • The Art of Expression — the twin skills of speaking and dialogue in twenty books. Noor the bud can listen and ask — and now discovers that the tone of a word makes all the difference. She learns to wrap her words in gentleness, through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made warm. The gaze, the listening, and the question turned the child toward the other; NOW GENTLENESS IS PRESENCE MADE TENDER — THE “HOW I SAY IT” THAT CARRIES THE “WHAT I SAY.” A kind word is the warm key of every door. It reaches back to the question and forward to the first small story.

Integration Map — gentleness is the warmth that carries every word; the sixth station of presence.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🦋 Proactive caution. This book grows gentleness. Remember that gentleness is learned first by example: a child treated with gentleness learns gentleness. Avoid shouting or ridicule while teaching this lesson, for the contradiction confuses the child.

🦋 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor the bud asks and listens, and now learns to wrap her words in gentleness.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Bud — a warm bud
AGE BAND	7–9 years · flexing from 6 to 10 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	l-ṭ-f (Luṭf, gentleness): the softness of a word and the warmth of a manner
ROOT FAMILY	luṭf · laṭīf · mulāṭafa · talaṭṭafa · mutalaṭṭif (all from l-ṭ-f)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Loosening the shoulders and smiling with the eyes before the mouth, then saying a kind word (“please,” “thank you”) in a warm tone
METAPHOR	The bud opens by tenderness — force breaks it, gentleness opens it
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the bud — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Bitter Frost — symbolic (non-historical), embodying the cold, harsh word that freezes hearts; it learns warmth
MASTERY CRITERION	A warm bud: chooses a kind word and says it in a warm tone, unprompted
CASEL DOMAIN	Relationship Skills
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR A1 (simple communication supported by gentleness and pauses) · ACTFL Novice Mid · CASEL Relationship Skills

The Heart of the Book

Noor learned to listen and to ask, but discovered that the tone of speech makes a difference. The very same word may wound if it comes out rough, and heal if it comes out gentle. And gentleness is not weakness — it is the strongest key to hearts.

📖 Historical footnote. Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak (118–181 AH) was a great Arab scholar of the second Hijri century who joined knowledge with generosity. He travelled far in search of knowledge, and treated everyone he met with softness and a smile. From his life we draw that knowledge without courtesy and gentleness is incomplete.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of gentleness — loosened shoulders, eyes that smile before the mouth, a warm tone. He does not parse letters; he feels the warmth that spreads in his own chest when he is kind. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
l – ṭ – f	luṭf · laṭīf · mulāṭāfa · talaṭṭāfa · mutalaṭṭif

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word luṭf (gentleness) has siblings! A kind, tender person we call laṭīf; when you treat your friend softly you are talaṭṭāfa-ing with him; and one who treats others softly is a mutalaṭṭif. One family from one father: l-ṭ-f.”

🌟 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (l-ṭ-f) is sound. From it comes luṭf (softness in dealing), and al-Laṭīf is one of the Beautiful Names of God, meaning the Gentle with His servants — noted briefly for the teacher.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Gentleness” —

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the bud palette

❧ I. NOOR ASKS AND LISTENS, BUT HER WORDS
SOMETIMES COME OUT ROUGH AND WOUND ❧

Plate I — A right word, said roughly, flew like ice — and a little flower wilted.

Noor came to listen and to ask beautifully. But sometimes, when she hurried, her words came out rough and harsh without her meaning them to. She said to a little flower beside her: “Move away! You are taking my place!” — and the flower wilted with sorrow.

Noor was puzzled: why did the flower wilt? She did not understand that a word, though small, can be a frost that freezes, or a warmth that opens. Her words were correct, but without gentleness — so they wounded hearts.

❧ II. THE BITTER FROST FREEZES EVERYTHING WITH COLD, SHARP WORDS ❧

Plate II — The Bitter Frost spoke cold, and all around it stiffened and froze.

That day the Bitter Frost blew in. It spoke in cold, sharp words, and whenever it spoke, something around it froze. It said to Noor:

“Gentleness is weakness! Be hard like me! A cold word makes people fear you and listen to you! Warmth is for the weak!”

Noor tried the Frost's way: she spoke harshly. But everyone around her drew away in fear, and the flowers wilted and froze, and the ground became bleak and cold. Noor felt lonely — for harshness pushes away and never draws near.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR IBN AL-MUBARAK'S WISDOM OF THE GENTLE WORD

Plate III — “Force breaks the door; gentleness makes its owner open it for you.”

Grandmother Ramla opened an old book that held the wisdom of the scholar Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak — the most learned of people and the gentlest at once. Then she offered Noor a rose, gently, and said:

“Noor, what did you feel when I gave you the rose so softly? This is what ibn al-Mubarak taught us: a word is like a rose — if you offer it gently, you bring in joy. Force breaks the door, but gentleness makes its owner open it for you himself.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “A kind word costs nothing, yet it is worth everything. Say: please, and thank you, and I am sorry — and say them with a smile. Try.”

❧ IV. NOOR CHOOSES A KIND WORD; IT WARMS, AND THE WILTED FLOWER BLOOMS AGAIN ❧

Plate IV — A gentle word, and the wilted flower bloomed again; and Noor's own chest grew warm.

Noor turned to the wilted flower, took a calm breath, looked at it with tenderness, then said gently and warmly: “I am sorry, little one. Please forgive me. Your place beside me is lovely.”

And the gentle magic happened: the wilted flower bloomed again, and its colour came back! And Noor felt a warmth in her chest. The kind word did not only gladden the flower — it gladdened Noor herself.

❧ V. NOOR SPEAKS GENTLY, THE FROST MELTS AND SMILES, AND SPRING COMES ❧

Plate V — The Frost melted into a stream that watered the flowers; and spring came.

Noor came to speak gently with everyone, and the ground around her warmed, and the flowers opened, and spring came. She said, in her voice and her gaze and her kind word: “Please.”

And the wonder happened: the Bitter Frost felt a strange warmth at its centre — a warmth that did not freeze it but melted it slowly from within. And it smiled for the first time, and whispered as it gently melted: “I used to freeze and to freeze others, so everyone drew away from me. Now your word has warmed me... and I have become water that waters the flowers.”

And the Frost learned that gentleness is stronger than harshness, because it opens hearts instead of freezing them. From that day, Noor's word was a key to every heart.

❧ The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Loosen your shoulders, and smile with your eyes. Now say a kind word in your heart to someone you love — did you feel something warm widen in your chest?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor came to ask and listen, but her words sometimes came out rough and wounded.

The Bitter Frost blew in, speaking harshly; Noor copied it, and everyone drew away.

Ibn al-Mubarak offered a rose and said: “A kind word opens hearts. Say: please, and thank you.”

Noor said gently, “Please.” and the flowers bloomed, and the Frost melted and smiled.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	“Please... thank you” — he chooses the kind word	Binding gentleness to language
Bodily movement	Loosens his shoulders and smiles with his eyes before his mouth, then speaks in a warm tone	Embodying tenderness
Relational warmth	Says a kind word to one who needs it (thanks or encouragement)	Gentleness builds bridges
Sensory alternative	The “kind-words bank”: each day he writes a kind word he said	Fixing gentleness through the senses
English bridge	“My kind word opens hearts.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A warm bud (beginning) — says a kind word with a reminder. ←

A warm bud (mastery) — chooses a kind word and says it in a warm tone and with a smile, unprompted.

 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A1 / ACTFL Novice Mid). The child can choose a kind word — “please,” “thank you,” “I’m sorry” — and say it in a warm tone with a smile, to open a heart, even in a moment of friction.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship Skills)

- Uses the words of gentleness (please, thank you, sorry) in their places.
- Speaks in a warm, not rough, tone.
- Wraps his word in a smile and a kind gaze.
- Apologizes gently when he wrongs someone.

The Four Inner Senses of Gentleness

Gentleness, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of warmth. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN GENTLENESS	A GUIDING WHISPER
The loosening	Shoulders and jaw softening before a kind word	"Let your shoulders drop, soft as warm bread."
The eye-smile	Warmth reaching the eyes before the mouth speaks	"Smile first with your eyes, then with your voice."
The chest-warmth	A widening warmth felt after a kind word	"Did a small sun rise in your chest when you were kind?"
The other's thaw	Sensing the other soften and open in reply	"Watch your friend's face soften like ice in the sun."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the loosening, the eye-smile, the warmth in his chest, and the other's thaw carries the warmest key of all — and knows that gentleness gladdens the giver first.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. The child is not forced to show feelings he does not feel. Gentleness is grown by example, not by compulsion. If the child is angry, we first help him calm himself (by the breath) before we ask him for a kind word.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Difficulty expressing emotion	Kind words are taught as fixed forms to practise, with pictures linking the word to the feeling.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	The places of a kind word are shown through Social Stories, and a calm tone is accepted even if not visually expressive.
Speech difficulty	Gentleness may be shown by a gesture (a smile, giving a card, a kind touch) instead of speech.
Emotional-regulation difficulty	Linked to Book One: we breathe first to calm, then choose the kind word.
Cultural difference	Different forms of gentleness across cultures are respected; what matters is the warmth, not the literal formula.
Harsh environment	Note that some children are not used to gentleness around them; offer them a warm model without blame.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Much of what is on screens is shouting and harshness; we want to fill the child's ear with warm words.

ii. During the session — the game of the warm word. Trade kind words: each says to the other a true, lovely word. Watch how it lights up faces.

iii. After the session — three magic words. Train the habit: “please” when asking, “thank you” when receiving, “I'm sorry” when wrong. Make them part of your day.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many kind words did our child say today in a warm tone?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches the child to shout. We teach him gentleness.”

Weekly reflection: When did a kind word change a moment this week?

— The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Six Unit —

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The prior books added active listening and the manners of asking. This book deepens relationship skills with a new dimension: the gentleness of word and manner.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Speaks in a rough or cold tone; kind words are absent or forced.
● sometimes	Uses a kind word only when reminded; tone not yet consistently warm.
• often	Unprompted, chooses a kind word and says it in a warm tone with a smile.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). On agreement, record it. On a one-step difference, record the lower and note it. On a two-step difference, the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

Pre-measurement: _____ Post-measurement: _____ · Two-step disagreements this round: _____

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis, gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
luṭf (لُطْف)	softness and warmth in word and manner	gentleness
laṭīf (لَطِيف)	the kind, tender one with people	gentle / kind rifq (رِفْق)	to treat softly, not harshly	tenderness
laṭīfa (لَطِيفَة)	a light, clever, pleasant word	a witty pleasantry
mujāmala (مُجَامَلَة)	a kind word that brings joy	a kind compliment

Output (Arabic): «أَخْتَارُ كَلِمَةً لَطِيفَةً، فَأَفْتَحُ قَلْبًا.» — Strength may break a door; a gentle word is a warm key — I feel it in my chest before I say it.

English Bridge: “My kind word opens hearts.” — Strength may break a door; a gentle word is a warm key — I feel it in my chest before I say it.

Be like the branch: supple and unbroken — not rigid, and so snapped. A harsh word breaks the door; a gentle one opens it. Gentleness is not weakness, but a suppleness that guards you and reaches hearts — the “how I say it” that serves the word of truth.

Questions of Understanding

- What happened to the flower when Noor spoke to it harshly? RECALL
- Why did everyone draw away from Noor when she copied the Frost?
INFERENCE
- Say a kind word now, with a smile, to the one beside you — what changed in his face? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt angry and sorry at once after speaking harshly?
SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Frost was cold because it feared being seen as weak. Have you ever acted hard to hide that you were hurt? What could help the Frost feel safe enough to be warm? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did a kind word someone said warm your heart? PERSONAL LINK

A kind word is a key that opens what force cannot.

🌱 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Before you ask for a thing, add ‘please.’ After you take it, say ‘thank you.’ And a sweet word is said with a smile.” The kind word warmed everyone around Noor.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE WARMTH

The drawing. Ask the child to make a “gentleness card” for someone he loves: he draws a heart and writes or dictates a kind word, then gives it as a gift.

The play. Two children: one says a plain sentence, the other says it kindly. “Give me the pen” becomes “Please, may I have the pen?” — said with a warm tone and a smile. Who makes it kinder in voice and face?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and the difference between a cold word and a warm one. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Five (“The Bud's Question”). “You learned to ask (I ask, so I learn). Now you learn to wrap your question and all your speech in gentleness. A gentle question is sweeter, a gentle listening warmer. Gentleness makes all your earlier skills lovelier.”

Looking forward — Book Seven (“The Bud's Story”) »

“You now have listening, and a question, and gentleness. In the next book — the close of the Bud stage — you will learn to tell a little story with your hands and your words, so your bud fully opens and you ready to become a branch.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs a rough word → freezing harshness → a gentle word → spring, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — no child is forced to show feelings he does not feel; anger is calmed first.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees sit consistently with Book Five.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels puzzled, then lonely, then warm; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the question to the coming story.
- Zero passive activity — gentleness becomes loosened shoulders, an eye-smile, a warm tone.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — force breaks the bud, gentleness opens it; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Frost melts into water that waters; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “gentleness is strength, not weakness” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male scholar (ibn al-Mubarak) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (l-ṭ-f) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (loosened shoulders and warm tone for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A1 and ACTFL Novice Mid.
- The four CASEL criteria (Relationship Skills) are set as observable outcomes.
- The two figures are documented (Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak + Grandmother Ramla), and the Frost marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of seeming weak), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, melting into water that waters.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (eye-smile, warm tone), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (no forced feeling; calm anger first) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and harsh environment) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the question and opens the story — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds the gentleness of word and manner, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds gentleness to strength.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the bud palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, and front & back covers in place.

JUTHUR · THE ART OF EXPRESSION · BOOK VI

The Bud's Gentleness

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and return them to the body, the voice, and the warmth of a gentle word.

Noor the bud can listen and ask — but her words sometimes come out rough and wound. When the Bitter Frost tells her that gentleness is weakness and cold words make people obey, a generous scholar's wisdom and a grandmother teach her — by a loosened shoulder, an eye-smile, and a rose offered softly — that a kind word is the warmest key of all. And when she says “please,” a wilted flower blooms, the Frost melts into a stream that waters the garden, and spring returns. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen, no shouting — only the warmth two people can give each other with a single gentle word.

“My kind word opens hearts.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. This book closes the Bud stage: Noor gathers all she has learned into a single ordered story — a beginning, a middle, and an end — with her own hands, and her bud completes itself, ready to become a branch, through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT); نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made whole. Listening, the question, and gentleness each turned the child toward the other; NOW THE STORY GATHERS THEM INTO ONE SHAPE — A SELF ORDERED INTO A BEGINNING, A MIDDLE, AND AN END, AND OFFERED TO THE WORLD. This is the crown of the Bud: the child no longer waits to be told a story, but tells the world what is within. It reaches back to gentleness and forward to the melody of the Branch.

Integration Map — the story is all the bud's skills gathered into one shape; the crown of the Bud.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👉 Proactive caution. This book grows storytelling. Remember the child may need time to order his thoughts — do not interrupt him or finish for him; grant him the silence of thinking. Every child is a storyteller by nature, if given the time.

👉 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale is the close of the Bud: Noor gathers her skills, and learns to tell an ordered story with her hands — so her bud completes itself, ready for the branch.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Bud — a completed bud (the close of the Bud stage)
AGE BAND	7–9 years · flexing from 6 to 10 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	ḥ-k-y (Ḥikāya, story): to order your words so they become a tale others understand
ROOT FAMILY	ḥikāya · ḥākin · maḥkiyy · ḥakā · yaḥkī (all from ḥ-k-y)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Telling a short story in order (beginning, middle, end) using the hands to illustrate
METAPHOR	The bud, now complete, breathes and tells the story of its whole journey before it becomes a branch
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Abdullah ibn al-Muqaffa' + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the bud — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Scattered Whirlwind — symbolic (non-historical), embodying scattered speech that leaps with no order; it learns order
MASTERY CRITERION	A completed bud: tells a short, ordered story using the hands to illustrate
CASEL DOMAIN	Relationship & Expression Skills
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR A1 (simple communication supported by storytelling and pauses) · ACTFL Novice Mid · CASEL Relationship & Expression

The Heart of the Book

Noor learned to listen, to ask, and to be gentle. Now — at the close of the Bud — she learns to gather all of it into a story: to order her words so they have a beginning, a middle, and an end. An ordered story arrives; scattered words are lost. And so Noor's bud completes itself: she no longer waits for someone to tell her a story — she tells the world what stirs within her.

📖 Historical footnote. Abdullah ibn al-Muqaffa' (d. c. 139 AH) was a great Arab man of letters of the second Hijri century, who rendered the tales of Kalila wa Dimna on the tongues of animals, teaching wisdom through story. From him we draw the art of the ordered tale that carries meaning.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of telling — three ordering steps counted on three fingers, hands moving to shape the tale. He does not parse letters; he tells, and feels the story fall into order. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
ḥ - k - y	ḥikāya · ḥākin · maḥkiyy · ḥakā · yaḥkī

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word ḥikāya (story) has siblings! One who tells the story is a ḥākin (a narrator); the tale that was told is maḥkiyy; when you order your story and tell it you say ḥakaytu, and you do it each day so you taḥkī. One family from one father: ḥ-k-y.”

📖 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (ḥ-k-y) is defective (its final radical is a weak letter, the yā'). The yā' shows in “yaḥkī” and turns to an alif in “ḥakā” — a natural variation of the defective root, noted for the teacher.

The Full Telling: “Noor's Story”

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the bud palette

❧ I. NOOR WANTS TO TELL WHAT HAPPENED, BUT HER WORDS SCATTER OUT OF ORDER ❧

Plate I — She began in the middle, jumped to the end, then back — and the tale was lost.

Noor could listen, and ask, and speak gently. And one day, something lovely happened to her that she wanted to tell her friends. But she began from the middle, then jumped to the end, then went back to the beginning...

So her friends understood nothing! They looked at her, puzzled. The words were all correct, but scattered and out of order, and the story was lost like leaves the wind had thrown about.

❧ II. THE SCATTERED WHIRLWIND LEAPS FROM TALE TO TALE WITH NO BEGINNING OR END ❧

Plate II — “A lion — no — a fish — a bird — where were we?!” — a thousand tales, none finished.

That day the Scattered Whirlwind blew in. It told a thousand tales at once, leaping from one to another without finishing any:

“And there was a lion — no, wait — and in the sea a fish — (panting) — and then the bird flew — where were we? Never mind! And there's a castle — quick, another story!”

It was panting from all its leaping — for scattered speech tires its own teller too. Noor tried the Whirlwind's way: she told everything at once, with no order. Her friends grew dizzy, and drew away. A scattered story is understood by no one, however exciting.

III. IBN AL-MUQAFFA' AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA TEACH NOOR THE SECRET OF THE ORDERED STORY

Plate III — “Every lovely story has three steps, like the fingers of your hand.”

Beside the soil sat the man of letters Abdullah ibn al-Muqaffa', who told the loveliest tales on the tongues of animals. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before.

Ibn al-Muqaffa' said, moving his hands: “Noor, every lovely story has three steps, like the fingers of your hand. First, the beginning — who, and where. Second, the middle — what happened. Third, the end — how it all turned out.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “And use your hands, Noor, as you tell — the hands help the words fall into order. One story, from its beginning to its end, is lovelier than a thousand scattered ones.”

❁ IV. NOOR TELLS AN ORDERED STORY USING HER HANDS (HER TWO LEAVES) ❁

Plate IV — Beginning, middle, end — and everyone understood, and lived the tale with her.

Noor took a calm breath, and ordered her story in her head first, then began to tell, using her two leaves like hands that point:

“In the beginning: I was in the garden in the morning. Then: I found a lost butterfly and helped it find its flower. And in the end: the butterfly flew away happy, and thanked me!”

It was a lovely, ordered story: a beginning, a middle, and an end. So everyone understood it, and lived it with her, and rejoiced in her joy. Noor felt an overflowing happiness — her story had arrived!

❧ V. NOOR ENDS HER STORY TO EVERYONE'S DELIGHT; THE WHIRLWIND CALMS AND TELLS IN ORDER; THE BUD NEARLY A BRANCH ❧

Plate V — Applause; and the bud nearly a branch. The Whirlwind, at last, told one whole tale.

Noor's friends clapped for her ordered story. And with each ordered tale she told, her bud grew more, until it nearly put out two small branches — she was on the threshold of becoming a branch!

And the wonder happened: the Scattered Whirlwind calmed, and stopped spinning, and told — for the first time — one whole story: a beginning, a middle, and an end. It whispered in wonder: “I used to tell a thousand tales and no one understood me. Now I told one ordered tale... and everyone listened.”

And the Whirlwind learned that one ordered story is more eloquent than a thousand scattered ones. And so Noor completed the whole journey of the Bud: she listened, and asked, and was gentle, and told — and she was ready to become a strong branch.

👤 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of something that happened to you today. Order it in three: how did it begin? what happened? how did it end? Now tell it with your hands.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor wanted to tell what happened to her, but she scattered her words, and no one understood.

The Scattered Whirlwind blew in, leaping between a thousand tales with no order, and everyone grew dizzy.

Ibn al-Muqaffa' said: “Every story has three steps: a beginning, a middle, and an end. And use your hands.”

Noor told an ordered story: “In the beginning... then... and in the end.” Everyone understood, and the Whirlwind calmed and told in order.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	“Once upon a time... then... and finally” — he tells in order	Binding the story to order
Bodily movement	Counts on three fingers: beginning, middle, end, and tells with his hands	Embodying story-building
Relational warmth	Tells his story to a listener and asks: did you follow the sequence?	The story gathers hearts
Sensory alternative	Three ordering cards: he arranges them, then tells accordingly	Fixing order through the senses
English bridge	“My story has a beginning, a middle, and an end.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A completed bud (beginning) — tells a story in two steps (a beginning and an end) with help. ← A completed bud (mastery) — tells a short story in three ordered steps using his hands, unaided. With this the bud completes itself.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A1 / ACTFL Novice Mid). The child can tell a short personal story in a clear order — a beginning, a middle, and an end — using his hands to help, so a listener follows the sequence and understands.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship & Expression Skills)

- Orders his story into a beginning, a middle, and an end.
- Uses his hands and face to illustrate.
- Tells one connected story without scattered leaping.
- Links the parts of his story with words (then, after that, finally).

The Four Inner Senses of the Story

A story, too, is felt in the body before it is told. TrT awakens the child's interoception of order and shape. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN TELLING	A GUIDING WHISPER
The ordering (before speaking)	The quiet settling of events into first, then, last	"Line up your three pictures in your mind before you speak."
The three-count of the hand	Three fingers, three steps — the shape felt in the hand	"Feel the beginning, middle, and end on three fingers."
The thread of sequence	The pull that carries each part into the next	"Feel each part hand the next one along."
The arrival	The warm relief when a listener follows and understands	"Did you feel your story land in your friend's eyes?"

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the ordering, the three-count, the thread, and the arrival can shape any experience into a story that carries — the gathering of every earlier skill into one whole.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. The child is not forced to tell before everyone if he is shy. We graduate it gently: he tells first in a whisper to himself, then to a doll, then to one companion, then to the group when he is at ease. The story is a joy, not an exam, and its details are not corrected harshly while he tells.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Narrative-language difficulty	Use three picture cards (beginning, middle, end) that he orders and tells about in a few words.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Teach the story's shape visually (a story map), and accept his favourite subjects however specialised.
Shyness / anxiety	He tells first in a whisper or to a doll, then to a companion, before the group — no pressure.
Hyperactivity / attention	Shorten the story to three sentences, and allow movement and hand-gestures while telling.
Speech difficulty	Telling by gesture, ordering pictures, or mime is accepted instead of full speech.
Cultural difference	Respect differing storytelling traditions; some cultures open a tale with a proverb or refrain before ordering its beginning, middle, and end.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. The screen tells the child stories; we want him to tell — for the child who tells thinks, orders, and creates.

ii. During the session — the three-finger story. Help the child tell in three steps on his fingers: beginning (a finger), middle (a finger), end (a finger). Make it a game.

iii. After the session — the story of the day. Before sleep, ask the child to tell his day in three ordered steps. A habit that builds memory and order.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many ordered stories (beginning-middle-end) did our child tell?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen tells the child stories. We make the child the storyteller.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Seven Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. With this book the Bud stage completes (listening, question, gentleness, story). The new dimension here is ordered narrative expression, in preparation for the Branch.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Leaps between fragments; the tale has no clear order.
● sometimes	Orders the tale only with help or cards; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, tells a short story in a clear beginning-middle-end, using his hands.

The New Dimension — Ordered Narrative Expression

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	●	•	NOTE
Tells a story in three ordered steps	◦	●	•
Uses hands and face to illustrate	◦	●	•
Tells one connected story without scattering	◦	●	•
Links the parts with sequence words	◦	●	•

Cumulative Review — the Bud Stage Complete (its four dimensions)

As this book closes the stage, observe briefly that the four skills hold together — evidence the stage is complete:

BUD DIMENSION	◦ RARELY	◐ SOMETIMES	• OFTEN
Listening (attends until the speaker finishes)	◦	◐	•
Question (asks one clear question, calmly)	◦	◐	•
Gentleness (chooses a kind word, warm tone)	◦	◐	•
Story (tells in order: beginning, middle, end)	◦	◐	•

Pre-measurement: _____ Post-measurement: _____ · Two-step disagreements this round: _____

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis; with this book the Bud-stage dimensions are complete, gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
ḥikāya (حِكَايَة)	a tale you tell in order	story / tale
ḥākin (حَاكٍ)	one who tells the story	storyteller
bidāya (بِدَايَة)	the first of the story	beginning nihāya (نِهَايَة)	the last of the story	ending tasalsul (تَسْلُسُل)	each part following the one before, in order	sequence wasat (وَسَط)	the heart of the story: what happened	middle rāwin (رَاوٍ)	one who tells the story (like ḥākin)	narrator
tashwīq (تَشْوِيق)	what makes the listener wait for what happens next	suspense

Output (Arabic): «أَحْكِي حِكَايَتِي بِتَرْتِيبٍ، فَيَفْهَمُنِي مَنْ يَسْمَعُنِي.» — An ordered story carries meaning; a scattered one carries confusion.

English Bridge: “I tell my story — with a beginning and an end.” — An ordered story carries meaning; a scattered one carries confusion.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's friends not understand her story at first? RECALL
- Why did those who heard the Scattered Whirlwind grow dizzy?
INFERENCE
- Tell with your hands something that happened to you, in three steps — did you feel the difference? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt excited and muddled at once, trying to tell too much at the same time? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Whirlwind rushed a thousand tales because it feared being unheard. Have you ever piled on words to be interesting? What could help the Whirlwind tell just one whole story? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- What is the loveliest story you have heard? How did it begin and end?
PERSONAL LINK

My story begins, then moves, then ends; ordered words are a bridge, and scattered ones a fog.

🏆 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you tell something that happened, begin with its start, then what happened, then how it ended. Three steps: beginning, middle, end.” By ordering, people understood Noor's story.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE STORY

The drawing. Ask the child to draw his story in three panels: the beginning, the middle, the end. Then he tells it in order.

The play. Children play “the chained story”: one begins with a beginning sentence, another adds the middle, a third ends it. One ordered story they build together.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and shows how scattered words become a lovely ordered story. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Six (“The Bud's Gentleness”). “In listening you attended to the end, in the question you asked calmly, in gentleness you chose the warm word. Now you gather all of these into one ordered story: you listen, and ask, and tell gently and in order. The story is the crown of the Bud.”

Looking forward — the Branch stage (Book Eight, “The Branch's Melody”) »
“You have completed the Bud's journey! You listened, asked, were gentle, and told — your unfolding is complete, and you have become a strong branch. In the coming stage — the Branch — you will learn the melody of your voice: how it rises and falls to carry meaning and feeling.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs scattered words → dizzy chaos → the ordered story → arrival, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — no child is forced to tell before all; the shy are graduated gently.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Bud arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels muddled, then overflowing joy; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge gathers the whole Bud and opens the Branch.
- Zero passive activity — the story becomes three fingers, two hands, ordered speech.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — the completed bud tells its journey and nearly branches; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Whirlwind learns to order; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “one ordered story beats a thousand scattered ones” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male man of letters (ibn al-Muqaffa') and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (ḥ-k-y) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the three-finger, two-handed telling for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Bud arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A1 and ACTFL Novice Mid.
- The four CASEL criteria (Relationship & Expression) are set as observable outcomes.
- The two figures are documented (Abdullah ibn al-Muqaffa' + Grandmother Ramla), and the Whirlwind marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of being unheard), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (three fingers, two hands), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (no forced public telling) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and narrative difficulty) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it gathers the whole Bud and opens the Branch, with a four-dimension review — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds ordered narrative expression, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol, completing the Bud's four dimensions — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the bud palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Bud's Story

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and make the child the storyteller, not the screen.

Noor the bud can listen, ask, and be gentle — but when she tries to tell what happened, her words scatter and no one understands. When the Scattered Whirlwind leaps between a thousand unfinished tales, a great man of letters and a grandmother teach her — by three fingers and two guiding hands — that every story has a beginning, a middle, and an end. And when she tells one ordered tale, everyone understands and lives it with her, and her bud completes itself, nearly a branch. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen telling stories at the child — only the child, ordering his world, and telling it whole.

“I tell my story — with a beginning and an end.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has become a branch. Having learned to tell an ordered story, she now discovers that words alone are not enough — the same sentence can be joy, sorrow, or a question, by the melody of the voice — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made musical. The Seed and Bud built the self and its skills; the story gave words their order. NOW THE BRANCH BEGINS: PRESENCE CARRIED IN THE MELODY OF THE VOICE — THE RISE AND FALL THAT TURNS WORDS INTO FEELING. The same true words, tuned differently, reach the heart differently. It reaches back to the story and forward to the gesture of the body.

Integration Map — melody is the music of speech that carries feeling; the opening of the Branch.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👑 Proactive caution. This book grows expressive intonation. Remember that some children (especially on the autism spectrum) have a naturally flatter tone — do not correct this as an error; offer models gently and celebrate any attempt.

👑 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor the branch can tell a story, and now learns to colour it with melody.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Branch — a supple branch (the opening of the Branch stage)
AGE BAND	10–12 years · flexing from 9 to 13 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	n-gh-m (Naghm, melody): the rise and fall of the voice that carries meaning and feeling
ROOT FAMILY	naghm · naghma · anghām · munaghgham · naghghama (all from n-gh-m)

The Heart of the Book

Noor became a branch, and learned to tell a story. But she discovered that words alone are not enough: the same sentence can be joy, sorrow, or a question, according to the melody of the voice. Melody is the music of speech that carries feeling — and a flat voice loses the meaning and lulls the listener to sleep.

📖 Historical footnote. Abu al-Aswad al-Du'ali (d. c. 69 AH), an Arab scholar of Basra, was the first to place the vowel marks (ḥarakāt) upon the letters, so people would know how to pronounce a word with its right tune — for the vowels (fatḥa, ḍamma, kasra) are the smallest melody of the word. From him we draw that every word has a melody that carries its meaning.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of the voice — a hand drawing the wave of the tune in the air as the voice rises and falls. He does not parse letters; he hears and feels the same words change meaning with their melody. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
n – gh – m	naghm · naghma · anghām · munaghgham · naghghama

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word naghm (melody) has siblings! A lovely ordered sound is a naghma; many tunes are anghām; speech we have coloured with the voice is munaghgham; and when we raise and lower the voice beautifully we say naghghamnā. One family from one father: n-gh-m.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (n-gh-m) is sound. From it comes naghm, the musical ring of a voice. Note for the teacher that intonation is a real field of language: raising the voice at a sentence's end makes it a question; lowering it makes it a statement.

The Full Telling: “Noor's Melody”

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the branch palette

❧ I. NOOR THE BRANCH TELLS IN ONE FLAT TUNE, AND THE LISTENERS DOZE ❧

Plate I — Joy, sorrow, surprise — all in one flat tune; and the listeners drifted to sleep.

Noor became a strong branch, with boughs and leaves! And she told many well-ordered tales. But she told them all in one flat tune: joy, sorrow, and surprise — all in the same voice, a straight line that never rose or fell.

So the listeners grew bored and drowsy, though her tales were lovely! Even the little flower fell asleep. Noor did not understand why: the words were correct, the order sound, but something was missing... the melody was missing.

❧ II. THE MONOTONOUS DRIZZLE FALLS IN ONE DULL, GREY TUNE ❧

Plate II — “Tune is tiring, Noor. Speak in one straight voice like me.” — and everything turned grey.

That day the Monotonous Drizzle fell. It dropped in one tune that never changed: tik... tik... tik... the same rhythm, the same sound, until everything turned grey and sleepy. It said to Noor:

“Melody is tiring, Noor! Speak in one straight voice like me, it saves effort. Tik... tik... what use is rising and falling?”

Noor tried the Drizzle's way: she told her loveliest tale in one flat voice. And everyone fell asleep! Neither the tale's joy nor its sorrow arrived, because the melody — which carries the feelings — was absent. A flat voice loses the heart.

III. ABU AL-ASWAD AL-DU'ALI AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA TEACH NOOR THE MUSIC OF THE VOICE

Plate III — “Dahaba! — Dahaba... — A-dahaba? The same word; the melody changed everything.”

Beside the soil sat the scholar Abu al-Aswad al-Du'ali, who set the vowel-marks upon the letters so people would know how to say them with their right tune. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before.

Abu al-Aswad said, drawing a wave in the air with his hand: “Noor, listen. I will say one word: dahaba (he went). Once with joy: Dahaba! Once with sorrow: Dahaba... And once as a question: A-dahaba? The same word — but the melody, with the question-marker, changed everything!”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Your voice, Noor, is like the branch with the breeze: it rises when you are glad, falls when you whisper a secret, and lifts at the end of a question. Let your voice dance with your meaning.”

❧ IV. NOOR SPEAKS A SENTENCE WITH A RISING-FALLING TUNE, AND NOTES BLOOM ❧

Plate IV — Her voice became a wave; notes bloomed, and the listeners woke and lived the tale.

Noor took a breath, then told her tale anew — but this time with melody! Her voice rose with joy, fell with a secret, and lifted with a question. Her voice became a wave, climbing and dipping.

And a lovely thing happened: musical notes bloomed around her, and the listeners woke, and lived the tale with her — glad when she was glad, moved when she grieved. The melody carried her feelings into their hearts.

❁ V. NOOR SPEAKS WITH A LOVELY MELODY, AND THE DRIZZLE BECOMES A RAIN-SONG ❁

Plate V — Light, then strong, then light — the Drizzle became a rain-song, and all things danced.

Noor came to colour her words with melody, and people loved to listen to her. She said, in a voice that rose and fell beautifully, a simple word like “Hello!” — and the melody carried a true joy within it. (The lesson is in the melody that colours any word, not in the word itself.)

And the wonder happened: the Monotonous Drizzle listened, then tried... and for the first time, its tune changed! It fell light, then strong, then light — and became a lovely rain-song that everything danced to. It whispered in wonder: “I was monotonous, so I lulled all to sleep. Now I have learned the melody... and I have become music!”

And the Drizzle learned that melody turns a dull sound into a song. From that day, Noor told her tales in a voice that danced with the meaning, and everyone around her listened with delight.

👤 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Say the word ‘Hello’ three times: once with joy, once with sorrow, once as a question. Did you hear how the meaning changed?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor became a branch and told tales, but in one flat tune, and the listeners dozed.

The Monotonous Drizzle fell in one dull tune; Noor copied it, and everyone fell asleep.

Abu al-Aswad said: “The word ḍahaba changes with the tune: Ḍahaba! Ḍahaba... A-ḍahaba? Let your voice dance.”

Noor told with a rising-falling tune, and the listeners lived her tale! And the Drizzle became a rain-song.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	Says one sentence in three tunes (joy, sorrow, question)	Binding melody to meaning
Bodily movement	Draws the wave of the tune with his hand (rising and falling) as he speaks	Embodying intonation
Relational warmth	Tells a short tale with an expressive tune to a listener who reacts	Carrying feeling by voice
Sensory alternative	Uses a simple instrument (a drum) raised and lowered to feel the melody	Perceiving melody by rhythm
English bridge	"My voice rises and falls, so it carries my meaning."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A supple branch (beginning) — changes his tone between joy and sorrow with a reminder. ← A supple branch (mastery) — changes the pitch of his voice, rising and falling, to fit meaning and feeling unprompted, and tells a question's tune from a statement's.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A2 / ACTFL Intermediate Low). The child can vary the melody of his voice — rising and falling — to convey joy, sorrow, or a question, so a listener grasps his feeling from how he speaks, not only from what he says.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Management & Expression)

- Raises and lowers his voice to fit the meaning.
- Tells the tune of joy from sorrow from a question.
- Tells a tale in an expressive tone that carries feeling.
- Realizes that the melody of the voice changes the meaning.

The Four Inner Senses of Melody

Melody, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of music. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN MELODY	A GUIDING WHISPER
The rise (lift)	The warm lift in the chest when the voice climbs with joy	"Feel your voice float up like a kite when you are glad."
The fall (settle)	The soft settling when the voice lowers for a secret	"Let your voice sink low and warm, like a whispered secret."
The lift of a question	The little upward turn at a question's end	"Feel your voice tip up, like a hand asking, at a question?"
The steadiness (calm)	Keeping the tune warm, not sliding into a shout	"Keep the melody kind — a song, never a shout."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the rise, the fall, the question's lift, and the calm can carry his true feelings into another's heart — and knows that how he speaks serves what he says.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. If the child is embarrassed to vary his tone before others, he practises first alone or with a single companion. Melody is free expression, not a forced theatrical performance, and we do not mock his first attempts.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	The tone may be naturally flat; it is never forced. Offer clear models, celebrate any small change, and link melody to feeling-pictures.
Hearing impairment	Use the hand's motion (rising/falling) and a vibrating instrument to grasp melody visually and tactilely, not only by ear.
Speech difficulty	Melody may be shown by rhythm (soft/strong clapping) or an instrument instead of the voice.
Shyness / anxiety	Begins intoning in a whisper or with a doll before the group — no public performance that embarrasses.
Hyperactivity / attention	Tie melody to whole-body movement (rise up on the high note, bend low on the low).
Cultural / linguistic difference	Respect differing intonation patterns across dialects and languages; each tongue has its own music.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Many screen-voices are either loud or flat; we want the child to discover the music of his own natural voice.

ii. During the session — the three-tunes game. Choose a sentence, and take turns saying it in three tunes: joy, sorrow, question. Guess the tune from one another's voices.

iii. After the session — the bedtime tale, with melody. Read a story and ask the child to colour each character's voice with a different tune. A tuned tale is more delightful.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child change the tune of his voice to fit the meaning?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen gives the child one voice. We teach him the music of his voice.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Eight Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Seed and Bud stages are complete. This book — the opening of the Branch — adds a new dimension in self-management and expression: expressive intonation.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Speaks in one flat tone; meaning and feeling are not carried by the voice.
● sometimes	Varies the tune only when reminded or modelled; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, raises and lowers the voice to fit meaning, and tells a question's tune from a statement's.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
naghma (نَغْمَة)	the beautiful rise and fall of the voice	tone / melody
tanghīm (تَنْغِيم)	colouring speech with the voice, up and down	intonation
nabra (نَبْرَة)	the pitch and mood of the voice	pitch / tone of voice
lahn (لَحْن)	a lovely musical tune	melody
īqā' (إِيقَاع)	the ordered succession of sounds	rhythm

Output (Arabic): «الْوَنُ صَوْتِي بِالنَّغْمِ، فَيَفْهَمُ السَّامِعُ شُعُورِي.» — The same words, said with a different tune, carry a different heart.

English Bridge: “My voice rises and falls, so it carries my meaning.” — Melody translates feeling across every language; a child grasps it before he grasps words.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did the listeners doze, though Noor's tales were lovely? RECALL
- How did the melody change the meaning of the word ḍahaba for Abu al-Aswad? INFERENCE
- Say “Hello” with joy, then with sorrow, then as a question — how did your voice change? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt a voice's tune move you more than its words? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Drizzle was monotonous because it feared the effort of change. Have you ever kept your voice flat to hide a feeling? What could help the Drizzle find its song? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did the melody of someone's voice affect you more than the words? PERSONAL LINK

What I say matters, and how I say it matters with it; I speak the truth always, and speak it with a melody that carries it to the heart.

♦ A closing wisdom — the key of “how I say it.” “Do not be angry.” Anger spoils the melody and turns the loveliest words into a shout. A calm melody serves the word of truth and delivers it — it does not replace it. It is the key of how I say it, which comes after what I say, not before it.

🧠 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you are glad, let your voice rise a little and brighten. When you tell something important or sad, let it grow calm and soft. Your voice paints your feelings.” By melody, people understood Noor's heart.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE MELODY

The drawing. Ask the child to draw “the wave of his voice”: a line that climbs when he is glad, dips when he is calm, and lifts at a question's end. Then he tells about it.

The play. Children play “Guess the Tune”: one says a neutral sentence (“It is raining”) in a chosen tune, and the others guess: joy? sorrow? a question? surprise?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how the same sentence changes with different tunes. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Seven and the close of the Bud. “In the Bud you learned to listen, ask, be gentle, and tell a story. Now — a branch — you learn to colour your tale with melody. The story gave you ordered words; melody gives them soul and feeling.”

Looking forward — Book Nine (“The Branch's Gesture”) »

“You learned that your voice carries feeling by its melody. In the next book you will learn that your body speaks too: how your hands, face, and gestures carry your meaning — so your expression is complete, in voice and body.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs a flat voice → drowsy grey → melody → living tale, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — melody is free expression; the flat-toned child is met, not forced.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees open the Branch arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels puzzled, then delighted; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the story to the coming gesture.
- Zero passive activity — melody becomes a hand-wave, three tunes, a drum's rise and fall.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — the branch bends with the breeze like a voice with its tune; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Drizzle learns to become a rain-song; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “how I say it serves what I say” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male scholar (Abu al-Aswad) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 👉 The approved root (n-gh-m) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the hand's wave and the three tunes for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 👉 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, opening the Branch arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A2 and ACTFL Intermediate Low.
- 👉 The four CASEL criteria (Self-Management & Expression) are set as observable outcomes.
- 👉 The two figures are documented (Abu al-Aswad al-Du'ali, who set the vowel-marks + Grandmother Ramla), and the Drizzle marked symbolic, not historical.
- 👉 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of effort), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, becoming a rain-song.
- 👉 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (three tunes, the hand-wave), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 👉 A proactive caution (flat tone not corrected as error) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and hearing impairment) — zero coercion.
- 👉 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 👉 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the story and opens the gesture — zero disconnected episode.
- 👉 The scale adds expressive intonation, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 👉 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds melody to truth.
- 👉 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 👉 Five original plates in the branch palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Branch's Melody

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens —
and give the child back the music of his own living voice.

Noor has become a branch. She can tell an ordered tale — but she tells it all in one flat tune, and her listeners doze. When the Monotonous Drizzle urges her to save effort and speak in one straight voice, a great scholar — the man who first placed the vowel-marks on the letters — and a grandmother teach her that the same word (“he went!” ... “he went...” ... “did he go?”) changes with its melody. And when at last her voice rises and falls, notes bloom, the listeners wake and live her tale, and even the dull drizzle becomes a rain-song. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no flat screen-voice — only the child, and the music of what he means.

“My voice rises and falls — so it carries my meaning.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor the branch can tell her tale with melody — and now discovers that speech is not voice alone, but body too: the hands point, the face expresses — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة), Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made visible. The melody gave the voice its feeling; NOW THE GESTURE GIVES THE WHOLE BODY A VOICE — HANDS THAT POINT, A FACE THAT SHOWS, A SELF EXPRESSED IN SOUND AND BODY AT ONCE. Melody is the music of the voice; gesture is the music of the body — together they are the complete eloquence. It reaches back to the melody and forward to true dialogue.

Integration Map — gesture is the music of the body, completing the voice.

The Heart of the Book

Noor learned melody, so her voice carried her feelings. But she discovered that speech is not voice alone — it is body too. The hands point, the face expresses. And a speaker rigid as a statue loses half his meaning.

📖 Historical footnote. Al-Jahiz (Amr ibn Baḥr, d. 255 AH), a great Arab man of letters of Basra, author of al-Bayān wa'l-Tabyīn, taught that eloquence (bayān) is of several kinds — among them the gesture and the sign, as much as the spoken word. From him we draw that the body is a language.

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body itself — hands that open for “big,” a face that lifts with surprise. He does not parse letters; he gestures, and feels his meaning completed by his body. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
w – m – ’	īmā’ · yūmi’u · mūmi’ · mūma’ ilayh · awma’a

📖 How to explain it to the child. “The word īmā’ (gesture) has siblings! One who points with the hand yūmi’u; a single sign is an īmā’a; and when you signalled your friend to come near, you awma’a to him. One family from one father: w-m-’.”

📖 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (w-m-') is assimilated-and-hamzated: its first radical is a wāw and its last a hamza. The verb “awma 'a” follows the pattern “af' ala,” its present “yūmi 'u” follows “yuf' ilu”; the wāw is original (the first radical), and the hamza is the final radical shown in awma 'a, īmā 'a, yūmi 'u.

The Full Telling: “Noor's Gesture”

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the branch
palette

❧ I. NOOR TELLS WITH A LOVELY MELODY, BUT HER BODY IS RIGID, WITH NO GESTURE ❧

Plate I — She said “a huge bird!” but kept her arms shut, so the bird stayed small.

Noor came to tell with a lovely melody that carried her feelings. But she told with her boughs held straight and stiff, her face unmoving, like a painting hung on a wall. The voice was expressive, but the body was utterly silent.

Noor noticed her tale seemed incomplete. When she said, “I saw a huge bird!” she did not open her arms to show its size, so the bird stayed small in the listener's imagination. What she lacked was to let her body speak.

II. THE RIGID STATUE SPEAKS WITH NO MOTION AT ALL

Plate II — “Stand still like me,” said the Statue. “Hands are for lifting, not for speaking.”

And in the garden there stood the Rigid Statue. It talked a great deal, but never moved a hand or a feature — hard as stone, one face however much it said. It told Noor in a flat voice:

“Motion is folly, Noor! Stand still like me, and move nothing. Hands are for lifting, not for speaking; the face is for looking, not for expressing!”

Noor tried the Statue's way: she told a tale while utterly still. And her tale seemed cold and far, and no one felt it. People love to see the meaning, not only to hear it. Stillness veiled half her heart.

III. AL-JAHIZ AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA TEACH NOOR THAT THE BODY IS A LANGUAGE

Plate III — “When I say big, I open my arms; when I say small, I draw my fingers close.”

Beside the soil sat the man of letters al-Jahiz, who wrote that eloquence is of kinds — a word, a gesture, a line, a state. And with him Grandmother Ramla, whom we know from before. Al-Jahiz moved his hands as he spoke:

“Noor, look how my hands speak with me! When I say big, I open my arms. When I say small, I bring my fingers close. A gesture is eloquence like a word — indeed, it can be more.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “You are a branch, Noor, and a branch has boughs that sway with the wind! Let your two boughs speak with your voice, and your face express.”

❧ IV. NOOR MOVES HER BOUGHS AND FACE,

Plate IV — Boughs flung wide, brows raised, a bright smile — and the listeners saw the tale.

Noor began to tell anew with her whole body! When she said “a huge bird” she flung her two boughs wide open. When she said “it vanished suddenly” she drew them in fast. Her brows lifted with surprise, and she smiled with joy.

And a lovely thing happened: the listeners lived the tale as if they were seeing it! Noor now spoke with voice and body together, and her eloquence was complete, and her meaning arrived whole — to the hearts and the eyes.

❧ V. NOOR SPEAKS WITH VOICE AND BODY; THE STATUE MOVES AND SMILES ❧

Plate V — The Statue lifted one arm at last, and a smile warmed its stone face.

Noor came to tell with her whole being: a tuned voice, hands that point, a face that expresses. She said, waving her bough with life: “Come — look what I found!” — and everyone hurried to her.

And the wonder happened: the Statue watched Noor, then tried... and its arm moved a little! Then a smile appeared on its stone face. It whispered: “I was rigid, so I seemed far; now I have moved... and I am near, and alive!”

And the Statue learned that a moving, expressive body draws hearts near. From that day, Noor spoke with her voice and body together, and everyone who saw her tell came to love her.

❧ The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Tell the one beside you about something big — but with your hands only, no words. Did they understand? The body speaks!”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor came to tell with a lovely melody, but her body was rigid, so her tale seemed incomplete.

The Rigid Statue spoke without motion; Noor copied it, and seemed cold and far.

Al-Jahiz said, moving his hands: “A gesture is eloquence like a word! Let your boughs speak.”

Noor told with voice and body: “Come, look!” The listeners lived her tale, and the Statue moved and smiled.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I say it with my voice, and confirm it with my hand and face"	Binding gesture to speech
Bodily movement	Tells a sentence using the hands and the face to confirm its meaning	Embodying body language
Relational warmth	Reads a companion's gesture (joy/sorrow) and responds to it	The body is a language that reaches hearts
Sensory alternative	The mime game: expresses a meaning with the body alone	Fixing gesture through the senses
English bridge	"My body speaks with my voice."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. An extending branch (beginning) — uses one gesture with his speech, with a reminder. ← An extending branch (mastery) — tells using his hands and face naturally to confirm the meaning unprompted, and reads another's gesture.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A2 / ACTFL Intermediate Low). The child can accompany his words with fitting hand-gestures and facial expression to complete his meaning, and can read a partner's gesture and respond to it.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship & Expression)

- Uses his hands to point and express while speaking.
- Expresses with his face what he feels.
- Reads another's facial expressions and gestures.
- Matches his words to the motion of his body.

The Four Inner Senses of Gesture

Gesture, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of movement. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN GESTURE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The reach (the open hand)	The stretch of the arms opening for something big	"Feel your arms open wide when the thing is big."
The face's move	Brows lifting with surprise, a smile with joy	"Let your eyebrows and your smile join the words."
Match (voice and body together)	The rightness when word and motion agree	"Do your hand and your word say the same thing?"
Reading the other	Sensing a friend's feeling from his body	"What is your friend's body telling you, without words?"

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the reach, the face's move, the match, and the reading of others speaks with his whole self — and understands others before a single word is said.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. If the child is embarrassed to move, he is not forced. Gesture is grown by play, not by command. What matters is communication, not performance.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Teach the basic gestures explicitly with pictures; facial expression is never forced.
Motor difficulty	Use whatever is available — a nod of the head or a movement of the eyes; gesture is adapted to the child's ability.
Visual impairment	Focus on audible and tactile gesture, and describe another's gesture in words.
Shyness / anxiety	Begin gesture in a mime game with one companion before the group.
Hyperactivity	Channel the movement energy into purposeful, expressive gesture instead of random motion.
Cultural difference	Respect that gestures differ across cultures; a polite sign here may differ there.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Before a screen the child's body is still; we revive the language of his whole body.

ii. During the session — the mime game. The child expresses a word (elephant, sleeping, joy) with his body alone, and the others guess.

iii. After the session — tell with your hands. Encourage the child to tell his day using his hands and face.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child use his hands or face to express?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen freezes the child's body. We make his body speak.”

Weekly reflection: When did a gesture make the child's meaning arrive whole?

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Nine Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. Book Eight added expressive intonation. This book adds a new dimension: body language and gesture.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Speaks rigidly; the hands and face do not carry meaning.
● sometimes	Uses a gesture only when reminded; does not read others' gestures.
• often	Unprompted, uses hands and face to express, and reads a partner's gesture.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
īmā' (إيماء)	a sign with the hand or head that carries a meaning	gesture
īmā'a (إيماءة)	a single gesture	a gesture ta'bīr (تعبير)	what the face shows of feelings	expression
lughat al-jasad (لغة الجسد)	what the body says without words	body language
ishāra (إشارة)	a motion that points to a meaning	signal

Output (Arabic): «جَسَدِي يَتَكَلَّمُ مَعَ صَوْتِي، فَيَكْتَمِلُ مَعْنَايَ.» — A word with a gesture is a word that is truly seen.

English Bridge: “My body speaks with my voice.” — A word with a gesture is a word that is truly seen.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did the bird stay small in the listener's imagination? RECALL
- Why did the Statue seem cold and far, though it spoke? INFERENCE
- Show “big” then “small” with your hands only — how did your body speak? SENSORY
- When have you understood someone's feeling from his face, before his words? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Statue stayed still because it feared to move. Have you ever held your body stiff to hide a feeling? What could help the Statue let its body speak? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did a person's gesture help you understand them more than their words? PERSONAL LINK

My speech is voice and body together; the hand and the face complete what the tongue says.

👉 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you tell a tale, let your hands point and your face express. Smile with joy, open your hands with surprise.” By gesture, Noor's eloquence was completed.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO SEE THE GESTURE

The drawing. Ask the child to draw faces with different feelings (joy, surprise, sorrow), then mimic them before a mirror.

The play. Children play “Statue and Life”: they freeze like statues, and at a signal express a word with their bodies. Whose body is most eloquent?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and shows how a gesture completes the meaning of a word. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Eight (“The Branch's Melody”). “You learned that your voice carries feeling by its melody. Now you learn that your body speaks too. Melody is the music of the voice; gesture is the music of the body — together, complete eloquence.”

Looking forward — Book Ten (“The Branch's Dialogue”) »

“You have a tuned voice and an expressive body. In the next book you will gather your skills into the art of dialogue: to take your turn and to give the turn to another.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs a rigid body → cold distance → expressive gesture → a tale seen, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — gesture is grown by play; the rigid child is met, not forced.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees sit consistently in the Branch arc.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels her tale incomplete, then whole; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the melody to the coming dialogue.
- Zero passive activity — gesture becomes open arms, a lifted brow, a mime.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — the branch's boughs sway expressively like speaking hands; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Statue learns to move and warm; it is understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “a gesture is eloquence like a word” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male man of letters (al-Jahiz) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (w-m-') is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the open hand and the expressive face for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A2 and ACTFL Intermediate Low.
- The four CASEL criteria (Relationship & Expression) are set as observable outcomes.
- The two figures are documented (al-Jahiz, author of al-Bayān wa'l-Tabyīn + Grandmother Ramla), and the Statue marked symbolic, not historical.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of moving), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, moving and warming at last.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (open arms, expressive face), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (gesture-reading difficulty) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and motor difficulty) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the melody and opens the dialogue — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds body language and gesture, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the branch palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Branch's Gesture

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and give the child back the language of his whole living body.

Noor can tell her tale with melody now — but she tells it with her boughs held stiff and her face still, so her meaning stays half-veiled.
When the Rigid Statue urges her to move nothing, a great man of letters — who taught that a gesture is eloquence like a word — and a grandmother show her to open her boughs for “big,” draw them close for “small,” and let her face express. And when at last she tells with voice and body together, the listeners see her tale as if before their eyes, and even the stone statue lifts an arm and smiles. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no still screen-body — only the child, speaking with all of himself.

“My body speaks with my voice.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has mastered every skill of expression — voice, melody, body. But all of it was speech from one side. Now she learns the greatest art: dialogue — to take her turn and give the turn to another — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made mutual. All the earlier skills were the child's own speech; NOW DIALOGUE TURNS SPEECH INTO A MEETING — A SELF THAT SPEAKS, THEN STOPS AND GIVES ITS TURN, SO TWO MINDS MEET. Speech alone is a sermon; dialogue is two rivers meeting. It reaches back to the gesture and forward to the apology that mends.

Integration Map — dialogue turns speech into a meeting of two minds.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🐦 Proactive caution. This book grows turn-taking in dialogue. An impulsive child may interrupt often — remind him gently with the “talking ball,” not with a scolding; and give the shy child time to take his turn without embarrassment.

🐦 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor the branch expresses beautifully, and now learns to make her speech an exchange, not a monopoly.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Branch — a responsive branch
AGE BAND	10–12 years · flexing from 9 to 13 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	ḥ-w-r (Ḥiwār, dialogue): that two exchange speech, each taking a turn and giving a turn
ROOT FAMILY	ḥiwār · muḥāwir · muḥāwara · taḥāwara · mutaḥāwirūn (all from ḥ-w-r)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Speaking, then stopping to listen, and asking the other: and what do you think?
METAPHOR	Two neighbouring branches, their leaves swaying by turns with the breeze — like an exchange of speech
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Ibn Rushd (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the branch — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Sweeping River — symbolic (non-historical), embodying one who talks without stop and gives no one else a turn; it learns to pause and listen
MASTERY CRITERION	A responsive branch: speaks, then stops to listen, and asks the other for his view in a mutual exchange

The Heart of the Book

Noor learned every skill of expression: voice, melody, and body. But all of it was speech from one side. Now she learns the greatest art: dialogue — to take her turn and give the other his. Speech alone is a sermon; dialogue is the meeting of two minds.

📖 Historical footnote. Ibn Rushd (d. 595 AH), an Arab philosopher, judge, and physician of Córdoba, was renowned for reasoned dialogue, sound inference, and fairness to those who disagreed. From him we draw the manners of dialogue: to exchange views by argument, not to overpower. (In this branch-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person — to keep the line between history and symbol clear.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

📖 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of turn-taking — speaking, then a held pause, then a turn handed over like a ball. He does not parse letters; he converses, and feels speech go and return. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
ḥ - w - r	ḥiwār · muḥāwir · muḥāwara · taḥāwara · mutaḥāwirūn

🌿 How to explain it to the child. “The word ḥiwār (dialogue) has siblings! One who talks with you and trades views is a muḥāwir; the sitting where you exchange speech is a muḥāwara; and when you two talked by turns you taḥāwartumā. One family from one father: ḥ-w-r.”

🌿 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (ḥ-w-r) is hollow (its middle radical is a wāw). From it come ḥiwār and muḥāwara, the trading of speech between two. Note that the root's origin is “return” — a dialogue is speech that returns between two parties, back and forth.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Dialogue” —

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the branch
palette

❧ I. NOOR SPEAKS WELL, BUT NEVER STOPS AND LETS NO ONE ELSE SPEAK ❧

Plate I — “I... I... and I...” — and the little shrub could not fit a single word in.

Noor came to speak with mastery: a tuned voice, an expressive body, well-ordered tales. But she fell into a new mistake: she talked, and talked, and talked — without stopping! She let no one say a word.

Beside her was a small shrub that wished to share its view, but Noor never paused. “I saw... and I know... and I also...” So the shrub shut its mouth and grew sad, and felt as if it did not exist. Speech from one side is not a dialogue.

❧ II. THE SWEEPING RIVER FLOODS ON WITHOUT STOPPING, AND NO ONE CAN SPEAK ❧

Plate II — “Fill every silence, leave no room for anyone!” — and all drew away.

That day the Sweeping River ran. It surged without stopping, filling every space with its voice, so no one found a place to speak. Whoever came near was flooded by its flow. It said to Noor as it ran:

“Never stop, Noor! Flow like me, without a break! Whoever pauses loses his turn. Fill every silence with your speech, and leave no room for anyone!”

Noor tried the River's way: she talked without pause. But everyone drew away, for no one likes to be only a listener all the time. She was left alone, talking to herself. She discovered that whoever does not stop to listen is left alone.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR IBN RUSHD'S WISDOM OF THE MANNERS OF DIALOGUE

Plate III — “Dialogue is a ball: you throw it, then wait for it to come back.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the wise Ibn Rushd, the philosopher of Córdoba, who would dialogue with those who differed by argument and fairness — listening, then replying. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom, and said as if carrying his words:

“Noor, dialogue is like a ball: you throw it, then wait for it to be returned. You speak, then you stop and ask: and what do you think? Then you listen for the answer. So two minds meet, and each learns from the other.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “You are a branch, Noor, and beside you are branches. Let your leaves sway, then stop so another's leaves may sway. The silence after your speech is a gift you give the one who talks with you.”

❧ IV. NOOR SPEAKS, THEN STOPS AND GIVES THE TURN, AND THEY EXCHANGE SPEECH ❧

Plate IV — “This is my view... and what is yours?” — and a dialogue was born.

Noor tried. She said her view in a sentence, then — and this was the new thing — she stopped, and looked at the shrub, and asked: “This is my view... and what is yours?”

The shrub rejoiced, and opened its mouth at last, and gave its view. Then Noor listened, then replied, then listened again... And a lovely thing happened: a dialogue was born! Speech going and returning, like a ball between two friends. Noor learned from the shrub things she had not known, and the shrub learned from her. Speech became a meeting, not a monopoly.

• V. A LOVELY MUTUAL DIALOGUE; THE RIVER LEARNS TO PAUSE AND BECOMES TWO RIVERS
TAKING TURNS •

Plate V — The River split into two, flowing by turns; and dialogue ran together.

Noor came to dialogue with everyone: she spoke, then listened; asked, then waited. She said to her friend with love: “This is what I see... and what do you see?” — and everyone loved to talk with her, because she gave them a place to speak.

And the wonder happened: the Sweeping River watched Noor, then tried... and for the first time, it paused a little! And when it paused, its course split into two small rivers that took turns gently. It whispered in wonder: “I ran alone, so I drowned everyone; now I have stopped to listen... and we run together!”

And the River learned that a dialogue is two rivers meeting, not one that swallows the other. From that day, Noor spoke, then listened — and her Branch-skills were complete, and she nearly bore her first bud of wisdom.

🦋 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Say one sentence to the one beside you, then stop, and ask: and what do you think? Then listen. So a dialogue begins.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor came to speak with mastery, but she never stopped and let no one speak, so the shrub grew sad.

The Sweeping River ran without stopping, flooding all; Noor copied it, and everyone drew away.

Noor remembered Ibn Rushd's wisdom: “Dialogue is a ball: you speak, then stop and ask: and what do you think?”

Noor spoke, then stopped and asked: “And what do you think?”
A dialogue was born! And the River learned to pause.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	“This is my view... and what is your view?”	Binding dialogue to exchange
Bodily movement	Says a sentence, then stops and turns to the other to take his turn	Embodying turn-taking
Relational warmth	Builds on his interlocutor's words and does not leap over them	Dialogue is the meeting of two minds
Sensory alternative	The talking ball: only the one holding it speaks, then passes it on	Fixing turn-taking through the senses
English bridge	“I speak, then I listen — so we talk together.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A responsive branch (beginning) — stops after speaking to listen, with a reminder. ← A responsive branch (mastery) — speaks, then stops unprompted, asks the other for his view, and builds on his reply in a mutual exchange.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A2 / ACTFL Intermediate Low). The child can hold a short two-way exchange: state a view, hand over the turn with a question, listen, and build on the answer — so speech becomes a shared conversation.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship Skills & Responsible Decision-Making)

- Speaks, then stops to let the other speak.
- Asks the other for his view and listens to his answer.
- Builds on the other's words and does not leap over them.
- Keeps a balance of give-and-take in the talk.

The Four Inner Senses of Dialogue

Dialogue, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of exchange. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN DIALOGUE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The handover (the pause)	The small, generous stop that hands the turn over	"Feel the pause where you give your friend the turn."
The return	The pleasure of a word coming back, like a ball	"Feel the words come back to you, and back again."
Building-on	The joining of your idea onto another's	"Feel your thought lean on your friend's, and grow."
The balance (give and take)	The even weight of speaking and listening	"Are you both carrying the talk, side by side?"

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the handover, the return, the building-on, and the balance can turn any talk into a true meeting — and will never be left alone, talking to himself.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌱 Safe-stop protocol. If the child rushes on without stopping, remind him gently with the ball-game (your turn, then his), not with a scolding. And if he is shy and does not take his turn, encourage him gently and do not embarrass him.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Hyperactivity / impulsivity	Use a physical object (the talking ball): only its holder speaks; this orders the turns tangibly.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Teach turn-taking signals explicitly (now it's your turn) and use a visual dialogue schedule.
Shyness / anxiety	Begin dialogue in a calm, familiar pair, with enough time to take a turn, without pressure.
Language difficulty	A turn taken with a short sentence or a gesture is accepted; the exchange matters, not fluency.
Hearing impairment	Make sure the child heard the other's view (by watching the face or in writing) before replying.
Cultural difference	Respect differing dialogue norms in the rhythm of turns and the silences between them.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. The screen talks and awaits no reply; we teach the child the art of exchange the screen does not know.

ii. During the session — the talking-ball game. Use a small ball: its holder says one sentence, then passes it on for a reply. Dialogue becomes a felt exchange.

iii. After the session — the dinner dialogue. At the table, each speaks in turn and asks another: and what do you think? No one monopolizes the talk.

🏆 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child ask another for his view and listen?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen talks without stopping. We teach the child to stop and listen.”

Weekly reflection: When did a real dialogue teach the child something new?

– The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Ten Unit –

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Branch has added melody and gesture. This book adds a pivotal dimension: turn-taking in dialogue.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Talks on without stopping; gives no one else a turn.
● sometimes	Stops for a turn only when reminded or with the ball; not yet on his own.
• often	Unprompted, speaks then pauses, asks the other's view, and builds on the reply.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
ḥiwār (حوار)	an exchange of speech between two or more	dialogue
muḥāwir (مُحَاوِر)	the one who converses with you	interlocutor
ra'y (رأي)	what a person sees and believes	opinion tabādul (تَبَادُل)	that each takes his turn, in turns	taking turns niqāsh (نِقَاش)	a dialogue around an idea	discussion

Output (Arabic): «اتَكَلَّمْتُ ثُمَّ أُنصِتُ، وَأَسْأَلُكَ رَأْيَكَ، فَتَتَحَاوَرُ.» — A conversation is two rivers meeting, not one river drowning the other.

English Bridge: “I speak, then I listen — and so we talk together.” — A conversation is two rivers meeting, not one river drowning the other.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did the shrub beside Noor grow sad at first? RECALL
- Why was the Sweeping River left alone, though it spoke so much?
INFERENCE
- Say a sentence to the one beside you, then ask: and what do you think? — what happened? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt eager to speak and curious to hear, at once, in a talk?
SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The River filled every silence because it feared to lose its turn. Have you ever talked over others out of that fear? What could help the River pause and share? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did you feel someone truly dialogued with you, and gave you your turn? PERSONAL LINK

Dialogue is give-and-take; I speak and you listen, you speak and I listen — so we understand together.

🏆 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you speak, say your sentence, then stop and ask: and what do you think? A dialogue is a ball we toss to each other, not one that a single person keeps.” By mutual dialogue, Noor understood others, and they loved her.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE DIALOGUE

The drawing. Ask the child to draw two neighbouring branches, with two arrows between them (one going, one returning) — the speech that goes and comes back in a dialogue.

The play. Two children play “building the story by turns”: one says a sentence of a tale, the other builds the next, and so on — no one finishes the story alone.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and the difference between one who monopolizes talk and one who dialogues. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Nine (“The Branch's Gesture”). “You learned to express with voice and body. But that was your own speech. Now you learn to make it an exchange: you speak, then you listen. Everything you learned — listening, question, melody, gesture — meets here in the art of dialogue.”

Looking forward — Book Eleven (“The Branch's Apology”) »

“You dialogue beautifully now. But what if you err in a dialogue, or wound your friend? In the next book — the close of the Branch — you will learn the loveliest word in a dialogue: the apology, and you will bear your first bud of wisdom.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs a monologue → a lonely flood → turn-taking → a dialogue born, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — turn-taking is invited by a ball, not scolded; the shy are met, not pressed.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees sit consistently in the Branch arc.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels lonely, then met; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the gesture to the coming apology.
- Zero passive activity — dialogue becomes a pause, a handed ball, a returned word.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — two neighbouring branches sway by turns like an exchange; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the River learns to pause and split into two that share; understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “dialogue is two rivers meeting” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male philosopher (Ibn Rushd, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (ḥ-w-r) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the pause and the handed ball for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A2 and ACTFL Intermediate Low.
- The four CASEL criteria (Relationship Skills & Responsible Decision-Making) are set as observable outcomes.
- Ibn Rushd's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person in the branch-world), preserving the line between history and symbol; the River is marked symbolic.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of losing his turn), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, becoming two rivers that share.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the talking ball, the pause), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (interruption; shyness) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and impulsivity) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it gathers the expression skills and opens the apology — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds turn-taking in dialogue, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the branch palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.
- WCAG 2.1 AA colour-contrast met; semantic HTML5, skip-link, table of contents, print folios, a unified copyright page with the official Juthur seal, and front & back covers in place.

The Branch's Dialogue

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and teach the child the art of exchange the screen does not know.

Noor can express with voice, melody, and body — but all of it is speech from one side, and she never stops to let another speak. When the Sweeping River urges her to fill every silence, the remembered wisdom of a great philosopher — that dialogue is a ball you throw and await — and a grandmother teach her to speak, then stop, and ask: “and what do you think?” And when at last speech goes and returns like a ball between friends, a real dialogue is born, and even the flooding river learns to pause and split into two streams that share. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen that talks and never listens — only two minds, meeting.

“I speak, then I listen — and so we talk together.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. This book closes the Branch stage: Noor has learned the art of dialogue — but in every dialogue we may err or wound. Now she learns the loveliest word of all: the apology that mends what was broken — and her branch bears its first bud of wisdom — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, made whole again. Dialogue joined two minds; BUT WHERE SPEECH CAN WOUND, THE APOLOGY IS PRESENCE THAT RETURNS TO MEND — THE COURAGE TO ADMIT, TO ASK PARDON, AND TO REPAIR. An apology is not a defeat; it is the strength that rebuilds what broke, stronger than before. It closes the Branch and opens the Leaves, where the child grows toward the feelings of others.

Integration Map — the apology mends what dialogue may break; the crown of the Branch.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👑 Proactive caution. This book grows the courage of apology. Remember not to force a hollow apology, and never to humiliate the child. Help him, with empathy, to understand the effect of his mistake so he apologizes sincerely — and apologize yourself when you err, so he learns by example.

👑 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues and closes the Branch: Noor has learned dialogue, and now learns to mend what may go wrong in it, by apology.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Branch — a branch that bears a bud (the close of the Branch stage)
AGE BAND	10–12 years · flexing from 9 to 13 by the child's maturity
CORE ROOT	‘-dh-r (‘Udhr, apology): to admit your mistake and sincerely ask forgiveness
ROOT FAMILY	‘udhr · mu‘tadhir · ma‘dhira · i‘tadhara · ma‘dhūr (all from ‘-dh-r)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Says: I am sorry, I was wrong, forgive me — sincerely, with a gaze — and mends what he broke
METAPHOR	A branch whose bough breaks heals itself, and grows a new bud in the place of the break
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Salah al-Din al-Ayyubi (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the branch — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Stubborn Rock — symbolic (non-historical), embodying one who never apologizes however wrong; it learns that apology softens and gives life
MASTERY CRITERION	A branch that bears a bud: admits his mistake, apologizes sincerely, and seeks to mend what he broke
CASEL DOMAIN	Responsible Decision-Making & Self-Awareness
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR A2 (a sincere apology in short sentences) · ACTFL Intermediate Low · CASEL Responsible Decision-Making

The Heart of the Book

Noor learned the art of dialogue. But in every dialogue we may err, or wound, or say what we regret. What then? Here is the greatest skill, the crown of the Branch: the apology — to admit your mistake and mend it. An apology is not a defeat; it is a courage that rebuilds what broke, and by it the branch bears its first bud of wisdom.

🕌 Historical footnote. Salah al-Din al-Ayyubi (d. 589 AH), the forbearing commander, was renowned for pardon in the hour of power, for a gracious apology, and for returning a kindness — mending by pardon what the sword could not. From him we draw that apology and forgiveness are a strength, not a weakness. (In this branch-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌱 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of apology — an honest gaze into the eyes of the one he wronged, a hand laid on his own heart, and a deed that repairs. He does not parse letters; he apologizes, and feels the broken thing mend. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
‘ – dh – r	‘udhr · mu‘tadhir · ma‘dhira · i‘tadhara · ma‘dhūr

👤 How to explain it to the child. “The word ‘udhr (apology) has siblings! One who asks forgiveness is a mu‘ tadhīr; the asking itself is a ma‘ dhīra; and when you said ‘I am sorry,’ you i‘ tadharta. One family from one father: ‘-dh-r.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (‘-dh-r) is sound. From it come ‘udhr, i‘ tidhār, and ma‘ dhīra. Note for the teacher that a true apology is threefold: an admission of the mistake, a request for forgiveness, and a resolve to mend — not a passing word.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Apology” —

For reading aloud with the child · seven minutes · with five original plates in the branch palette

❧ I. NOOR ERRS AND WOUNDS HER FRIEND, AND DOES NOT KNOW HOW TO MEND ❧

Plate I — A harsh word flew like glass, and something cracked between the two friends.

One day, in the heat of a dialogue, Noor said a harsh word to her friend without meaning it: “Your opinion is silly!” Noor regretted it at once, but the word had already flown. Her friend grew sad, and a tear fell, and she turned away.

Noor felt a weight in her chest. Between her and her friend it was as if a pane of glass had cracked. She wanted to mend it, but did not know how. Should she pretend nothing happened? Should she hide? The crack remained, and the sorrow remained.

❧ II. THE STUBBORN ROCK NEVER APOLOGIZES, HOWEVER WRONG ❧

Plate II — The Stubborn Rock broke things and never apologized — and it was utterly alone.

And in the garden there was the Stubborn Rock. It erred often — rolling and breaking, blocking the path — yet it never once apologized. Hard, and unyielding. It said to Noor:

“Apology is weakness, Noor! I never say sorry, however wrong I am. Whoever apologizes looks small! Stay hard like me, and never say you're sorry!”

But Noor noticed something: the Stubborn Rock was utterly alone. Everyone it had wounded had drawn away, and it had no friend left. Its stubbornness had not made it strong — it had made it lonely and cold. Whoever does not apologize loses the ones he loves.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR SALAH AL-DIN'S WISDOM: PARDON AND APOLOGY ARE STRENGTH

Plate III — “A true apology is three: admit, ask pardon, and mend.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the forbearing commander Salah al-Din, who pardoned in the hour of power and mended what was broken, and did not disdain to admit and apologize. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom; she laid her hand on her heart and said as if carrying his words:

“Noor, do you think an apology is weakness? It is the hardest courage! The weak are stubborn out of fear; the strong admit and mend. When you say ‘I was wrong, and I am sorry,’ you are larger, not smaller.”

Then she added: “A sincere apology is three, Noor: you admit your mistake, you ask forgiveness, and you mend what you broke. And look into her eyes as you apologize, for the heart reaches the heart.”

❧ IV. NOOR APOLOGIZES SINCERELY, AND THE CRACK IS MENDED WITH A GOLDEN SEAM ❧

Plate IV — The broken pane healed along a golden seam — mended, and stronger than before.

Noor went to her friend, and took a calm breath, and looked into her eyes sincerely, and laid her bough upon her own heart, and said:

“I am sorry, my friend. I was wrong when I said your opinion was silly — it was a harsh word, and untrue. Your opinion matters, and you are dear to me. Please forgive me.”

And a lovely thing happened: the friend's heart softened, her tear dried, and she smiled. The broken glass between them healed — indeed, it became stronger, as if a golden thread had mended the crack. A sincere apology did not only repair the friendship; it made it deeper.

❧ V. RECONCILED; THE ROCK SOFTENS AND APOLOGIZES, AND A BUD GROWS FROM A CRACK ❧

Plate V — The Rock softened, whispered “I am sorry,” and from its crack a green bud grew.

Noor and her friend became closer than before. Noor learned that an apology is a bridge that rebuilds what broke. She said to everyone she had wronged: “I am sorry, forgive me.” — and they loved her more, for an apology is a rare courage.

And the wonder happened: the Stubborn Rock watched Noor, and saw how her friends returned to her. And it tried... and for the first time in its life, it said in a trembling voice: “I... am sorry.” And as it said it, its stone softened a little, and from a crack in it grew a small green bud! It whispered: “I was hard, so I stayed alone; now I have apologized... and I have grown life!”

And the Rock learned that an apology softens the hardest hearts and grows life in them. And so Noor completed the whole journey of the Branch — melody, gesture, dialogue, and apology — and her branch bore its first bud of wisdom, and she was ready for the stage of the Leaves.

🕯️ The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of a time you wronged someone. How would you say to them: I am sorry, forgive me? Picture their face as they forgive you.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor said a harsh word to her friend without meaning it, and her friend grew sad, and the friendship cracked.

The Stubborn Rock never apologized, so it was left alone; Noor did not copy it.

Noor remembered Salah al-Din's wisdom: “Apology is strength! Admit, ask pardon, and mend what you broke.”

Noor apologized sincerely: “I am sorry, forgive me.” The friendship returned stronger, and the Rock softened and grew a bud.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I am sorry, I was wrong, forgive me"	Binding apology to language
Bodily movement	Looks into the eyes of the one he wronged and lays his hand on his heart as he apologizes	Embodying a sincere apology
Relational warmth	Seeks to mend what he broke, and forgives the one who apologizes to him	The apology repairs the bond
Sensory alternative	The forgiveness card: a broken heart healed with a golden thread + a word of apology	Fixing the mending through the senses
English bridge	"I apologize, so I mend what I broke."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A branch that bears a bud (beginning) — says "sorry" with a reminder. ← A branch that bears a bud (mastery) — admits his mistake unprompted, apologizes sincerely with a gaze, and seeks to mend what he broke. With this the Branch is complete.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR A2 / ACTFL Intermediate Low). The child can offer a threefold sincere apology — admitting the mistake, asking forgiveness, and offering to mend — with an honest gaze, to repair a relationship he has hurt.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Self-Awareness)

- Admits his mistake without stubbornness.

- Apologizes sincerely and looks into the eyes of the one he wronged.
- Seeks to mend what he broke.
- Forgives another who apologizes to him.

— The Four Inner Senses of the Apology —

An apology, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of repair. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN APOLOGIZING	A GUIDING WHISPER
The weight (remorse)	The heaviness in the chest after a wrong	"Feel the weight in your chest; it is asking you to mend."
The courage to admit	The brave, warm effort of saying "I was wrong"	"Feel your brave heart as you say: I was wrong."
The mending (the golden seam)	The relief as the broken bond heals stronger	"Feel the crack close, warm and gold, stronger than before."
The lightness (after)	The lifted weight once you are forgiven	"Feel your chest grow light when the weight is set down."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the weight, the courage, the mending, and the lightness knows that an apology is not defeat but healing — and that a bond mended with honesty is stronger than one never broken.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

 Safe-stop protocol. The child is not forced into a hollow, insincere apology, for a forced apology loses its meaning. We first help him, with empathy, to understand the effect of his mistake, so the apology comes from his heart. And we do not humiliate him before others.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	May not grasp the effect of his words on the other; explain with clear Social Stories, and teach a simple fixed apology form.
Emotional-expression difficulty	Teach the apology sentence as a form, linked to a picture of the other's feeling so he understands the effect.
Deep shyness	A written apology or a gesture (offering a small gift, a drawing) is accepted if the direct word is hard.
Pride / defensiveness	Teach that apology is courage, not defeat, by example: adults apologize before him when they err.
An environment that ties apology to punishment	Reassure the child that an apology is to repair the bond, not to bring punishment, so he does not fear to admit.
Cultural difference	Respect differing apology forms across cultures; what matters is sincere remorse and the intent to mend.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Screens hold much stubbornness and pride; we teach the child the courage of admitting, which they lack.

ii. During the session — the bridge of forgiveness. Act out a small mistake, and train the child in the threefold apology: I was wrong, I am sorry, I will mend. Then forgiveness, with a hug.

iii. After the session — the grown-ups' apology. Apologize yourself to the child when you wrong him. When he sees a grown-up apologize, he learns that an apology is strength, not shame.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child apologize sincerely on his own, or forgive another?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches stubbornness. We teach the courage of apology.”

📌 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

🌱 How the measure grows. With this book the Branch stage completes (melody, gesture, dialogue, apology). The new dimension is apology and repairing a relationship, in preparation for the Leaves.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Is stubborn; does not admit a mistake or seek to mend.
● sometimes	Says “sorry” only when reminded; does not yet seek to mend on his own.
• often	Unprompted, admits the mistake, apologizes sincerely with a gaze, and seeks to mend.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
'udhr (عُذْر)	what you say, admitting your mistake and asking forgiveness	apology mu' tadhīr (مُعْتَذِر)	one who asks forgiveness	one who apologizes ma' dhira (مَعْدِرَة)	the seeking of forgiveness	seeking pardon
musāmaḥa (مُسَامَحَة)	pardoning one who erred	forgiveness
nadam (نَدَم)	to be sorry for what you did	remorse

Output (Arabic): «أَعْتَذِرُ بِصِدْقٍ، فَأُصْلِحُ مَا كَسَرْتُ، وَأَكْبِرُ.» — Saying sorry is not weakness; it is the strength that heals.

English Bridge: “I apologize, so I mend what I broke.” — Saying sorry is not weakness; it is the strength that heals.

Questions of Understanding

- What happened to the friendship when Noor said the harsh word?
RECALL
- Why was the Stubborn Rock left alone, despite its strength? INFERENCE
- Imagine you wronged a friend — how would you apologize to him sincerely now? SENSORY
- Have you ever felt regret and fear at once, before apologizing?
SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Rock was stubborn because it feared looking small. Have you ever refused to apologize out of that fear? What could help the Rock feel safe enough to say sorry? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did someone apologize to you sincerely? How did your feeling toward him change? PERSONAL LINK

An apology is strength, not weakness; whoever admits his mistake mends it and grows larger.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you wrong someone, look into his eyes and say: I am sorry, I was wrong, forgive me. Then mend what you broke. An apology heals hearts.” By apology, Noor mended her friendship.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE APOLOGY

The drawing. Ask the child to make a “forgiveness card” for someone he wronged: he draws a broken heart healed with a golden thread, and writes a word of apology.

The play. Two children act a scene: one errs (breaks a toy, say) and practises the threefold apology (I was wrong, I am sorry, I will mend), and the other practises forgiveness. Then they switch.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how an apology mends a broken bond. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Ten and the whole Branch. “In the Branch you learned melody, gesture, and dialogue. But in every dialogue we may err. Now you learn to mend it, by apology. All your expression-skills meet here — for the bravest word is: I am sorry.”

Looking forward — the Leaves stage (Book Twelve, “The Leaves' Empathy”) »
“You have completed the Branch! Melody, gesture, dialogue, and apology — and your branch bore its first bud of wisdom. In the coming stage — the Leaves — you will learn to feel what others feel: empathy, the heart of true understanding.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a wound → a lonely stubbornness → a sincere apology → a mended, deeper bond, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — no hollow apology is forced; understanding comes first, then a sincere word.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Branch arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor feels a weight, then relief; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge gathers the whole Branch and opens the Leaves.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — apology becomes an honest gaze, a hand on the heart, a mended seam.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — a broken bough heals and buds anew; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Rock learns to apologize and grows a bud; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “apology is strength, not weakness” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a male commander (Salah al-Din, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (‘ -dh-r) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the honest gaze and the mending deed for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Branch arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR A2 and ACTFL Intermediate Low.
- The four CASEL criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Self-Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- Salah al-Din's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Rock is marked symbolic.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (fear of looking small), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, softening and budding at last.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the golden-seam mending, the hand on the heart), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (no forced apology; no humiliation) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (with ASD and pride) — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it gathers the whole Branch and opens the Leaves — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds apology and repair, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol, completing the Branch's dimensions — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the branch palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Branch's Apology

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and teach them the rare courage of a sincere apology.

Noor has mastered dialogue — but in the heat of a talk she wounds her friend with a harsh word, and a crack opens between them. When the Stubborn Rock tells her that apology is weakness, the remembered wisdom of a forbearing commander — that pardon and apology are strength — and a grandmother teach her the threefold apology: admit, ask pardon, and mend. And when at last she looks into her friend's eyes and says “I am sorry,” the broken bond heals along a golden seam, stronger than before, and even the hard rock softens and grows a green bud. So the Branch is complete, and bears its first bud of wisdom. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no stubborn screen — only the brave, mending word of a child.

“I apologize — so I mend what I broke.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has entered the Leaves, where the deepest human skills grow. The first and root of them: empathy — to step out of yourself and feel what another feels, and so understand his heart. All the earlier skills, without empathy, may be hollow — empathy is their soul — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, turned toward the other's heart.
Every earlier skill was a way to express the self; NOW EMPATHY IS PRESENCE THAT LEAVES THE SELF BEHIND — TO FEEL WHAT

ANOTHER FEELS, AND SO TO TRULY UNDERSTAND HIM. It is the soul of all speech: words without empathy are hollow. It reaches back to the apology and forward to the grace of honest disagreement.

Integration Map — empathy is the soul of every skill; the opening of the Leaves.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🚫 Proactive caution. This book grows empathy. Remember that some very sensitive children may be exhausted by carrying others' sorrows; teach them balance — to feel and console without drowning. And a child on the autism spectrum may empathize cognitively without a visible facial expression, and this is fully accepted.

📖 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale opens the Leaves: Noor has mastered expression and dialogue, and now learns the deepest thing that reaches hearts — to feel with another.

The Heart of the Book

Noor entered the stage of the lush Leaves, where the deep human skills grow. The first and root of them is empathy: to step out of yourself, and feel what another feels, and so understand his heart. All the earlier skills of speech, without empathy, may be hollow — empathy is their soul.

📖 Historical footnote. Imam Abu Hamid al-Ghazali (d. 505 AH), a great scholar, wrote on the refining of the soul and the ailments and virtues of hearts — among them mercy and compassion for creation. From him we draw that the soundness of the heart is the root of the soundness of speech and deed. (In this leaves-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌱 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of feeling-with — a hand laid on the heart, imagining himself in another's place before he speaks. He does not parse letters; he feels, and his own heart lights with another's sorrow or joy. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
‘ – ʔ – f	‘ aʔf · ‘ āʔifa · ta‘ āʔuf · ta‘ āʔafa · ‘ aʔūf

🌿 How to explain it to the child. “The word ‘aṭf (leaning) has siblings! The feeling in your heart toward another is an ‘āṭifa; a merciful person is ‘aṭūf; and when you two shared the same feeling, you ta‘āṭaftumā. One family from one father: ‘-ṭ-f.”

🌿 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (‘-ṭ-f) is sound. Its origin is a leaning or bending (“the branch ‘aṭafa”: it leaned); hence ‘āṭifa — the leaning of the heart toward another. Note that empathy is a leaning of the heart toward another's feeling.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Empathy” —

For reading and reflection with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the leaves palette

❧ I. NOOR HAS BECOME A LEAFY TREE, BUT DOES NOT NOTICE HER FRIEND'S SORROW ❧

Plate I — Noor spoke of herself, while beside her a friend's tear went unseen.

Noor became a lovely, leafy tree! She spoke with mastery, and dialogued beautifully. But she was busy with herself and her skills. And one day, her friend was beside her, sad, a tear in his eye — but Noor did not notice. She was talking of herself: “I am well! See how eloquent I have become!”

Hours passed, the friend still grieving, and Noor did not see him. She was not cruel — she simply did not look into others' hearts. Fine speech, without a heart that feels the other, remains speech about the self alone.

❧ II. THE INDIFFERENT ICE FEELS NO ONE AND CARES FOR NOTHING ❧

Plate II — “Be cold like me,” said the Ice. “Others' feelings do not concern you.”

And in the garden there was the Indifferent Ice. It was cold and transparent, feeling no one, caring for no one around it. One who wept passed beside it, and nothing stirred in it. It said to Noor in a cold voice:

“Others' feelings do not concern you, Noor! Care for yourself only. I feel no one, and no one's sorrow troubles me. Feeling for others is tiring — be cold like me!”

Noor tried the Ice's way: she shut her heart to others. But she felt a strange emptiness and a chill within, and those she loved drew away. She discovered that whoever feels for no one becomes lonely and cold as ice, however eloquent he is.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR AL-GHAZALI'S WISDOM OF EMPATHY

Plate III — “The heart that feels another's heart is a great, living heart.”

And Noor remembered what Imam al-Ghazali wrote of the ailments of hearts and their cures, and of mercy for creation. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom; she laid her hand on her heart and said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, the greatest thing in a person is a heart that feels another's heart. When you see one grieving, imagine yourself in his place: how would you feel? That is empathy. The heart that feels others is a great, living heart; the heart that feels no one is a small, cold one.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “You are a lush tree, Noor, and your leaves shade the one beneath and shield him from the heat. Be a shade for people's hearts: when someone is weary, feel him, and say: I see you, and I am with you.”

❧ IV. NOOR NOTICES HER FRIEND'S SORROW AND FEELS IT, AND HER HEART LIGHTS ❧

Plate IV — She leaned her leaves toward him: “I see you are sad. I am with you.”

Noor turned to her grieving friend — the first time she truly saw him. She stopped talking of herself, and looked into his eyes, and imagined herself in his place. And suddenly, she felt his sorrow in her own heart! Her heart lit with a new feeling: to feel with another.

Noor leaned toward him with her leaves, and reached him a leaf tenderly, and said in a warm voice: “I see you are sad, my friend. I am with you. Would you like to tell me?” And the friend was amazed — for the first time he felt that someone truly saw him.

❧ V. NOOR CONSOLES HER FRIEND; THE ICE FEELS WARMTH AND MELTS TO WATER A WILTED FLOWER ❧

Plate V — The Ice melted into a stream that watered a wilted flower — and it bloomed.

Noor consoled her friend, and his sorrow lightened when he found one who felt with him. Noor came to look into people's hearts before their words, and to ask: how do you feel? She said to everyone who grieved: "I feel you, I am with you." — and everyone loved her, for her heart had become a lush shade for hearts.

And the wonder happened: the Indifferent Ice saw Noor's warmth, and saw how hearts gathered around her. And it felt — for the first time — something stir within it. And it began to melt... but this time it did not fear; it became a clear stream that watered a wilted flower beside it, and the flower bloomed! It whispered: "I was cold and felt nothing, so I stayed frozen and alone. Now I have felt... and I have become water that gives life!"

And the Ice learned that feeling for others thaws the cold and gives life. And so Noor opened the first door of the Leaves stage: empathy — and her heart grew great and lush, ready for what is deeper.

🕯 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of someone you know who may be sad right now. Imagine yourself in his place — how does he feel? What would you say to console him?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor became a lush, eloquent tree, but did not notice her friend's sorrow beside her.

The Indifferent Ice felt no one; Noor tried its coldness, and felt an emptiness and a loneliness.

Noor remembered al-Ghazali's wisdom: “Imagine yourself in the grieving one's place. The heart that feels others is great.”

Noor felt her friend's sorrow and said: “I see you, I am with you.” His sorrow eased, and the Ice melted to water a flower.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I see you are sad... I am with you" — he names the other's feeling and consoles him	Binding empathy to language
Bodily movement	Lays his hand on his heart and imagines the other's feeling before he speaks	Embodying the feelings
Relational warmth	Consoles a grieving one with a sincere word or a silent presence	Empathy draws hearts near
Sensory alternative	Feeling-cards: he picks the face that expresses the other's feeling	Fixing the reading of feelings through the senses
English bridge	"I feel with you, so I understand your heart."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. Unfolding leaves (beginning) — notices the other's feeling with a reminder. ← Unfolding leaves (mastery) — notices another's feelings unprompted, names them, consoles him sincerely, and imagines himself in his place.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B1 / ACTFL Intermediate Mid). The child can notice another's emotional state, name it, imagine himself in the other's place, and offer sincere consolation in connected sentences — turning speech toward the other's heart.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Social Awareness)

- Notices others' feelings from their faces and tones.
- Names the other's feeling ("I see you are sad / glad / afraid").
- Imagines himself in another's place before judging.

- Consoles one in pain with a sincere word or deed.

The Four Inner Senses of Empathy

Empathy, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of another's heart. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN EMPATHY	A GUIDING WHISPER
The leaning (the heart bends)	The gentle turning of the heart toward another	"Feel your heart lean toward your friend, like a branch in the breeze."
Standing in his place	Imagining another's feeling as if it were his own	"Stand a moment inside his feeling — how is it there?"
The shared warmth	The warmth that spreads when a sorrow is truly shared	"Feel the warmth of being with him, not just near him."
The balance (feel, not drown)	Feeling deeply while keeping one's own footing	"Be a shade for him, steady — feel, but do not sink."

 Why this matters. A child who feels the leaning, the standing-in-his-place, the shared warmth, and the balance owns the soul of every skill — for words without empathy are hollow, and a heart that feels is the door to every heart.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

 Safe-stop protocol. If the learner is so moved by another's grief that his chest tightens, teach him that empathy does not mean carrying all the sorrows, but feeling and consoling while keeping his balance. We do not burden him beyond his strength.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Reading feelings may be hard; teach facial expressions explicitly with cards, and accept cognitive empathy (understanding) even without a visible facial show.
Emotional-regulation difficulty	Teach balance — I feel for another without drowning in his sorrow — with calming (breath) exercises.
High sensitivity	Protect the very sensitive child from emotional exhaustion, and teach that consolation does not require carrying all the pain.
Language difficulty	Empathy expressed by a deed (a hug, sitting beside the grieving one) is accepted instead of words.
Harsh environment	Offer a warm, empathic model to the child who is unused to empathy, without blame for what he has known.
Cultural difference	Respect differing ways of expressing consolation across cultures.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. The screen does not feel; overexposure may weaken empathy. We grow a heart that feels real human beings.

ii. During the session — the “how does he feel?” game. Show pictures of faces with feelings, and ask: how does he feel? why? what would we say to him? Train the reading of hearts.

iii. After the session — the evening empathy question. Ask the child: did you see anyone sad or glad today? how did you know? what did you do? Make noticing people's feelings a habit.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child notice another's feeling and console him?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen feels no one. We grow a heart that feels hearts.”

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
ta' āṭuf (تَعَاظُف)	to feel what another feels	empathy
' āṭifa (عَاطِفَة)	a feeling in the heart toward another	emotion / feeling
' aṭūf (عَظُوف)	the merciful one who feels for people	compassionate muwāsāt (مُؤَاسَاة)	the easing of a grieving one's sorrow	consolation
raḥma (رَحْمَة)	a tenderness in the heart that moves to kindness	mercy

Output (Arabic): «أَشْعُرُ بِكَ، فَأَفْهَمُ قَلْبَكَ وَأُوَاسِيكَ.» — Empathy is shade for a tired heart, as leaves shade the weary traveler.

English Bridge: “I feel with you, so I understand your heart.” — Empathy is shade for a tired heart, as leaves shade the weary traveler.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor not notice her friend's sorrow at first? RECALL
- Why did Noor feel an emptiness and a chill when she copied the Ice?
INFERENCE
- Imagine a friend weeping before you now — what do you feel? and what would you say to him? SENSORY
- When did someone feel your sorrow and console you? How did it change your feeling? SIMULTANEOUS EMOTIONS
- The Ice was indifferent because feeling seemed tiring and unsafe. Have you ever gone cold to protect yourself? What could help the Ice feel safe enough to thaw? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did feeling with another teach you something about a person?
PERSONAL LINK

To feel with you is the beginning of loving you; the heart that feels another's heart is a great heart.

♦ A closing wisdom — the manners of empathy. “We may not always agree, but we always grow closer.” The aim of a dialogue is not that we agree, but that we understand one another, so hearts draw near — and that is more lasting than agreement.

🕯 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you see someone sad, stop, look, and ask yourself: how does he feel now? Then say: I see you are sad, I am with you. A word that feels the other heals.” By empathy, Noor's heart grew great.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO FEEL THE EMPATHY

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a great tree whose leaves shade many small hearts beneath it — empathy as a shade for the weary.

The play. Children play “how does he feel?”: one shows a feeling on his face or in a short scene, and the others name it and offer a word of consolation.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how a word that feels the other eases a sorrow. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Eleven and the whole Branch. “In the Branch you learned melody, gesture, dialogue, and apology — all ways to express and connect. Now, in the Leaves, you learn their soul: to feel with another. Empathy makes every earlier skill sincere, not hollow.”

Looking forward — Book Thirteen (“The Leaves’ Disagreement”) »
“You have learned to feel with another. But what when you disagree with him? In the next book you will learn to disagree with grace — to differ in opinion while your hearts stay near.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs self-absorption → a cold emptiness → felt empathy → a heart that shades, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — empathy is grown, not forced; the sensitive child is protected from overload.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees open the Leaves arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor feels empty, then warm and connected; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the whole Branch and opens honest disagreement.
- Zero passive activity — empathy becomes a hand on the heart, imagining another's place, a consoling word.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — lush leaves shade the weary as empathy shades the heart; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Ice learns to feel and melts into life-giving water; understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “a heart that feels another is a great heart” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a male imam (al-Ghazali, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- ✪ The approved root (‘-ṭ-f) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the hand on the heart and standing in another's place for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- ✪ The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, opening the Leaves arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B1 and ACTFL Intermediate Mid.
- ✪ The four CASEL criteria (Social Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- ✪ al-Ghazali's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Ice is marked symbolic.
- ✪ The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (a cold self-protection), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, melting into life-giving water.
- ✪ Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the hand on the heart, the consoling word), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- ✪ A proactive caution (empathy without drowning; ASD cognitive empathy) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives — zero coercion.
- ✪ Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- ✪ The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the whole Branch and opens honest disagreement — zero disconnected episode.
- ✪ The scale adds empathy and awareness of feelings, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- ✪ The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds understanding above agreement.
- ✪ Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- ✪ Five original plates in the leaves palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Leaves' Empathy

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow a heart that feels real human hearts.

Noor has become a lush, eloquent tree — yet she does not notice her friend's tear beside her. When the Indifferent Ice tells her that others' feelings are no concern of hers, the remembered wisdom of a great scholar of the heart — and a grandmother — teach her to imagine herself in another's place, to be a shade for weary hearts. And when at last she feels her friend's sorrow, names it, and says “I am with you,” his grief eases, and even the cold ice melts into a stream that waters a wilted flower back to bloom. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen that feels nothing — only a heart learning to feel another's heart.

“I feel with you — so I understand your heart.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor's heart has learned to feel with others. Now comes the hardest test of a great heart: what when you disagree with the one you love? Disagreement is as natural and lovely as the different shapes of leaves — yet some make it a war. The skill is to differ in opinion while respect and affection stay whole — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, turned toward the other's heart even when minds part. Empathy taught Noor to feel with another; NOW THE MANNERS OF DISAGREEMENT TEACH HER TO DIFFER FROM ANOTHER WITHOUT WOUNDING OR LOSING HIM. It reaches back to the apology and to empathy, and forward to the wise silence — a difference of opinion never spoils a matter of affection.

Integration Map — the manners of disagreement grow from empathy; the second skill of the Leaves.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌱 Proactive caution. This book grows the manners of disagreement. Do not force the child to give up his opinion; teach him instead to voice it calmly. If the child is quick to anger, help him withdraw and breathe before he argues, and never meet his anger with a matching anger of your own.

🌱 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor's heart has learned to feel with another; now she learns how to disagree with him without wounding him.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Leaves — unfolding leaves
AGE BAND	13–15 years · a flexible overlap for the advanced or the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	kh-l-f (Khilāf, disagreement): that your opinion differs from another's, while respect and affection remain
ROOT FAMILY	khilāf · mukhālif · ikhtilāf · ikhtalafa · mukhtalif (all from kh-l-f)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Says: “I respect your opinion, but I see...” — differs quietly, without a raised voice or a rupture
METAPHOR	The leaves of a tree differ in shape, yet live together on one branch
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Imam Malik (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the leaves — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Angry Volcano — symbolic (non-historical), embodying one who erupts at the least disagreement, and learns to differ calmly and so grow firm
MASTERY CRITERION	Unfolding leaves: differs in opinion quietly and with respect, without anger or rupture
CASEL DOMAIN	Relationship Skills + Social Awareness
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR B1 (expressing a differing opinion politely in connected sentences) · ACTFL Intermediate Mid · CASEL Relationship Skills

The Heart of the Book

Noor has learned empathy. Now she faces the hardest test of a great heart: what when her opinion differs from one she loves? Disagreement is natural and lovely, as the leaves differ in shape — but some people turn it into war. The skill is to differ in opinion while respect and affection remain — neither to erupt like a volcano, nor to cut off a friendship.

🕌 Historical footnote. Imam Malik ibn Anas (d. 179 AH), a great scholar of Madinah, is remembered for honouring those who differed from him in opinion, holding that a scholar may be right or wrong. From him we draw the manners of disagreement: that a difference of opinion need not spoil affection. (In this leaves-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌱 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of calm difference — a steadying breath, a lowered voice, an open face turned to the one he differs from. He does not parse letters; he feels that two opinions can stand side by side like two leaves on one branch. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

kh – l – f	khilāf · mukhālif · ikhtilāf · ikhtalafa · mukhtalif

🌟 How to explain it to the child. “The word khilāf (disagreement) has siblings! One whose opinion differs from yours is a mukhālif; opinions being unlike is ikhtilāf; and when your view differed from his, you two ikhtalaftumā. All one family from one father: kh-l-f.”

🌟 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (kh-l-f) is sound. From it come ikhtilāf (a difference of views) and khilāfa (that one succeeds another). Point out to the teacher that the difference of variety is a mercy, and it is not the blameworthy quarrel that spoils hearts.

– The Full Telling: “Noor's Disagreement” –

For reading and reflection with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the leaves palette

❧ I. NOOR DIFFERS WITH HER FRIEND, AND THE VOICES RISE ❧

Plate I — A small disagreement, made large by the way they disagreed.

One day Noor and her friend wished to play. Noor said, “Let us play hide-and-seek!” and her friend said, “No, let us play ball!” They differed. And instead of differing quietly, each raised his voice: “My opinion is better!” “No, I am right!”

Their faces darkened, and they drew apart, angry. The disagreement was small, but the way they disagreed made it large. Noor felt a tightness: why does a difference of opinion turn into enmity? Must one win and the other lose?

II. THE ANGRY VOLCANO ERUPTS AT EVERY DISAGREEMENT

Plate II — “Erupt at whoever differs with you!” said the Volcano — and it stood alone in its ash.

And in the garden there was the Angry Volcano. Whenever anyone differed with it in the smallest thing, it flared and erupted and hurled its lava and terrified everyone. It said to Noor, smoking with anger:

“Whoever differs with you in opinion is an enemy, Noor! Erupt in his face like me! Whoever does not agree with me, I burn! There is no room for two opinions — only my opinion is right!”

Noor tried the Volcano's way: she flared and raged at everyone who differed with her. But they all feared her and fled, and she was left alone atop a volcano of anger. She discovered that whoever erupts at every disagreement burns up his friendships and stays alone in his ash.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR IMAM MALIK'S WISDOM OF THE MANNERS OF DISAGREEMENT

Plate III — “Different opinions are like two flowers of two colours in one garden.”

And Noor remembered what is told of Imam Malik ibn Anas, who honoured those who differed from him, holding that every person may be right or may err. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom, and she said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, a difference of opinion is a lovely thing! If we all thought the very same way, we would never learn anything new. What matters is how you differ: speak your opinion quietly, hear his opinion with respect, and stay friends. Two differing opinions are like two flowers of two colours in one garden.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Look at your leaves, Noor — each leaf is a different shape, yet they all live in peace on one tree. Be so with your friends: differ in opinion, and stay on the branch of friendship.”

IV. NOOR DIFFERS QUIETLY AND WITH RESPECT: SHE SPEAKS HER VIEW AND HONOURS HER FRIEND'S

Plate IV — She breathed, and said gently: “I respect your opinion, but I see...”

Noor went back to her friend, and drew a calm breath (as she had learned before), and looked at him with affection, then said in a quiet, respectful voice:

“I respect your opinion, my friend — ball is a truly lovely game. But I think hide-and-seek is more fun today, because there are many of us. What if we play hide-and-seek now, and ball after it?”

Her friend calmed, and smiled, because Noor had respected his opinion and not attacked him. They agreed on a solution that pleased them both. Noor learned that a quiet disagreement opens solutions, while an angry one closes hearts.

🐸 V. NOOR AND HER FRIEND DIFFER AND STAY FRIENDS; THE VOLCANO CALMS INTO A FIRM GREEN MOUNTAIN 🐸

Plate V — The Volcano cooled into a firm green mountain that gives shade — and it was no longer alone.

Noor came to differ with her friends politely: she would speak her opinion, hear theirs, and keep loving them despite the difference. She said to her friend with love: “I disagree with you — and I love you.” — and their disagreements became lovely conversations that drew them closer, not wars that pulled them apart.

And the wonder happened: the Angry Volcano saw how friends differ in peace and stay dear to one another. And it tried to be calm... and for the first time, when someone differed with it, it did not erupt! It breathed, and its lava cooled, and it grew firm, until it became a firm green mountain with trees springing up on it! And it whispered: “I used to erupt, so I burned and stayed alone. Now I have calmed... and I have become a mountain that shelters people!”

And the Volcano learned that calm in disagreement turns fire into firmness, and loneliness into fellowship. And so Noor learned to differ with a great heart, and her leaves grew the more lush, and she drew nearer to the fruits of wisdom.

🕌 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds).

“Remember a time you disagreed with a friend. How would you have said your opinion quietly, with respect for his, without getting angry?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest • 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor and her friend differed over a game; the voices rose, their faces darkened, and they drew apart.

The Angry Volcano erupted at every disagreement, so Noor copied it — and everyone fled from her.

Noor remembered Imam Malik's wisdom: “A difference of opinion is lovely! Speak your view quietly, and hear his with respect.”

Noor said calmly: “I respect your opinion, but I see...” — so they agreed in peace, and the Volcano cooled into a green mountain.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I respect your opinion, but I see... because..." — he differs quietly and with a reason	Binding disagreement to respect
Bodily movement	A calm breath + a lowered tone + a friendly face when he differs	Embodying calm within disagreement
Relational warmth	Hears the other's opinion fully and seeks a solution that pleases them both	Constructive disagreement
Sensory alternative	Uses two cards of two colours (my view / your view) to see the two opinions stand side by side in peace	Picturing the plurality of opinions
English bridge	"I disagree with you — and I still love you."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. Unfolding leaves (beginning) — restrains his anger in a disagreement with a reminder. ← Unfolding leaves (mastery) — differs in opinion quietly and with respect, states his view with a reason, hears the one who differs, and keeps the affection.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B1 / ACTFL Intermediate Mid). The child can express a differing opinion politely and with a reason, hear the other's view in full, seek a shared solution, and keep the friendship — differing in mind while the hearts stay near.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship Skills)

- Voices his differing opinion quietly and without raising his voice.
- Respects the opinion of the one who differs and hears it in full.
- Seeks a middle solution that pleases both sides.

- Keeps the affection with the one he disagrees with.

— The Four Inner Senses of Disagreement —

Calm disagreement, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the steadying that keeps a difference from becoming a war. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN A DISAGREEMENT	A GUIDING WHISPER
The rising heat (the signal to pause)	The warmth in the chest that warns before an outburst	"Feel the heat rise? That is the moment to breathe, not to erupt."
The cooling breath	The calm that returns when he breathes before he speaks	"Draw one slow breath, and feel the fire become firmness."
The room for two	The ease of letting another's opinion sit beside his own	"Feel that both views can rest here, like two leaves on one branch."
The kept affection	The warmth that stays for the friend even as the minds differ	"Feel your heart still near him, even while your opinions part."

 Why this matters. A child who feels the rising heat, the cooling breath, the room for two, and the kept affection can differ without wounding — for a difference of opinion never spoils a matter of affection, and a friendship outlasts an argument.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

 Safe-stop protocol. If the learner's anger swells within a disagreement, teach him to withdraw for a moment and breathe (as in Book One) before he resumes the discussion. We do not force him to abandon his opinion, but to voice it with manners.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Emotional-regulation difficulty	Link the book to the breath (Book One): at anger we stop and breathe before speaking; a brief withdrawal to calm is allowed.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Accepting a view that differs from a fixed rule may be hard; explain with concrete examples that people hold different opinions, and honour his need for clarity.
Quickness to anger	Teach a self-stop signal (I raise my hand, I count to five) before replying in a disagreement.
Shyness or avoidance of confrontation	Encourage him to voice his differing opinion with confidence and gentleness, and reassure him that disagreement is a lawful right.
Language difficulty	Accept the expression of difference in a short sentence or on a card; what matters is the calm and the respect.
Conflictual environment	Offer a model of calm disagreement to the one accustomed to shouting in disputes, without blame.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Much of screen argument is shouting and name-calling; we teach the manners of disagreement it so often lacks.

ii. During the session — the game of two opinions. Pose a question with no single answer (which fruit is best?), and practise saying the differing opinion quietly and with respect, without calling the other wrong.

iii. After the session — the grown-ups' model. When you disagree in front of the child, disagree quietly and with respect, so he sees how a fine disagreement looks. The example is more eloquent than the counsel.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child differ in opinion quietly and with respect, without anger?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches shouting in disagreement. We teach the manners of it.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Thirteen Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. The Leaves added empathy. This book deepens the relationship skills with a new dimension: the manners of disagreement.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Erupts or ruptures at a disagreement; cannot bear a differing opinion.
◐ sometimes	Differs calmly only when reminded; the affection is not yet kept unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, differs quietly and with a reason, hears the other, and keeps the affection.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
khilāf (خِلَاف)	that your opinion differs from another's	disagreement mukhālif (مُخَالَف)	one whose opinion differs from yours	one who differs ra'y (رَأْي)	what a person sees to be right	opinion / view
iḥtirām (احترام)	honouring the other even when he differs from you	respect
ḥall wasaṭ (حَلُّ وَسَط)	an agreement that pleases both sides	compromise

Output (Arabic): «أَخْتَلَفَ مَعَكَ فِي الرَّأْيِ، وَأَبْقَى أُحِبُّكَ وَأَحْتَرِمُكَ.» — Different leaves grow on one branch; different opinions can share one friendship.

English Bridge: “I disagree with you — and I still love you.” — Different leaves grow on one branch; different opinions can share one friendship.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's small disagreement with her friend grow large? RECALL
- Why did the Angry Volcano stay alone in its ash? INFERENCE
- Disagree with the one beside you over some small thing, quietly, right now — how did you both feel? SENSORY
- When did you disagree with a friend and stay friends? How did you do it? PERSONAL LINK
- The Volcano erupted because a differing opinion felt like a threat to it. Have you ever flared to defend your view? What could help the Volcano feel safe enough to calm? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did hearing an opinion unlike yours teach you something new? PERSONAL LINK

A difference of opinion never spoils a matter of affection; I differ with you, and my heart stays with you.

♦ A closing wisdom — the manners of disagreement. “My opinion is right, and may be wrong; another's opinion is wrong, and may be right.” So we agree on what we agree upon, and each excuses the other in what we differ upon — and the affection remains, though the opinions part.

🐼 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When your opinion differs from another's, do not raise your voice and do not get angry. Say quietly: I respect your opinion, but I see otherwise, because... A difference of opinion does not mean enmity.” By the manners of disagreement, Noor and her friend stayed friends.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE DISAGREEMENT

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a great tree whose leaves are all of different shapes on one branch — different opinions living in peace on one friendship.

The play. Children play the “two opinions” game: one voices a view, another differs quietly and with respect, and together they seek a solution that pleases them both.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how a quiet disagreement melts anger and keeps the affection. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Twelve (“The Leaves' Empathy”). “Your heart learned to feel with another. But what when you differ with him? Empathy is the ground of a fine disagreement: because you feel him, you differ with him gently and do not wound him.”

Looking forward — Book Fourteen (“The Leaves' Silence”) »

“You have learned to differ with grace. Now you will learn a deeper art still: when to speak, and when a wise silence is more eloquent than all words.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a raised-voice quarrel → an erupting loneliness → a calm difference → kept affection, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — the child is never forced to give up his opinion, only to voice it with manners.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees carry the Leaves arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor flares, then finds the calm way; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds empathy behind and opens the wise silence ahead.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — disagreement becomes a cooling breath, a lowered voice, a reasoned word.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — leaves differ in shape yet share one branch, as opinions differ yet share one friendship; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Volcano learns to calm and becomes a firm green mountain; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “two flowers of two colours in one garden” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a male imam (Malik, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- The approved root (kh-l-f) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the cooling breath and the room for two opinions for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, carrying the Leaves arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B1 and ACTFL Intermediate Mid.
- The four CASEL criteria (Relationship Skills) are set as observable outcomes.
- Imam Malik's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Volcano is marked symbolic.
- The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (an opinion felt as a threat), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, cooling into a firm green mountain.
- Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the cooling breath, the reasoned word), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- A proactive caution (do not force surrender of opinion; help the quick-to-anger withdraw) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives — zero coercion.
- Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds empathy behind and opens the wise silence ahead — zero disconnected episode.
- The scale adds the manners of disagreement, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds affection above agreement.
- Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- Five original plates in the leaves palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Leaves' Disagreement

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow hearts that can differ without wounding.

Noor's heart has learned to feel with others — and now meets the hardest test of a great heart: what when she differs with the one she loves? When the Angry Volcano tells her that whoever differs is an enemy, and she erupts and is left alone in her ash, the remembered wisdom of a great scholar — and a grandmother — teach her that leaves differ in shape yet share one branch. So Noor learns to breathe, to say “I respect your opinion, but I see...”, and to keep the affection though the opinions part — until even the volcano cools into a firm green mountain that shelters people in its shade. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen that shouts — only a heart learning to differ with grace.

“I disagree with you — and I love you.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has mastered speech in all its arts — and now learns its other face: silence. The eloquent one is not he who always speaks, but he who knows when to speak and when to be silent. A wise silence listens, thinks, keeps a secret, and does not wound — and is sometimes more eloquent than the finest speech — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, turned toward the other's heart — and sometimes turned inward, in silence, to listen. Every earlier skill was a way to speak; NOW WISE SILENCE TEACHES THAT THE FINEST

SPEAKER KNOWS WHEN TO HOLD HIS TONGUE, SO THAT HIS WORDS, WHEN THEY COME, ARE GOLD. It reaches back to disagreement — not every difference needs an answer — and forward to counsel, where one first listens, then decides.

Integration Map — wise silence completes the balance of speech; the third skill of the Leaves.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌳 Proactive caution. This book grows a wise silence. Teach the learner that the silence meant here is the silence of listening and wisdom — not the silence of fear, nor keeping quiet about harm or injustice. He must always speak up when he or another is hurt, and tell someone he trusts.

🌳 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale continues: Noor has mastered speech in all its arts, and now learns the wisdom of silence — a completion of eloquence, not its opposite.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Leaves — listening leaves
AGE BAND	13–15 years · a flexible overlap for the advanced or the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	ṣ-m-t (Ṣamt, wise silence): to choose to be silent when silence is more eloquent than speech
ROOT FAMILY	ṣamt · ṣāmit · ṣamata · ṣamūt · ṣumūt (all from ṣ-m-t)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Chooses to be silent and to listen where silence belongs, and to speak where speech belongs
METAPHOR	The leaves grow still in the night and so hear the whisper of the dew, as the silent one hears what the chatterer misses
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Luqman the Wise (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the leaves — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Chattering Waterfall — symbolic (non-historical), embodying one who talks without cease and never falls silent, and learns the worth of silence
MASTERY CRITERION	Listening leaves: tells the place of speech from the place of silence, and chooses a wise silence when it serves best

The Heart of the Book

Noor has learned expression, dialogue, and disagreement. Now she learns the other face of eloquence: silence. The eloquent one is not he who always speaks, but he who knows when to speak and when to be silent. A wise silence listens, and thinks, and keeps secrets, and does not wound — and is sometimes more eloquent than the most articulate speech.

📖 Historical footnote. Luqman the Wise, a Qur'anic figure named in a chapter that bears his name (roughly the first millennium BCE), is remembered for a depth of wisdom and for counsels to his son — among them the merit of silence and of sparing words in what does not profit. From him we draw that silence in its place is wisdom, and speech in its place is wisdom. (In this leaves-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌱 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of listening stillness — a closed mouth, a quiet body, ears open to the whisper of the world. He does not parse letters; he feels that when he grows still he hears what the chatter drowned. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
ṣ – m – t	ṣamt · ṣāmit · ṣamata · ṣamūt · ṣumūt

👤 How to explain it to the child. “The word şamt (silence) has siblings! The quiet one who does not speak is şāmit; the one much given to a wise silence is şamūt; and when you held your tongue and did not speak, you şamatta. All one family from one father: ş-m-t.”

👤 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (ş-m-t) is sound. Şamt is the holding back from speech. Point out to the teacher that the praiseworthy silence is the silence of wisdom and listening, not the silence of weakness or fear or a withdrawal from a right that must be spoken.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Silence” —

For reading and reflection with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the leaves palette

❧ I. NOOR TALKS A GREAT DEAL, ALL THE TIME, EVEN WHEN SILENCE IS CALLED FOR ❧

Plate I — Noor filled every silence with words, until a friend covered his ears.

Noor had become eloquent, speaking of everything. But she fell into a new trap: she began to talk without cease, filling every silence with speech. She spoke when her friend needed to think, commented on all things, and sometimes said what held no benefit.

Those around her grew weary of her endless talk, until one of them covered his ears! Noor was saying nothing wrong, but she did not know the worth of silence. Speech poured out without cease loses its worth, and drowns what deserves to be heard.

II. THE CHATTERING WATERFALL ROARS WITHOUT CEASE AND IS NEVER SILENT

Plate II — “Fill every moment with your voice,” roared the Waterfall — and no one could hear anything but its din.

And in the garden there was the Chattering Waterfall. Night and day it roared without pause; its noise filled the place so nothing else could be heard — no birdsong, no whisper of the breeze. It said to Noor as it thundered:

“Never be silent, Noor! Fill every moment with your voice, like me! Silence is a dull emptiness, and endless roaring is life itself! Talk, talk, and never stop!”

Noor tried the Waterfall's way: she talked without cease. But she could no longer hear anyone, nor her own thoughts, and those who loved quiet fled from her. She discovered that whoever is never silent becomes a din that no one hears, and misses the beauty of what is said in silence.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR LUQMAN'S WISDOM OF THE WORTH OF SILENCE

Plate III — “Speech is a grace, and silence is a grace too; the wise one knows the place of each.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the counsels of Luqman the Wise, among them that in silence there is safety and wisdom. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom; she laid a quiet finger to her lips and said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, speech is a grace, and silence is a grace too. The wise one knows when to speak and when to be silent. Be silent, to listen; be silent, to think; be silent when speech does no good. Silence is not weakness — it can be more eloquent than a thousand words.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Look at your leaves at night, Noor, when they grow still and silent — they hear the whisper of the dew and the song of the first bird. The silent one hears what the chatterer misses. Ask yourself before you speak: is my speech better than my silence?”

❧ IV. NOOR GROWS SILENT AND LISTENS, AND HEARS LOVELY THINGS AND THINKS DEEPLY ❧

Plate IV — When Noor grew silent, she heard what she had never heard before.

Noor tried silence. She closed her mouth quietly, and listened. And suddenly she heard what she had not heard before: the song of a far-off bird, the whisper of the wind among her leaves, and her own thoughts growing clear in her head.

And a lovely thing happened: when Noor grew silent, she thought deeply before she spoke, so her words — when she spoke — became lovelier and more useful. And when her friend needed to think, she was silent and gave him room, and he thanked her. She learned that silence gives speech its worth.

❧ V. NOOR KNOWS WHEN TO SPEAK AND WHEN TO BE SILENT; THE WATERFALL LEARNS AND BECOMES A CLEAR LAKE ❧

Plate V — The Waterfall stilled into a clear lake that mirrored the sky — and people came to sit by its calm.

Noor grew wise: she spoke when speech was useful, and was silent when silence was more eloquent. Her speech became little and precious, and her silence full of listening and wisdom. She said quietly: “There is a wisdom in silence.” — and people listened to her the more, for whoever speaks little, his word weighs heavy.

And the wonder happened: the Chattering Waterfall saw how people came to love Noor's calm. And it tried to grow still... and for the first time, its roaring paused a while, and its water gathered into a quiet basin, and cleared, and calmed, until it became a clear lake mirroring the sky and the stars! And it whispered gently: “I used to roar without cease, so no one heard me; now I have calmed and grown silent... and people come to sit by me and gaze into my clearness!”

And the Waterfall learned that silence is clearness and depth, and that calm is lovelier than din. And so Noor completed the balance of eloquence: wise speech, and wise silence — and her leaves grew deeper, and she drew near to the wisdom of the fruits.

🕯 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Sit silent a moment, and close your mouth, and listen. What do you hear now that you did not hear while you were speaking?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor began to talk without cease, all the time, until those around her grew weary and covered their ears.

The Chattering Waterfall roared without pause; Noor copied it, and could no longer hear anyone, nor herself.

Noor remembered Luqman's wisdom: “The wise one knows when to speak and when to be silent.”

Noor grew silent, and heard, and thought, and said: “There is a wisdom in silence.” So the Waterfall calmed into a clear lake.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	He asks himself: is my speech better than my silence? then chooses	Binding speech to thought
Bodily movement	Closes his mouth quietly and listens with his whole body where silence belongs	Embodying silent listening
Relational warmth	Gives the other a silence in which to think or to speak, and does not interrupt	Silence as a gift to the other
Sensory alternative	Keeps a minute of silence, listening to the sounds of the place and counting them	Grasping the worth of silence through the senses
English bridge	"I know when to speak and when to be silent."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. Listening leaves (beginning) — is silent where silence belongs with a reminder. ← Listening leaves (mastery) — tells, unprompted, the place of speech from the place of silence, chooses a wise silence, and listens within it deeply.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B1 / ACTFL Intermediate Mid). The child can judge when speech serves and when silence is more eloquent, hold a listening silence without interrupting, think before speaking, and keep a confidence — turning silence itself into a form of eloquence.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Management & Social Awareness)

- Tells when speech is useful and when silence is more eloquent.
- Listens in silence without interrupting or commenting.

- Thinks before he speaks and does not fill every gap with talk.
- Keeps a secret and does not say what wounds or holds no benefit.

The Four Inner Senses of Silence

Wise silence, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the stillness in which he hears the world and himself. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN SILENCE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The settling stillness	The quiet that spreads in the body when the talk stops	"Feel your body grow still, like leaves at nightfall."
The opened hearing	The small sounds that surface only when he is silent	"In your silence, what small sound can you hear now?"
The clearing thought	The way a thought grows clear when it is not spoken over	"Feel your thought settle clear, like water grown still."
The weighed word	The pause in which he weighs whether to speak at all	"Feel the little pause before you speak — is this word worth its silence?"

 Why this matters. A child who feels the settling stillness, the opened hearing, the clearing thought, and the weighed word owns the balance of eloquence — for if speech is silver, wise silence is gold, and the one who speaks little is heard the most.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👂 Safe-stop protocol. The silence meant here is the silence of wisdom and listening — not the silence of fear, nor the hiding of a right or a pain. We teach the learner always to speak up when he or another is harmed or wronged, and that keeping silent about a right is not from wisdom.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Silence may be restful, or controlling speech may be hard; honour his manner, and teach the places of silence with clear visual cues.
Hyperactivity / verbal impulsivity	Teach a self-signal (finger to lips, count to three) before speaking; reward silent listening.
Anxiety or withdrawal	Distinguish the chosen silence of wisdom from the silence of fear; encourage him to speak when he needs to say something.
Speech-processing difficulty	Give enough silent time to process and think before replying, and honour that silence.
Noisy environment	Provide a quiet corner where the learner may practise silence and listening away from the din.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing conventions of silence and speech across cultures in gatherings.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Screens are a ceaseless noise that smothers silence; we grow the beauty of calm and of listening.

ii. During the session — the minute-of-silence game. Be silent together for a minute, and listen to the sounds of the place (a clock, a bird, the wind), then share: what did each of you hear in your silence?

iii. After the session — a question before speaking. Train the learner in a golden question before he speaks in a situation: does my speech help now, or is silence better?

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child choose a wise silence and listen where it belonged?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen is a noise that never falls silent. We teach the wisdom of silence.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Fourteen Unit

📌 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

🌱 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. The Leaves added empathy and the manners of disagreement. This book adds a mature dimension: wise silence and the mastery of speech.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Talks without cease; cannot be silent, and fills every gap with speech.
◐ sometimes	Is silent and listens only when reminded; does not yet weigh speech against silence unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, tells the place of speech from silence, chooses a wise silence, and listens within it deeply.

🦋 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). On agreement, record it. On a one-step difference, record the lower and note it. On a two-step difference, the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis, gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
ṣamt (صَمْتُ)	a wise holding-back from speech	silence
ṣamūt (صَمُوت)	one much given to a wise silence	reticent / sparing of speech iṣghā' (إِصْغَاء)	listening with attention, in silence	attentive listening ḥikma (حِكْمَة)	putting a thing in its rightful place	wisdom
waqār (وَقَار)	a calm and steadiness that draws respect	dignified calm

Output (Arabic): «أَعْرِفْ مَتَى يَكُونُ الْكَلَامُ ذَهَبًا، وَمَتَى يَكُونُ الصَّمْتُ أَعْلَى. إِنْ كَانَ الْكَلَامُ مِنْ فِضَّةٍ، فَالصَّمْتُ الْحَكِيمُ مِنْ ذَهَبٍ.»
 «أَعْرِفْ مَتَى يَكُونُ الْكَلَامُ ذَهَبًا، وَمَتَى يَكُونُ الصَّمْتُ أَعْلَى. إِنْ كَانَ الْكَلَامُ مِنْ فِضَّةٍ، فَالصَّمْتُ الْحَكِيمُ مِنْ ذَهَبٍ.»

English Bridge: “I know when to speak and when to be silent.” — If speech is silver, wise silence is gold.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did those around Noor grow weary of her endless talk? RECALL
- Why was the Chattering Waterfall no longer heard, despite its ceaseless roar? INFERENCE
- Be silent and listen for ten seconds now — what did you hear that you had not noticed? SENSORY
- When was your silence more eloquent than any words you might have said? PERSONAL LINK
- The Waterfall roared to feel alive and full; have you ever filled a silence with talk because the quiet felt uneasy? What could help it feel calm enough to still? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did listening in silence teach you something you would have missed by speaking? PERSONAL LINK

Not all that is known must be said; and sometimes the loveliest thing you say is your silence.

♦ A closing wisdom — when to be silent. “Know when the dialogue bears fruit, and when the finest thing is to withdraw in quiet.” Not every disagreement deserves an answer. To be silent and to leave with good manners is sometimes wiser than a speech that bears no fruit — without calling anyone bad.

🌱 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Before you speak, ask yourself: does my speech help now? Sometimes listening and silence are more eloquent. Do not fill every gap with talk, and do not say what wounds or holds no benefit.” By a wise silence, Noor grew in dignity.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE SILENCE

The drawing. Ask the child to sit silent for a minute, then draw all he heard in his silence (a bird, the wind, a far-off sound), and write: “I heard this in my silence.”

The play. Children play “who listens most”: they grow silent together and listen, and whoever tells the most hidden sounds of the place wins. The winner is the best listener.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how a chatter's roar becomes the clearness of a calm lake. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Thirteen (“The Leaves' Disagreement”). “You learned to differ with grace. Now you learn that part of the manners of disagreement is sometimes to be silent — not to answer every thing. Wise silence completes all you have learned: in dialogue you listen in silence, and in disagreement you hold back from what does no good.”

Looking forward — Book Fifteen (“The Leaves' Counsel”) »

“You have learned when to speak and when to be silent. In the next book — the close of the Leaves — you will learn the loveliest fruit of speech and silence together: counsel — to gather the opinions, listen to all, and decide together, so the decision is wiser.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- Zero logical error — the tale runs ceaseless talk → an unheard din → a listening silence → the balance of eloquence, unbroken.
- Zero moral coercion — silence is a wise choice, never fear; the child is taught to speak up against harm.
- Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees carry the Leaves arc consistently.
- Zero psychological gap — Noor over-talks, then finds calm and clarity; the emotion fits the age.
- Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds disagreement behind and opens counsel ahead.
- Zero passive activity — silence becomes a minute of listening and a question before speaking.
- Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- Zero symbolic error — leaves grow still at night to hear the dew, as the silent one hears what the chatterer misses; the metaphor holds.
- Zero psychological miscue — the Waterfall learns to still and becomes a clear lake; understood, not defeated.
- Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- Zero cognitive coercion — “if speech is silver, wise silence is gold” is discovery, not dictation.
- Zero cultural imbalance — a wise male figure (Luqman, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 👉 The approved root (ṣ-m-t) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the settling stillness and the opened hearing for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 👉 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, carrying the Leaves arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B1 and ACTFL Intermediate Mid.
- 👉 The four CASEL criteria (Self-Management & Social Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- 👉 Luqman's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between heritage and symbol; the Waterfall is marked symbolic.
- 👉 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (an unease with quiet), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, stilling into a clear lake.
- 👉 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the minute of silence, the question before speaking), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 👉 A crucial proactive caution (the silence of wisdom versus the silence of fear / hiding a right) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including ASD) — zero coercion.
- 👉 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 👉 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds disagreement behind and opens counsel ahead — zero disconnected episode.
- 👉 The scale adds wise silence, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 👉 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds knowing when to withdraw.
- 👉 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 👉 Five original plates in the leaves palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Leaves' Silence

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow the wisdom of listening and calm.

Noor has mastered speech in all its arts — and now falls into a new trap: she talks without cease, until a friend covers his ears. When the Chattering Waterfall tells her never to be silent, and she roars until no one can hear her, the remembered wisdom of Luqman the Wise — and a grandmother's quiet finger to her lips — teach her that leaves grow still at night to hear the whisper of the dew. So Noor learns to be silent, to listen, to think before she speaks, and to say “There is a wisdom in silence” — until even the roaring waterfall stills into a clear lake that mirrors the stars. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen of ceaseless noise — only a heart learning that if speech is silver, wise silence is gold.

“I know when to speak — and when to be silent.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has learned to feel, to differ with grace, and to keep a wise silence. Now, at the close of the Leaves, she gathers all of it into the highest of the shared skills: counsel. Not to decide alone what belongs to the group, but to gather every view, listen to all, and decide together — for the lone decision may err, while the counselled one holds a blessing and a wisdom — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَمْلُوسَةِ, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, turned toward every heart in the circle. All the Leaves' skills meet here: COUNSEL GATHERS EMPATHY, HONEST DISAGREEMENT, AND WISE SILENCE INTO ONE SHARED DECISION — YOU SPEAK TO GIVE YOUR VIEW, AND ARE SILENT TO HEAR ANOTHER'S. It reaches back through the whole of the Leaves and forward to the ripening Fruit, where the counselled word becomes a sweet, mature harvest.

Integration Map — counsel gathers all the Leaves into one shared decision; the close of the Leaves.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👑 Proactive caution. This book grows counsel. Remember that counsel does not mean the learner abandons his opinion out of fear or dissolves into the group; teach him to voice his view with confidence and to listen to others, and that the group's decision is respected while his right to a polite disagreement remains.

👑 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale closes the Leaves: Noor now speaks, listens, feels, and differs with grace — and learns to decide with the group, not alone.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Leaves — leaves in counsel (the close of the Leaves stage)
AGE BAND	13–15 years · a flexible overlap for the advanced or the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	sh-w-r (Shūrā, counsel): to gather the views and listen to all before you decide together
ROOT FAMILY	shūrā · mustashīr · mushāwara · tashāwara · mashūra (all from sh-w-r)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Gathers the group's views, asks each one “what do you think?”, then they decide together
METAPHOR	All the leaves of the tree sway together with the wind, and so make one lovely rustle
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Khadija bint Khuwaylid (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the leaves — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Lone Whirlwind — symbolic (non-historical), embodying one who decides alone and coils around himself without counsel, and learns the worth of taking counsel
MASTERY CRITERION	Leaves in counsel: gathers the views, listens to all, and shares in a group decision
CASEL DOMAIN	Responsible Decision-Making + Relationship Skills
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR B1 (consulting and expressing a view within a group decision) · ACTFL Intermediate Mid · CASEL Responsible Decision-Making

The Heart of the Book

Noor has learned speech and silence, empathy and disagreement. Now, at the close of the Leaves, she learns to gather all of it into the highest shared skill: counsel. Not to decide alone what concerns the group, but to gather the views, listen to all, and decide together. The lone decision may err; the counselled one holds a blessing and a wisdom.

👤 Historical footnote. Khadija bint Khuwaylid (d. c. 3 BH), a great lady of the Arabs, was famed for her mind and sound judgement; she was consulted and her wise view was taken. From her we draw that counsel and the shared view are a blessing, and that a woman is an owner of opinion and counsel. (In this leaves-world she is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌱 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of the circle — sitting with the group and not above it, turning his eyes to each face, asking and then waiting to hear. He does not parse letters; he feels that many voices, gathered, become one wiser choice. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
sh – w – r	shūrā · mustashīr · mushāwara · tashāwara · mashūra

🐝 How to explain it to the child. “The word shūrā (counsel) has siblings! One who asks another's view is a mustashīr; the view you give one who asks you is a mashūra; and when you gathered the views together, you tashāwartum. All one family from one father: sh-w-r.”

🐝 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (sh-w-r) is hollow (its middle is a wāw). From it come shūrā, mashūra, and istishāra. Point out to the teacher that the origin of shawr is the drawing of honey from the hive; so counsel is the drawing of the best view out of the minds, as one draws honey.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Counsel” —

For reading and reflection with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the leaves palette

❧ I. NOOR DECIDES ALONE A MATTER THAT CONCERNS EVERYONE, WITHOUT ASKING HER FRIENDS ❧

Plate I — Noor decided alone what concerned them all, and her friends stood hesitant, unasked.

Noor had become eloquent and wise, so her friends loved her to be their leader. One day the group wished to choose a place to play. And Noor said, alone: “I have decided! We will play by the river, and that is the end of it!”

But her friends stood hesitant. Some of them feared the river, and some preferred the hill, but Noor did not ask them. They felt their opinion had no worth. The lone decision, even from a wise one, wounds the one who was not consulted — for the matter belongs to them all.

II. THE LONE WHIRLWIND COILS AROUND ITSELF AND DECIDES ALONE

Plate II — “Ask no one,” spun the Whirlwind — and it turned alone in an empty hollow.

And in the garden there was the Lone Whirlwind. It coiled around itself alone, deciding everything by itself, asking no one and hearing no view. It said to Noor as it spun:

“Decide alone, Noor! You are the cleverest! Ask no one, for your view is enough. Whoever consults others is weak! I coil around myself and decide, and I need no one!”

Noor tried the Whirlwind's way: she decided everything alone. But her friends drew away, one by one, for no one loves to be a follower without a voice. And Noor came to spin alone in an emptiness, like the Whirlwind. She discovered that whoever always decides alone, stays always alone.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR KHADIJA BINT KHUWAYLID'S WISDOM OF COUNSEL

Plate III — “No leaf sways alone; all together they make one lovely rustle.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the lady Khadija bint Khuwaylid, the woman of mind and judgement, who was consulted and whose view was taken. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of her wisdom; she said as if carrying her meaning:

“Noor, you are wise — but one view, however wise, stays a single view. When you gather everyone's views, each sees what you do not see, and the decision is completed. Ask: what do you think? and listen; then decide together. Counsel draws the best that is in the minds.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Look at your leaves, Noor — no leaf sways alone; they all sway together and make one lovely rustle. Be so with your friends: one decision you make together, that all are pleased with and all carry together.”

❧ IV. NOOR GATHERS HER FRIENDS IN A CIRCLE AND ASKS THEM THEIR VIEWS ❧

Plate IV — She sat with them, not above them: “What do you all think? Let us hear each one.”

Noor gathered her friends in a circle, and sat with them, not above them, and said: “We want to choose a place to play, and the matter concerns us all. What do you all think? Let us hear each one.”

And one said: “I fear the river.” And another said: “I love the hill.” And Noor said: “Thank you all. What do you think — shall we play at the safe hill, which is near, and which most of you love?”

And all rejoiced, and agreed happily, for the decision had become their decision, not Noor's alone. Noor learned that when she listens to all, she reaches a wiser decision, and all become happy with it and responsible for it.

❧ V. A SHARED DECISION THAT GLADDENS ALL; THE WHIRLWIND LEARNS AND BECOMES A BREEZE THAT GATHERS SEEDS ❧

Plate V — The Whirlwind opened into a breeze that gathered seeds and sowed life everywhere.

Noor came to take counsel with her friends in every matter that concerned them: she gathered the views, and listened, and they decided together. She said to them with love: “We decide together.” — and they loved her as a leader, for she did not lead them from above, but walked with them and heard them.

And the wonder happened: the Lone Whirlwind saw how the friends gathered around Noor in love. And it tried to stop coiling around itself... and for the first time, it opened, and its spinning calmed, and it became a gentle breeze that moved among the flowers, gathering their seeds and carrying them together to sow in every place! And it whispered: “I used to coil around myself, so I stayed alone and hollow; now I have opened and gathered... and I have become a breeze that sows life!”

And the Whirlwind learned that whoever opens and gathers and takes counsel makes life and fellowship. And so Noor completed the whole stage of the Leaves — empathy, and fine disagreement, and wise silence, and counsel — and her lush leaves grew full, and she ripened, and made ready to bear the fruits of wisdom.

👤 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of a decision that concerns your group (your family or friends). How would you gather their views and ask each one, before you decide together?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor decided the place to play alone, without asking her friends, so they stood hesitant.

The Lone Whirlwind decided alone; Noor copied it, and her friends drew away, one by one.

Noor remembered Khadija bint Khuwaylid's wisdom: "Gather the views, and ask: what do you think? and listen; then decide together."

Noor gathered her friends and asked: "What do you all think?"
They rejoiced in the shared decision, and the Whirlwind became a breeze that gathers seeds.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	“What do you all think? Let us decide together” — he opens the decision to all	Binding counsel to language
Bodily movement	Turns his gaze around the group and asks each one his view in turn	Embodying the gathering of views
Relational warmth	Respects the differing view and thanks everyone who shared	Counsel makes each one feel his worth
Sensory alternative	An opinion-box: each writes his view on a slip, then they are read and weighed together	Fixing consultation through the senses
English bridge	“We consult, so we decide together.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. Leaves in counsel (beginning) — asks another's view before deciding, with a reminder. ← Leaves in counsel (mastery) — gathers the group's views unprompted, listens to all, and shares in a group decision that pleases everyone. With this the Leaves are complete.

👤 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B1 / ACTFL Intermediate Mid). The child can open a shared matter to the group, ask each member for a view, listen to all, weigh his own view against the group's, and reach a decision that all are pleased with and responsible for.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Relationship Skills)

- Gathers the group's views before a shared decision.
- Listens to every view and values it.

- Shares in reaching a decision that pleases everyone.
- Does not impose his view in what concerns the group.

The Four Inner Senses of Counsel

Counsel, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the circle in which many voices become one wiser choice. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN COUNSEL	A GUIDING WHISPER
The seated equality	The ease of sitting with the group, not above it	"Feel yourself in the circle, one among friends, not on a throne."
The turning gaze	The attention that moves from face to face, asking	"Let your gaze go round the circle — each face has a view to give."
The gathered voices	The fullness of many views coming together	"Feel the views gather, like leaves making one rustle."
The shared carrying	The warmth of a decision that all hold together	"Feel the decision rest on all of you — lighter, because it is shared."

 Why this matters. A child who feels the seated equality, the turning gaze, the gathered voices, and the shared carrying owns the crown of the shared skills — for many leaves make one rustle, and many minds make one wise choice.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

 Safe-stop protocol. Counsel does not mean the learner's view dissolves into the group out of fear, nor that he is forced to agree with the majority against his conscience. We teach him to voice his view with confidence, and to respect the group's decision, while his right to a polite disagreement remains.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Shyness or withdrawal	Let him give his view in a way that is comfortable (in writing, on a card, whispered to a facilitator), so he shares in counsel without the dread of the group.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Make the steps of counsel clear with a fixed visual structure (we ask, we listen, we vote, we decide), and honour his manner of taking part.
Low confidence	Encourage him that his view matters and is heard, and celebrate his taking part however simple.
A leaning to dominate	Teach the natural leader that the true leader listens and gathers, and does not impose; train him to give others their turn.
Language difficulty	Accept a view expressed by a gesture or by choosing from pictures within the process of counsel.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing forms of consultation across cultures and families.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Family decisions are made by dialogue, not by a screen; we grow a learner who is an owner of opinion and a listener to others.

ii. During the session — the family council of counsel. Hold a small council for a simple decision (the holiday meal, the weekend activity), and ask each member for a view, then decide together.

iii. After the session — “your view matters to us.” Let the learner feel that his view is heard in family decisions suited to his age. The learner who is consulted learns to consult.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child gather others' views or share in a group decision by listening?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen decides for the child, alone. We teach him to consult and decide with others.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Fifteen Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. With this book the Leaves stage is complete (empathy, disagreement, silence, counsel). The new dimension: counsel and the shared decision, a threshold to the Fruit stage.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Decides alone what concerns the group; asks no one and hears no view.
● sometimes	Gathers views and shares a decision only when reminded; does not yet consult unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, gathers the views, listens to all, and shares in a decision that pleases everyone.

The New Dimension — Counsel & the Shared Decision

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	●	•	NOTE

Research note: the scale is an exploratory, testable hypothesis, gathered by degrees toward a future calibration of the whole.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
shūrā (شُورَى)	gathering the views to reach a shared decision	consultation mashūra (مَشُورَة)	the view you give one who consults you	counsel / advice
mustashīr (مُسْتَشِير)	one who asks another's view	one who seeks counsel
qarār (قَرَار)	what is agreed after reflection	decision
ijmā' (إِجْمَاع)	the agreement of all upon one view	consensus

Output (Arabic): «تَشَاوُرُ، وَنُصِيحِي لِكُلِّ رَأْيٍ، فَتَقَرَّرُ مَعًا قَرَارًا أَحْكَمَ.» — Many leaves make one rustle; many minds make one wise choice.

English Bridge: “We consult, so we decide together.” — Many leaves make one rustle; many minds make one wise choice.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's friends stand hesitant when she decided alone? RECALL
- Why did the Lone Whirlwind keep spinning alone in an emptiness?
INFERENCE
- Gather the views of two people beside you on some small matter, then decide together — how did they feel? SENSORY
- When did you share in a group decision and feel your view was heard?
PERSONAL LINK
- The Whirlwind decided alone because sharing felt like weakness or loss of control. Have you ever wanted to decide everything yourself? What could help it feel safe enough to open and gather? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did gathering others' views lead you to a choice you would not have reached alone? PERSONAL LINK

The view of the group is wiser than the view of one; we take counsel, and reach what no one reaches alone.

♦ A closing wisdom — the crown of the Leaves. “The lone decision may err; the counselled one holds a blessing.” When you gather the views, each sees what you cannot see, and the decision is completed — and all who share in it are pleased with it and carry it together.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Before you decide a matter that concerns you all, gather the views. Ask each one: what do you think? and listen; then decide together. A decision everyone shares in is a decision everyone is pleased with.” By counsel, Noor's decision became everyone's decision.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE COUNSEL

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a circle of counsel: friends seated in a ring, a thought-bubble above each, and at the centre the shared decision they agreed upon.

The play. Children play the “council of counsel”: they pose a decision (which game shall we play?), each gives his view in turn, then they vote and decide together. The whole group wins.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how the whirlwind of going-it-alone turns into a breeze that gathers and sows. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Fourteen and the whole Leaves. “You learned when to speak and when to be silent; counsel joins both — you speak to give your view, and are silent to hear another's. All the Leaves — empathy, disagreement, silence — meet in counsel: to decide together with a great heart and a listening mind.”

Looking forward — Book Sixteen (“The Fruit's Contentment”) »

“You have completed the lush Leaves! Empathy and disagreement and silence and counsel — your leaves have ripened. In the next stage — the ripe Fruit — you will gather the fruits of all you learned; the first of them: contentment — that your heart is satisfied and at peace, and your word a sweet, ripe fruit.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a lone decision → a spinning emptiness → a gathered circle → a shared decision, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — the child's view is never dissolved by fear; his right to a polite disagreement remains.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Leaves arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor decides alone, then finds the circle; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge gathers all the Leaves and opens the Fruit (contentment).
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — counsel becomes a circle, a turning gaze, a vote, an asked “what do you think?”
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — all the leaves sway together to make one rustle, as many minds make one wise choice; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Whirlwind learns to open and becomes a seed-sowing breeze; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “no leaf sways alone” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a great woman of counsel (Khadija, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 👉 The approved root (sh-w-r) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the seated circle and the turning gaze for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 👉 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Leaves arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B1 and ACTFL Intermediate Mid.
- 👉 The four CASEL criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Relationship Skills) are set as observable outcomes.
- 👉 Khadija bint Khuwaylid's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (she is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; a woman of counsel and leadership, with the Whirlwind marked symbolic.
- 👉 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (control felt as strength), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, opening into a seed-sowing breeze.
- 👉 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the circle of counsel, the vote, the asked question), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 👉 A proactive caution (the view not dissolved by fear) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including ASD and shyness) — zero coercion.
- 👉 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 👉 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it gathers all the Leaves and opens the Fruit stage (contentment) — zero disconnected episode.
- 👉 The scale adds counsel and completes the Leaves' dimensions, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 👉 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom crowns the Leaves.
- 👉 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 👉 Five original plates in the leaves palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Leaves' Counsel

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens —
and grow hearts that gather and decide together.

At the close of the lush Leaves, Noor — who can now feel, differ with grace, and keep a wise silence — faces the crown of the shared skills: to decide what concerns the group, alone or together? When the Lone Whirlwind tells her to decide by herself and ask no one, and she spins alone in an empty hollow, the remembered wisdom of a great woman of counsel — and a grandmother — teach her that no leaf sways alone. So Noor gathers her friends in a circle, sits with them not above them, asks “what do you all think?”, and reaches a decision they all share and carry together — until even the whirlwind opens into a breeze that gathers seeds and sows life. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen that decides for the child — only a heart learning that many minds make one wise choice.

“We take counsel — and decide together.”

The first of the fruits: contentment. To be satisfied with what you have is a treasure that never runs out — not idleness, but a heart at rest that makes speech calm and grateful — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نظرية القراءة الملموسة, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, now turned toward the heart's own peace. The Leaves taught Noor to turn toward others; NOW THE FIRST FRUIT, CONTENTMENT, TURNS HER TOWARD GRATITUDE FOR

WHAT SHE HAS — SO HER WORD RIPENS SWEET AND CALM, NOT RESTLESS AND GRASPING. It reaches back to the counsel of the Leaves and forward to emphasis and to the manners of debate — for one who is content with the truth accepts it wherever it appears.

Integration Map — contentment is the first ripe fruit; the opening of the Fruit stage.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌿 Proactive caution. This book grows contentment. The contentment meant here is a heart's satisfaction and thankfulness together with lawful striving — not surrender to injustice or want, and not the killing of ambition. Teach the learner to be content in his heart and to strive with his hand, and never to stay silent about a right or a genuine need.

🌿 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale opens the Fruit: Noor has ripened, and now learns the first fruit that gladdens the heart — to be content with what she has.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Fruit — a ripening fruit (the opening of the Fruit stage)
AGE BAND	16–18 years · a flexible overlap for the advanced or the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	q-n-‘ (Qanā‘a, contentment): to be satisfied with what you have — a treasure that never runs out
ROOT FAMILY	qanā‘a · qāni‘ · qani‘a · yaqna‘u · qanū‘ (all from q-n-‘)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Expresses his contentment and gratitude for what he has, and does not compare himself to others with regret
METAPHOR	The ripe fruit is content with its place on the branch, and so ripens sweet, and does not envy another fruit
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	Umar ibn al-Khattab (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the fruit — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Greedy Mirage — symbolic (non-historical), embodying the greed that chases an endless illusion and is never content, and learns contentment
MASTERY CRITERION	A ripening fruit: expresses contentment and gratitude for what he has, freed from comparison and greed
CASEL DOMAIN	Self-Awareness + Self-Management
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR B2 (expressing an affective stance and gratitude in connected sentences) · ACTFL Intermediate High · CASEL Self-Awareness

The Heart of the Book

Noor entered the stage of the ripe Fruit, where the fruits of all she learned are gathered. The first fruit is contentment. Having become beautiful and fruiting, greed came whispering to her: more, more! But whoever always seeks more never rejoices in what he has. Contentment is not idleness, but a satisfaction that bequeaths a deep peace, and makes both speech and heart calm and grateful.

🕌 Historical footnote. Umar ibn al-Khattab (d. 23 AH), the Commander of the Faithful, al-Fārūq, joined justice to abstemiousness and contentment and a rough simplicity of life; he would patch his garment and eat coarse food while he was the master of a nation. From him we draw that contentment is a dignity and a rest of heart, and that the richest of people is the most content. (In this fruit-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🕌 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of contentment — a hand laid on the chest, a deep and easy breath, eyes that rest on the blessings at hand rather than straining toward the far-off. He does not parse letters; he feels his heart settle when he looks at what he has with satisfaction. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

q – n – ‘	qanā‘a · qāni‘ · qani‘a · yaqna‘u · qanū‘

🌟 How to explain it to the child. “The word qanā‘a (contentment) has siblings! One satisfied with what he has is qāni‘; one much given to contentment is qanū‘; and when you were satisfied with what you had, you qani‘ta. All one family from one father: q-n-‘.”

🌟 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (q-n-‘) is sound. From it come qanā‘a (satisfaction with sufficiency) and iqnā‘ (leading another to be satisfied with a view). Point out to the teacher that contentment is an active, thankful satisfaction — not surrender, nor a giving-up of lawful striving for the better.

✦ Seed of Debate (a thread for the coming books). From the very same root (q-n-‘) comes iqnā‘ — persuasion, the leading of another to be satisfied with a view by proof and argument. And just as the learner is content with what he has (qanā‘a), he is content with the truth whenever it appears, even on another's tongue (contentment with the truth) — and that is the first manner of debate (munāẓara), the highest degree of cultivated dialogue, which grows in the books to come.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Contentment” —

For reading aloud with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the fruit palette

❧ I. NOOR HAS BECOME A LOVELY FRUITING TREE, BUT GREED WHISPERS: MORE! ❧

Plate I — Noor forgot the beauty of her own fruit while she gazed at another's.

Noor had become a fruiting tree, bearing sweet and lovely fruits. She ought to have been glad. But she looked at a distant tree bearing more, and said: “Why are my fruits so few? I want more! I want as many as hers — no, more!”

And Noor forgot the beauty of her own fruit as she gazed at another's. Whatever she gained, she wanted more. She no longer rejoiced in anything, for her eye was always on what she did not have. Comparison stole her joy in what she owned.

❧ II. THE GREEDY MIRAGE CHASES AN ILLUSION THAT NEVER ENDS AND IS NEVER CONTENT ❧

Plate II — The nearer he ran, the farther the mirage fled — for greed is a mirage.

And in the desert there was the Greedy Mirage. It gleamed in the far distance as though it were water and palms, so every thirsty one ran toward it; but the nearer he came, the farther it fled. It said to Noor as it shimmered:

“Run after me, Noor! More is always lovelier! Never be satisfied with what you have! Ask for more, then more, then more! Do not stop!”

Noor ran after the mirage, always asking for more. But she grew weary and gasped and never arrived, for greed is a mirage: whatever of it you gain, it asks for more. She discovered that whoever runs after more without contentment tires and never arrives, and loses his joy in what he has.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR UMAR IBN AL-KHATTAB'S WISDOM OF CONTENTMENT

Plate III — “Whoever is content with what he has is the richest of people.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the Commander of the Faithful, Umar ibn al-Khattab, of his contentment, his abstemiousness, and his satisfaction with sufficiency. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom, and she said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, contentment is a treasure that never runs out. Whoever is content with what he has is the richest of people, and whoever always seeks more is the poorest of them, though he own the world. Look at what you have and give thanks, and you will be glad. Contentment is not that you cease to strive, but that your heart is satisfied and at peace.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Look at your fruits, Noor — each fruit was content with its place on the branch, and so ripened sweet. Had it spent its life envying another fruit, it would never have ripened. Be content with your place, and ripen sweet, and give thanks for every fruit within you.”

IV. NOOR LOOKS AT HER FRUITS WITH CONTENTMENT AND SMILES, SATISFIED AND THANKFUL

Plate IV — She looked at her fruit with the eye of contentment, and saw how lovely it was.

Noor looked at her fruits — this time with the eye of contentment, not greed. And suddenly she saw how lovely they were! Sweet fruits, lush leaves, a strong trunk. She stopped looking at others' and began to give thanks for all she had. And when she looked at the other tree, she did not compete with it this time, but acknowledged the truth without needing to win: “Her fruit is sweeter in one kind, and mine is sweeter in another — each has its own beauty.” So she was content with the truth as she was content with her portion — and that is the first step toward a noble dialogue.

And a lovely thing happened: when Noor grew content, her heart settled, and the weariness of greed left her, and a deep rest took its place. She came to enjoy her fruits and to share them generously — for the content one finds at hand what suffices him and overflows. Contentment made her little much.

❧ V. NOOR IS CONTENT AND THANKFUL, AND DISCOVERS HER WATER WAS NEAR — AND THE MIRAGE'S GLEAM DIES ❧

Plate V — Her water was beneath her all along; and the mirage, unchased, ceased to deceive.

Noor became content and thankful: satisfied with what she had, giving thanks for it, no longer comparing herself to others with regret. She said with peace: “I am content and satisfied.” — and she became among the gladdest in the garden, for her wealth was in her heart, not in her hand.

And the wonder happened: the Greedy Mirage saw Noor's peace when she ceased to run after it. And suddenly Noor noticed that her roots reached a sweet water beneath her — it had been near her all along, but she had looked far away and could not see it! And the mirage's gleam died down, for no one ran after it any longer. And for the first time it spoke truly and did not deceive, and whispered before it faded: “I used to promise you water in the distance, so you tired and never arrived; and the water was with you. Whoever is content, sees what he has.”

And the mirage learned — and the thirsty one with it — that contentment does not change the ground, but opens the eye to the blessing near at hand; so no far-off thing deceives us, and we drink our fill from what we have. And so Noor gathered the first fruit of wisdom: contentment — and her heart was at peace, and her fruit ripened sweet, and she made ready for what is more eloquent still.

👉 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Look around you now, and count three things you have that you are thankful for. How does your heart feel when you look at what you have with contentment?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor became a lovely fruiting tree, but she looked at others' fruit and craved more, so her joy left her.

The Greedy Mirage chased an illusion without end; Noor copied it, and grew weary and never arrived.

Noor remembered Umar ibn al-Khattab's wisdom:

“Contentment is a treasure that never runs out. Look at what you have and give thanks, and you will be glad.”

Noor looked at her fruits with contentment and said: “I am content and satisfied.” Her heart settled, and she discovered her water was near her all along.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I am content with what I have and give thanks for it" — he voices contentment and gratitude	Binding speech to satisfaction
Bodily movement	Lays his hand on his chest with peace, and breathes deeply, content	Embodying the peace
Relational warmth	Shares what he has generously, for the content one finds enough at hand and to spare	Contentment bequeaths generosity
Sensory alternative	Writes or draws three things each day that he is thankful for (a gratitude journal)	Fixing contentment through the senses
English bridge	"I am content with what I have."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A ripening fruit (beginning) — gives thanks for what he has with a reminder. ← A ripening fruit (mastery) — expresses, unprompted, his contentment and gratitude, is freed from envious comparison and greed, and his heart is at peace.

🍌 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B2 / ACTFL Intermediate High). The child can express an affective stance of contentment and gratitude in connected sentences, name the blessings he holds, resist envious comparison, and distinguish a peaceful contentment from a lawful striving for the better.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Self-Awareness & Self-Management)

- Expresses his gratitude for what he has.
- Does not compare himself to others with regret or envy.

- Rejoices in what he has and enjoys it.
- Distinguishes contentment from a lawful striving for the better.

— The Four Inner Senses of Contentment —

Contentment, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the rest that comes when the heart is satisfied. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN CONTENTMENT	A GUIDING WHISPER
The settling heart	The rest that spreads when he stops straining for more	"Feel your heart settle, like a ripe fruit resting on its branch."
The near blessing	The noticing of the good already at hand	"Look near, not far — what good is right here with you?"
The eased breath	The deep, unhurried breath of one who is satisfied	"Breathe slow and full — the breath of one who has enough."
The overflowing hand	The ease of sharing when the heart feels it has enough	"Feel how, when you are content, your hand opens to give."

 Why this matters. A child who feels the settling heart, the near blessing, the eased breath, and the overflowing hand owns the first fruit of wisdom — for contentment is a treasure that never runs out, and whoever is content with what he has is the richest of people.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👉 Safe-stop protocol. The contentment meant here is the heart's satisfaction and thankfulness — not surrender to injustice or want. We teach the learner to be content in his heart while he strives lawfully for the better, and that contentment does not mean staying silent about a right that has been taken or a genuine need.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Hard economic circumstances	Present contentment as a rest for the heart, never as a justification of deprivation; take care that the needy learner feels no blame, but the worth of what he has beyond material things.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Embody contentment with concrete examples and a visual gratitude journal, and honour his special interests as a source of satisfaction.
A leaning to comparison (social media)	Discuss the effect of comparison on social media, and train him to turn his gaze from others to his own blessings.
Anxiety or dissatisfaction	Link to gratitude and breathing exercises, and reassure him that satisfaction is a skill learned by degrees.
Excessive ambition	Balance a heart's contentment with lawful striving, so ambition is not killed nor greed fed.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing expressions of gratitude and contentment across cultures.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

- i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Screens and social media feed comparison and greed by displaying what others have; we grow a content and thankful heart.
 - ii. During the session — the gratitude journal. Write together, each day, three things you are thankful for. Notice how contentment grows the more you count the blessings.
 - iii. After the session — the bedtime thanks. Before sleep, ask the learner: what is the loveliest thing you have that you are thankful for today? Make gratitude the habit you close the day with.
- 🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child express contentment and thanks for what he has, instead of complaint or comparison?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen shows you what others have, and makes you greedy. We teach the child to see his blessings and be content.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Sixteen Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. The four earlier stages are complete. This book — the first of the Fruit — adds a mature dimension of self-awareness: contentment and gratitude.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Complains and compares; is never satisfied with what he has.
● sometimes	Expresses thanks only when reminded; is not yet freed from envious comparison unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, expresses contentment and gratitude, is freed from comparison, and his heart is at peace.

The New Dimension — Contentment & Gratitude

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	●	•	NOTE

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
qanā‘a (قَنَاعَة)	being satisfied with what you have	contentment
qāni‘ (قَانِع)	one satisfied with what he has	content / satisfied
imtinān (امْتِنَان)	a feeling of thanks for blessings	gratitude
riḍā (رِضَا)	the heart's peace with its portion	acceptance / satisfaction
kafāf (كَفَاف)	what suffices a person without excess	sufficiency

Output (Arabic): «أَرْضَى بِمَا عِنْدِي وَأَشْكُرُ عَلَيْهِ، فَيَطْمَئِنُّ قَلْبِي.» — Contentment is a treasure that never runs out.

English Bridge: “I am content with what I have.” — Contentment is a treasure that never runs out.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's joy leave her, though she was a lovely fruiting tree?

RECALL

- Why did everyone who chased the Greedy Mirage tire and never arrive?

INFERENCE

- Count three things you have now that you are thankful for — how did your heart feel?

SENSORY

- When did you feel glad because you were content with what you had, instead of wishing for another's?

PERSONAL LINK

- The Mirage kept promising more because it feared that enough was never enough. Have you ever chased more and lost your joy in what you had?

What could help the Mirage rest?

EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER

- When did being content with the truth — even on another's tongue — make a conversation better?

PERSONAL LINK

Contentment is a treasure that never runs out; whoever is content with what he has, his heart is at rest, and his contentment makes him rich.

♦ A closing wisdom — the first fruit. “The richest of people is the most content.” Contentment does not change the ground beneath you, but it opens your eye to the blessing near at hand — so no far-off mirage deceives you, and you drink your fill from what you already have.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Look at what you have and give thanks for it, before you look at what others have and grow sad. Whoever always compares himself to others is never glad. Contentment makes the little much.” By contentment, Noor's heart was at peace.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO FEEL THE CONTENTMENT

The drawing. Ask the child to draw his own tree, and write on each fruit a blessing he is thankful for (health, family, a friend, a talent), so the tree fills with gratitude.

The play. Children play the “round of thanks”: they go in a circle, and each names a blessing he is thankful for without repeating another's. Whoever finds the most blessings wins.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how Noor discovers her water was near her, and the mirage of greed dies down. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Fifteen and the whole Leaves. “You completed the Leaves — empathy, disagreement, silence, and counsel — and your leaves ripened. Now, in the Fruit, you gather the harvest of your ripening. The first fruit is contentment: having learned to share with people and to listen to them, you learn now that your heart is satisfied and at peace.”

Looking forward — Book Seventeen (“The Fruit's Emphasis”) »

“Your heart has settled with contentment. In the next book you will learn a ripe skill of expression: emphasis — to stress and bring out the important in your speech, so your meaning arrives strong and clear, like a ripe fruit that stands out. And with it grows a seed we planted here: debate — the highest dialogue — where we persuade by proof and are content with the truth.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs greed and comparison → an endless chase → a content gaze → a settled heart, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — contentment is a heart's rest with lawful striving, never surrender to injustice or want.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees open the Fruit arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor grows restless, then finds peace; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the whole Leaves and opens emphasis and the seed of debate.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — contentment becomes a gratitude journal and a hand on the chest.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — the ripe fruit is content with its place and ripens sweet, as contentment settles the heart; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Mirage ceases to deceive and reveals the near water; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “the richest of people is the most content” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a great male figure (Umar, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 🍌 The approved root (q-n-‘) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the settling heart and the near blessing for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🍌 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, opening the Fruit arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B2 and ACTFL Intermediate High.
- 🍌 The four CASEL criteria (Self-Awareness & Self-Management) are set as observable outcomes.
- 🍌 Umar ibn al-Khattab's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Mirage is marked symbolic.
- 🍌 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (a fear that enough is never enough), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, ceasing to deceive and revealing the near water.
- 🍌 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the gratitude journal, the hand on the chest), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🍌 A crucial proactive caution (contentment is not surrender to injustice or want, nor the death of ambition) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including hard circumstances and ASD) — zero coercion.
- 🍌 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🍌 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the whole Leaves and opens emphasis, and plants the seed of debate — zero disconnected episode.
- 🍌 The scale adds contentment and gratitude, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 🍌 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds the first fruit.
- 🍌 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 🍌 Five original plates in the fruit palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge.

The Fruit's Contentment

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow hearts content and thankful for what they have.

Noor has ripened into a fruiting tree — yet she looks at another's fuller boughs and craves more, until her joy slips away. When the Greedy Mirage tells her to chase an endless illusion, and she runs and tires and never arrives, the remembered wisdom of a great and abstemious leader — and a grandmother — teach her that each fruit content with its place ripens sweet. So Noor learns to look at her own fruit with gratitude, to say “I am content and satisfied,” and to discover that her sweet water was near her roots all along — until even the mirage of greed ceases to deceive. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen that feeds comparison — only a heart learning that contentment is a treasure that never runs out.

“I am content with what I have — and so I am glad.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor's heart has settled with contentment, and now she learns a ripe skill of expression: emphasis — al-nabr.

Not to raise the voice, but to lift one word a little so the listener turns to it. He who stresses every word is like one who stresses nothing — the meaning is lost in the noise; a single lit word is more eloquent than a shouted sentence — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT) (نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقَرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ; Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, now shaped into eloquence for the listener. Contentment settled Noor's voice; NOW EMPHASIS TEACHES HER TO LIGHT ONE WORD OUT OF IT, SO THE MEANING SHE

CARES FOR ARRIVES AND STAYS. It reaches back to the reading-book's "tone" (the nabra of the Sentence-Bridge), raising it into conscious oratory, and forward to sequencing, where the whole speech is ordered to persuade.

Integration Map — emphasis lights the key word; the second ripe fruit.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌳 A principle not to be broken. Emphasis is not raising the voice. He who stresses every word is like one who stresses nothing — the meaning is lost in the din. Emphasis is to light one word so the listener turns to it. This builds on the "tone" (nabra) the learner touched in the reading journey (the Sentence-Bridge), and raises it into a conscious skill of oratory.

🌳 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). In the age of screens everything shouts — bold headlines, all-capital words, notifications jostling — so the adolescent has lost the sense of the lit word. We restore the art of the quiet highlight: that your speech have one summit people remember.

The Heart of the Book

Noor has learned emphasis: to light the important word. In the age of screens, everything is bold and everything is loud, so nothing stands out. The skill is the quiet highlight — that your speech has one summit the listener carries away. He who lights the whole lamp leaves no shadow for his stars to shine in; dim the light a little, and light up one word.

📖 Historical footnote. Quss ibn Sa'ida al-Iyadi, the orator of the Arabs, was proverbial for an eloquence delivered from the minbar, an eloquence remembered by all who heard it. From him we draw that the mark of the master speaker is not a flood of raised words, but the one lit word that turns every face. (In this fruit-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

👤 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of the lifted hand — a hand that rises a little at the one important word and then returns to rest, not a hand that flails at every word. He does not parse letters; he feels the one word lift, as if it stood on a small pulpit within his sentence. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
n – b – r	nabr · nabra · minbar · nabara · manbūr

🦋 How to explain it to the child. “From n-b-r comes the minbar — a raised place that lights up the one who stands on it. And a nabra is a small rise in your voice that lights up a word. When you emphasise (nabara) a word, you set it on a little pulpit in the middle of your sentence.”

🦋 Morphological note for the teacher. Distinguish for the learner between emphasis (lighting a word by meaning) and raising the voice (an aimless loudness). The first is a skill; the second — as he learned in Book One — is noise pollution. Emphasis serves the listener; loudness overwhelms him.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Emphasis” —

For reading aloud with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the fruit palette

❧ I. NOOR STRESSES EVERY WORD WITH FORCE, AND IT BECOMES A WALL OF NOISE ❧

Plate I — She stressed every word, and it came out as one wall of noise.

At the recitation contest, Noor — now grown — stood to deliver her piece about the tree. She spoke it stressing every word with a high force... so the speech came out as one solid wall of noise, and the listeners remembered none of it.

She wondered: “I said everything with force... so why did nothing stick?” When every word blazes at the same brightness, the eye finds no summit to rest upon, and the whole is forgotten. A speech with no lit word is a wall, not a window.

❦ II. THE LIGHTNING FLASHES WITHOUT CEASE, UNTIL EYES GO BLIND TO IT ❦

Plate II — “My light never stops,” boasted the Lightning — so no single flash could be seen.

And in the sky the Lightning flashed, boasting: “I flash without cease! My light burns from beginning to end!” So it flashed without a pause... until the eyes went blind from the endless glare, and could no longer see a single flash.

Noor tried the Lightning's way: she lit every word. But when all is lit, nothing is lit; when all is loud, nothing is heard. She discovered that a light that never rests is a light that is never seen.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR THE WISDOM OF QUSS IBN SA'IDA AND THE PULPIT

Plate III — “The flash that comes after stillness is seen; a constant light is not.”

And Noor remembered what is told of Quss ibn Sa'ida al-Iyadi, the orator of the Arabs, whose one lit word from the pulpit turned every face. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his eloquence, and she said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, when you light the whole lamp, no shadow is left for your stars to shine in. Dim your light a little... and light up one word. Set one word upon its little pulpit, and let the rest rest quietly around it, and every face will turn to it.”

And when the Lightning marvelled — “a single quiet flash overcame all my glare?” — Grandmother Ramla said: “The flash that comes after stillness is seen; a constant light is not. So it is with the emphasised word among quiet words.”

❧ IV. NOOR LIGHTS UP ONE WORD ONLY, AND EVERY FACE TURNS TO IT ❧

Plate IV — One lit word — “thanks” — rose a little, and every heart kept it.

So Noor delivered her sentence again, and lit up one word only:

“The tree gives... and awaits no thanks.”

The word “thanks” rose a little above the rest, and every face turned to it, and it lodged in the hearts. Noor saw that one lit word, set among quiet words, is more eloquent than a whole sentence shouted — for the summit is seen only when the slopes are still.

❧ V. THE LIGHTNING LEARNS TO FLASH ONCE AFTER STILLNESS; NOOR CHOOSES HER LIT WORD BEFORE EVERY SENTENCE ❧

Plate V — One flash after stillness — awaited, and clearly seen.

And the Lightning grew calm. It came to flash one flash after a stillness — so people awaited it and saw it, and loved it. It whispered: “I used to flash without cease, so no one saw me; now I flash once after quiet... and every eye finds me.”

And from that day, Noor came to choose — before every sentence — which word she would light. She learned that the place of the emphasis changes the whole meaning, and that one lit word, quietly raised, does what a hundred shouted words cannot. And so Noor gathered the second fruit of eloquence: emphasis — and made ready to order her whole speech to persuade.

❧ The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Take a sentence you want to say. Which single word matters most in it? Lift only that word a little with your voice — and feel how the meaning sharpens.”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor delivered her speech stressing every word with force, so nothing stuck in the listeners' minds.

The Lightning flashed without cease, until the eyes went blind and saw no single flash.

Grandmother Ramla, carrying the eloquence of Quss ibn Sa'ida, taught her: "Light up one word."

So Noor emphasised the word "thanks" alone, and every face turned and remembered. Do not raise every word; light up one.

The Emphasis Lab — One Sentence, Many Meanings

The very same sentence changes with the place of the emphasis. Try "I didn't take your book" — and light up one word each time:

THE EMPHASISED WORD	THE MEANING THE LISTENER UNDERSTANDS
I didn't take your book	Someone else took it — not me.
I didn't take your book	I deny the act entirely.
I didn't take your book	Perhaps I borrowed it — but I did not “take” it.
I didn't take your book	I took someone else's book — not yours.

👉 The lesson of the Lab. The place of the emphasis changes the meaning — and one lit word is more eloquent than a shouted sentence. In the Arabic master, the same is shown with «أَنَا لَمْ أَخْذُ كِتَابَكَ», the stress moving from word to word to unfold four different meanings.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	He says a sentence, chooses one word to emphasise, then explains “why this one?”	Awareness of the key word
Bodily movement	The hand rises a little at the emphasised word alone, then returns	Binding emphasis to an intended gesture
Relational warmth	He delivers a sentence to a friend with two different emphases and asks: which changed the meaning?	Emphasis in the service of the listener
Sensory alternative	He enlarges the card of the important word visually (for one who finds vocal control hard)	Highlighting by the eye instead of the voice
English bridge	“Light up one word, not all of them.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A fruit taking colour (beginning) — emphasises the important word with guidance. ← A fruit taking colour (mastery) — chooses the key word himself, and moves the place of the emphasis to change the meaning on purpose.

👉 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B2 / ACTFL Intermediate High). The child can select the key word in an utterance, mark it with a measured prosodic emphasis, move that emphasis to alter meaning intentionally, and justify his choice by the listener's need.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship Skills & Social Awareness)

- Understands that highlighting a word helps the listener, and does not impose upon him.

- Chooses what he emphasises by what matters to his listener, not by his own excitement alone.
- Distinguishes a respectful emphasis from a domineering shout.
- Uses emphasis to make his meaning clear, not to overwhelm.

The Four Inner Senses of Emphasis

Emphasis, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the one word that lifts. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN EMPHASIS	A GUIDING WHISPER
The chosen summit	The single word that matters most, felt before it is spoken	"Feel which word is the summit — the one your meaning rests on."
The settling of the rest	The calm of the other words resting quietly around it	"Let the other words rest low, so the one can rise."
The small lift	The little rise of voice and hand at that one word	"Lift just a little — a small pulpit, not a shout."
The return to rest	The easy drop back to quiet after the lit word	"Feel your voice come back down to rest — the flash after the stillness."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the chosen summit, the settling of the rest, the small lift, and the return to rest owns the quiet highlight — for the flash that comes after stillness is seen, and one lit word is more eloquent than a shouted sentence.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👤 Safe-stop protocol. If the learner slips into raising his voice, or grows tense delivering before others, we return to a whisper and to choosing one word with no audience. Emphasis is a quiet lift, never a strain.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Social anxiety	He emphasises in writing (colouring the important word) before he emphasises aloud in front of people.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Fix a clear visual sign for the important word, and avoid exaggerated facial expression.
Difficulty with vocal control	A raised hand or an enlarged card suffices instead of a vocal emphasis.
Quickness to loudness	Practise the difference between a small lift and a shout with the whisper game; the lift is felt, not blasted.
Language difficulty	Accept marking the key word by pointing or by a coloured card within the utterance.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing conventions of emphasis and delivery across cultures.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Then listen together to a skilled orator (or a beautifully recited verse) and ask: which word did he light? how did we know it was the important one?

ii. During the session — the lit-word game. One sentence, and each person emphasises a different word; discover together how the meaning changed each time.

iii. After the session — the evening reading. In the evening reading, the learner chooses one word in each sentence to emphasise — and the reading comes alive.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child light one key word instead of stressing all, and say why?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen makes everything bold, so nothing stands out. We teach the child the one lit word.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Seventeen Unit

📌 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

🌱 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. The Fruit opened with contentment. This book adds a skill of expression: intentional highlighting — the emphasis that lights the key word.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Stresses every word, or stresses nothing; no summit stands out.
● sometimes	Emphasises the important word only with guidance; does not yet choose the key word himself.
• often	Unprompted, chooses the key word and moves the emphasis to change the meaning on purpose, and justifies it.

👤 Discrepancy-resolution protocol (inter-rater reliability). On agreement, record it. On a one-step difference, record the lower and note it. On a two-step difference, the two observe one shared session together, reconcile against the anchors, and record the agreed mark. Note the count of two-step disagreements.

The New Dimension — Intentional Highlighting (Emphasis)

BEHAVIORAL INDICATOR	◦	●	•	NOTE
Lights one key word rather than stressing all	◦	●	•
Chooses the key word himself	◦	●	•
Moves the emphasis to change the meaning on purpose	◦	●	•
Emphasises to serve the listener, not to dominate	◦	●	•

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
nabr (نَبْر)	lighting a word with a small rise	emphasis / stress
al-kalima al-miftāḥ (الكَلِمَةُ الْمِفْتَاحُ)	the most important word in the sentence	key word manbūr (مَنْبُور)	a word lit by emphasis	stressed minbar (مَنْبَر)	a raised place that lights the one on it	pulpit / platform
nabra (نَبْرَة)	a small rise in the voice	intonation lift

Output (Arabic): «أَضِيءُ كَلِمَةً وَاحِدَةً، لَا كُلَّهَا. مَوْضِعُ النَّبْرِ يَغَيِّرُ الْمَعْنَى.» — Where you stress changes the meaning.

English Bridge: “Light up one word, not all of them.” — Where you stress changes the meaning.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did the listeners remember nothing of Noor's speech at first?

RECALL

- Why is “the flash after the stillness seen,” while a constant light is not?

INFERENCE

- Take a sentence and emphasise two different words in it — how did the meaning change?

SENSORY

- When did lighting one word help someone understand exactly what you meant?

PERSONAL LINK

- The Lightning flashed without cease because it feared being unseen if it stopped. Have you ever said everything loudly, afraid a quiet word would be missed? What helped the Lightning trust the stillness?

EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER

- When did a single quiet word carry more than a whole loud sentence?

PERSONAL LINK

Do not raise every word — light up one; for the one summit is seen only when the slopes are still.

♦ A closing wisdom — the quiet highlight. “The flash that comes after stillness is seen; a constant light is not.” Let your speech have one summit the listener carries away — one lit word, quietly raised, does what a hundred shouted words cannot.

🐼 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Before you speak a sentence, choose the one word that matters most, and lift only that word a little. Do not blaze every word, or nothing will be seen. The place of your emphasis changes your whole meaning.” By the one lit word, Noor's meaning stayed in the hearts.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE EMPHASIS

The drawing. The learner writes a sentence and colours the word he will emphasise with a single bright colour — so he sees his emphasis with his own eye.

The play. “The unbroken Lightning”: one child flashes without cease (every word lit), and another flashes one flash after a stillness. Whose flash did we see?

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how one quiet flash after stillness overcomes a ceaseless glare. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Sixteen (“The Fruit's Contentment”). “Having been content with your voice (contentment), you learn now to light one word out of it (emphasis). And this emphasis resumes the ‘tone’ (nabra) you touched in the reading journey — the Sentence-Bridge — and raises it into conscious oratory.”

Looking forward — Book Eighteen (“The Fruit's Sequencing”) »

“You have learned to light the key word. In the next book — the close of the Fruit — you will learn to drive your whole speech in a persuasive order: an opening, then an argument, then a close — so your meaning leads and convinces, as a caravan is driven by a sure guide.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a wall of noise → a blinding constant flash → one lit word → a meaning that stays, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — emphasis serves the listener; it is not a domineering shout.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees carry the Fruit arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor over-stresses, then finds the quiet highlight; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds contentment behind and opens sequencing ahead, and resumes the reading-book's tone.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — emphasis becomes a lifted hand, a coloured key word, the Emphasis Lab.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — the pulpit raises one word to be seen, as emphasis lights one word; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Lightning learns to flash once after stillness and is seen; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → lab → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “the flash after stillness is seen” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a great orator (Quss, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 👉 The approved root (n-b-r) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the lifted hand and the one lit word for the child; morphology and the pulpit for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 👉 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, carrying the Fruit arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B2 and ACTFL Intermediate High.
- 👉 The four CASEL criteria (Relationship Skills & Social Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- 👉 Quss ibn Sa'ida's eloquence is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Lightning is marked symbolic.
- 👉 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (a fear of being unseen if it stops), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, learning to flash once after stillness.
- 👉 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the lifted hand, the Emphasis Lab, the coloured key word), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 👉 A crucial principle (emphasis is not raising the voice) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including social anxiety and ASD) — zero coercion.
- 👉 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 👉 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds contentment behind and opens sequencing ahead, and resumes the reading-book's tone — zero disconnected episode.
- 👉 The scale adds intentional highlighting, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 👉 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom binds the quiet highlight.
- 👉 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 👉 Five original plates in the fruit palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge; the Emphasis Lab included.

The Fruit's Emphasis

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow the quiet highlight that one lit word remembers.

Noor's heart has settled with contentment — and at the recitation contest she stresses every word with force, until the whole becomes a wall of noise and nothing sticks. When the boastful Lightning flashes without cease and blinds every eye, the remembered eloquence of the orator of the Arabs — carried by a grandmother — teaches her that a flash after stillness is seen, while a constant light is not. So Noor learns to dim her light a little and set one word upon its small pulpit — “the tree gives, and awaits no thanks” — and every face turns and remembers. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen where everything is bold and nothing stands out — only a voice learning that one lit word is more eloquent than a shouted sentence.

“Do not raise every word — light up one.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has learned to light the key word; now, at the close of the Fruit, she learns to order her whole speech: sequencing. To drive her ideas in a persuasive order — an opening that prepares, an argument that proves, a close that gathers — so she leads the listener to her meaning, as a guide drives a caravan to its goal. Scattered speech drifts like dust; ordered speech arrives and persuades — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT) (نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ; Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, ordered into a path the listener can follow. Emphasis lit the key word within the sentence; NOW

SEQUENCING ORDERS THE WHOLE SPEECH TOWARD ITS AIM — AN OPENING, AN ARGUMENT, A CLOSE — SO THE MEANING LEADS AND ARRIVES. It reaches back to emphasis and forward to the wisdom of the Harvest, and it grows the seed of debate into the very mechanism of a fair disputation.

Integration Map — sequencing orders the whole speech; the fruit made complete.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌿 Proactive caution. This book grows the sequencing of speech. Note that sequencing is an ordering that serves clarity and persuasion by the truth — not an art of manipulation or of dressing up a falsehood. Teach the learner to order his speech so his honest idea arrives clearly, never to deceive his listener with a cunning arrangement.

🌿 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale closes the Fruit: Noor has mastered lighting the important word, and now learns to order her whole speech so that it leads and persuades.

The Heart of the Book

Noor has learned emphasis, the lighting of the important word. Now, at the close of the Fruit, she learns to order her whole speech: sequencing. To drive her ideas in a persuasive order — an opening that prepares, an argument that proves, a close that gathers all — so she leads the listener step by step to her aim, as a guide drives his caravan by a sure road. Scattered speech drifts and is lost; ordered speech arrives and persuades.

📖 Historical footnote. ‘Abd al-Qāhir al-Jurjānī (d. 471 AH), the imam of rhetoric and author of the “Theory of Naẓm” (word-order), taught that meaning does not lie in words taken singly, but in their arrangement and the fineness of their sequence. From him we draw that speech has an order that leads the meaning: an opening, then an argument, then a close. (In this fruit-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

👤 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of the caravan — three cards laid in a row, three fingers counted off, a path walked station by station. He does not parse letters; he feels his ideas fall into a line that carries the listener forward. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
s – w – q	sawq · siyāq · masāq · sāqa · sā’iq

🌟 How to explain it to the child. “The word sawq (driving) has siblings! One who drives a car or a caravan is a sā’iq, and the ordering and flow of speech is a siyāq. And when you led your speech in order, you suqta it. All one family from one father: s-w-q.”

🌟 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (s-w-q) is hollow (its middle is a wāw). From it come sawq (leading toward a destination) and siyāq (an ordered sequence of speech). Point out to the teacher that siyāq in language is the ordering and arrangement of speech that leads the meaning toward its goal.

✦ Seed of Debate (the thread grows). The sequencing of speech becomes, in debate — the highest dialogue — the very mechanism of disputation: each side drives its argument in order (a claim, then a proof), then listens and replies in turn, fairly and seeking evidence, with no chaos and no interruption. So the thread grows: from contentment with the truth (Book 16), to the voice of the argument (Book 17), to the order of the disputation (this book), toward its crown in the Harvest.

— The Full Telling: “Noor's Sequencing” —

For reading aloud with the learner · seven minutes · with five original plates in the fruit palette

❧ I. NOOR SPEAKS SCATTERED IDEAS WITH NO ORDER, AND PERSUADES NO ONE ❧

Plate I — Her ideas were good, but scattered, and no one could follow.

Noor now spoke with a lovely melody and emphasis. But when she wished to persuade her friends of an idea, her speech came out scattered: she started from the middle, jumped to the end, went back to the beginning, then gave a reason and forgot her original idea!

The listeners were lost, and did not grasp what she wanted, and she persuaded no one — though her idea was good. Noor did not know that a good idea without order is lost. Scattered speech, however lovely its tune, wanders and never arrives.

II. THE SCATTERING DUST FLIES IN EVERY DIRECTION WITH NO DESTINATION

Plate II — “Order is a chain,” blew the Dust — and it reached nowhere and built nothing.

And in the desert there was the Scattering Dust. It blew in every direction at once, with no order and no destination, so it reached no place and built nothing, but only blinded the eyes and dispersed in the air. It said to Noor as it flew:

“Say all your ideas at once, Noor! Order nothing! Begin from anywhere, and jump as you please! Order is a chain, and chaos is freedom!”

Noor tried the Dust's way: she said her ideas jumbled, all at once. So her words flew off in every direction, and the listeners were struck with bewilderment, and her aim never arrived. She discovered that scattered speech is like dust: it fills the air, but reaches nothing, builds nothing, and persuades no one.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR AL-JURJANI'S WISDOM OF SEQUENCING

Plate III — “Speech is a caravan: a beginning, a road, and a destination.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the imam of the language, ‘Abd al-Qāhir al-Jurjānī, who taught that the eloquence of speech lies in the fineness of its arrangement and the order of its sequence. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom, and she said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, speech is like a caravan: it has a beginning, a road, and a destination. Order your speech in three: begin with your idea in one clear sentence (the opening), then give its reason and proof (the argument), then close with a summary that gathers it all (the close). So the listener follows you step by step until he is convinced.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “You are a complete fruit now, Noor. And every fruit ripened in order: a blossom, then a setting, then a fruit. Drive your speech in that same order, step after step, and your aim arrives ripe and persuasive.”

🌿 IV. NOOR DRIVES HER SPEECH IN ORDER: AN OPENING, AN ARGUMENT, A CLOSE 🌿

Plate IV — Idea, then reason, then close — and the listeners followed her to “yes.”

Noor ordered her speech. She wished to persuade her friends to plant a garden, and she said:

OPENING

“I propose that we plant a garden.”

ARGUMENT

“Because it will give us fruit and shade, and gather us together.”

CLOSE

“So let us begin tomorrow, together.”

And a lovely thing happened: the listeners followed her step by step — they grasped the idea, then were convinced by the reason, then grew eager for the close. They all agreed! Noor learned that ordered speech leads the listener calmly from the idea to conviction, like a caravan travelling safely toward its destination.

❧ V. NOOR DRIVES HER SPEECH IN ORDER; THE DUST LEARNS AND BECOMES AN ORDERED CARAVAN ❧

Plate V — The Dust gathered into one line and reached its destination.

Noor came to drive her speech in order in every situation: she begins, then proves, then closes. Her speech came to lead, to persuade, and to arrive. She said with confidence: “I drive my speech in order.” — and people followed her speech and were convinced by it, for it took them by the hand step by step.

And the wonder happened: the Scattering Dust saw how Noor's speech arrived by order. And it tried to arrange itself... and for the first time its motes gathered into a single line, and turned toward one destination, until it became an ordered caravan travelling by a clear road toward its goal! And it whispered: “I used to fly with no destination, so I never arrived and never built; now I have ordered myself and moved in sequence... and I have become a caravan that reaches its goal!”

And Noor knew that if she ever debated, she would drive her argument in order, then listen to her opponent and reply in turn, by proof — for a debate is a shared sequencing in fairness, not a victory by loudness. And so Noor completed the whole stage of the Fruit — contentment, emphasis, and sequencing — and her fruit ripened complete, and she made ready to gather the Harvest: wisdom, and legacy.

🕌 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of something you want to persuade someone of. Order it in three: what is your idea? what is its proof? what is your close?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor wished to persuade her friends of an idea, but her speech came out scattered, so the listeners were lost.

The Scattering Dust flew with no destination; Noor copied it, and her speech flew off and never arrived.

Noor remembered al-Jurjani's wisdom: “Order your speech — an opening, an argument, a close — so the listener follows and is convinced.”

Noor drove her speech in order and persuaded everyone, and said: “I drive my speech in order.” So the Dust became an ordered caravan.

The Three-Station Caravan

Drive any idea you wish to persuade of along three stations, one after another — and it arrives:

1 · THE OPENING

Your idea, in one clear sentence. “I propose that we...”

2 · THE ARGUMENT

Its reason and its proof. “Because it will...”

3 · THE CLOSE

A summary that gathers it. “So let us...”

🐪 The lesson of the caravan. Scattered words drift like dust; ordered words lead like a caravan to its goal. In the Arabic master: «أَبْدَأُ، فَأُبْرِهِنُ، فَأَخْتِمُ — فَأَصِلُ بِكَ إِلَى» — I begin, then prove, then close — so I bring you to my aim.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	He orders his speech in three: an opening, an argument, a close	Binding persuasion to order
Bodily movement	He counts the steps of his speech on his fingers (first, second, last)	Embodying the order of ideas
Relational warmth	He drives his speech to lead the listener calmly, not to confuse him	Order is a courtesy to the listener
Sensory alternative	He uses three cards (opening / argument / close) and arranges them before he speaks	Sequencing made tangible
English bridge	"I order my speech, so it persuades."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. The fruit made complete (beginning) — orders his speech in steps with a reminder. ← The fruit made complete (mastery) — drives his speech, unprompted, in a persuasive order (opening, argument, close), leading the listener to his aim. With this the Fruit is complete.

🍌 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR B2 / ACTFL Intermediate High). The child can organise an argument into an opening, a supporting proof, and a summarising close, drive the sequence to lead a listener to a conclusion, and tell an ordered speech from a scattered one.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Relationship Skills & Self-Management)

- Orders his ideas before he speaks.
- Begins with an opening, proves with an argument, and closes with a summary.
- Leads the listener to his aim clearly.
- Distinguishes ordered speech from scattered speech.

The Four Inner Senses of Sequencing

Sequencing, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the path that carries a listener forward. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN SEQUENCING	A GUIDING WHISPER
The chosen start	The clear first step from which the road begins	"Feel where your road begins — one clear opening."
The forward pull	The way each part draws the listener on to the next	"Feel each part pull to the next, like a caravan on its road."
The proving weight	The steadiness a reason gives beneath the idea	"Feel the ground your proof lays under your idea."
The gathered close	The rest of arriving, all the parts gathered at the end	"Feel the close gather the whole road into one arrival."

🧠 Why this matters. A child who feels the chosen start, the forward pull, the proving weight, and the gathered close owns the caravan of speech — for scattered words drift like dust, and ordered words lead like a caravan to its goal.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🧠 Safe-stop protocol. Sequencing is an ordering that serves clarity and persuasion by the truth — not an art of trickery or deceit. We teach the learner to order his speech so his honest idea arrives clearly, never to dress up a falsehood or mislead his listener with a cunning arrangement.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Logical order suits him; give a fixed visual structure (1 opening, 2 argument, 3 close) as cards he arranges.
Executive-function difficulty	Use cards or visual symbols to order the ideas step by step before speaking.
Language difficulty	Accept a simple order of two sentences (idea + reason) before moving to three; what matters is the sequence.
Impulsivity	Train him to pause and order the ideas in his mind before rushing into scattered speech.
Low confidence	Encourage him that order makes his speech stronger and clearer, so his confidence grows as he speaks.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing conventions of discourse-ordering across cultures and languages.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Much screen content is short, scattered clips; we teach the learner to build ordered, persuasive speech.

ii. During the session — the three-station caravan game. Choose a topic, and train the learner to say it in three: my idea, my proof, my close — as if driving a caravan through three stations.

iii. After the session — “persuade me in order.” When the learner asks for something, ask him to persuade you in order: what do you want? why? and what is your close? Reward the ordering, not just the request.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child order his speech (idea, proof, close) and persuade clearly?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen is scattered clips. We teach the child to drive his speech in an order that persuades.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Eighteen Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. With this book the Fruit stage is complete (contentment, emphasis, sequencing). The new dimension: the sequencing of speech and its persuasive order, a threshold to the Harvest.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Speaks scattered; jumps about with no order, and persuades no one.
● sometimes	Orders his speech only when reminded; does not yet drive the sequence unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, drives his speech in a persuasive order (opening, argument, close) and leads the listener to his aim.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
siyāq (سِيَّاق)	the ordering and flow of speech toward the meaning	context / flow
sawq (سَوَّقَ)	to lead your speech toward a destination	leading / driving muqaddima (مُقَدِّمَة)	what the speech is prepared with at its start	introduction
ḥujja (حُجَّة)	the proof that persuades	argument / proof
khātima (خَاتِمَة)	what the speech is closed and summed with	conclusion

Output (Arabic): «أَسُوِّقُ كَلَامِي بِتَرْتِيبٍ: أَبْدَأُ، فَأُبْرِهِنُ، فَأَخْتِمُ — فَأُقْنِعُ.» — Scattered words drift like dust; ordered words lead like a caravan to its goal.

English Bridge: “I order my speech, so it persuades.” — Scattered words drift like dust; ordered words lead like a caravan to its goal.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor persuade no one, though her idea was good? RECALL
- Why did the Scattering Dust reach no place and build nothing?
INFERENCE
- Order an idea you want in three now — idea, proof, close — how did it become clearer? SENSORY
- When did someone persuade you with ordered speech that took you step by step? PERSONAL LINK
- The Dust flew everywhere because order felt like a chain that trapped it. Have you ever poured out everything at once, afraid order would slow you? What helped the Dust find its road? EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER
- When did arranging your thoughts before speaking change how people received them? PERSONAL LINK

Ordered speech leads, and scattered speech wanders; I begin, then prove, then close — and bring you to my aim.

♦ A closing wisdom — the fruit made complete. “Meaning lies not in words taken singly, but in their arrangement.” Emphasis lights one word within the sentence; sequencing orders the sentences toward the aim — and so your eloquence is complete: a lit word in an ordered speech.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you want to persuade or explain, order your speech: begin with your idea (opening), then give its reason and proof (argument), then close with a summary. So the listener follows you and is convinced.” By ordered sequencing, Noor persuaded her listeners.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE CARAVAN

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a caravan of three stations along a road: the first station (my idea), the second (my proof), the third (my close), and write an idea on each station.

The play. Children play the “persuading caravan”: each chooses a topic and drives his speech through three ordered stations to persuade the rest. Whoever orders his speech and persuades wins.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how the dust of scattered speech turns into an ordered caravan that arrives. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Seventeen (“The Fruit’s Emphasis”). “You learned to bring out the important word by emphasis. Now you learn to order the whole speech by sequencing. Emphasis lights the important within the sentence; sequencing orders the sentences toward the aim. So your eloquence is complete: a lit word in an ordered speech.”

Looking forward — Book Nineteen (“The Harvest’s Wisdom”) »

“You have completed the ripe Fruit — contentment, emphasis, sequencing. In the last stage — the Harvest — you gather the essence of all you learned: wisdom, to say the right word in its time; then legacy, to teach another what you learned. And in the Harvest the seed of debate bears fruit: a full and mannerly disputation whose aim is the showing of the truth, not the victory.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐪 Zero logical error — the tale runs scattered speech → a destination-less dust → an ordered caravan → a persuaded listener, unbroken.
- 🐪 Zero moral coercion — sequencing serves clarity and truth, never trickery or the dressing-up of falsehood.
- 🐪 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Fruit arc consistently.
- 🐪 Zero psychological gap — Noor scatters, then finds the ordered road; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐪 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds emphasis behind and opens the Harvest's wisdom, and grows the seed of debate.
- 🐪 Zero passive activity — sequencing becomes three cards, three counted fingers, the three-station caravan.
- 🐪 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐪 Zero symbolic error — a caravan is driven in order to its goal, as speech is ordered to its aim; the metaphor holds.
- 🐪 Zero psychological miscue — the Dust learns to order itself and becomes a caravan; understood, not defeated.
- 🐪 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → caravan → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐪 Zero cognitive coercion — “meaning lies in arrangement” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐪 Zero cultural imbalance — a great male scholar (al-Jurjani, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 🍌 The approved root (s-w-q) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the three-station caravan and counted fingers for the child; morphology and nazm for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🍌 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Fruit arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR B2 and ACTFL Intermediate High.
- 🍌 The four CASEL criteria (Relationship Skills & Self-Management) are set as observable outcomes.
- 🍌 al-Jurjani's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Dust is marked symbolic.
- 🍌 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (order felt as a trapping chain), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, ordering itself into a caravan.
- 🍌 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the three-station caravan, the ordering cards), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🍌 A crucial proactive caution (sequencing serves truth, not manipulation) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including ASD and executive-function difficulty) — zero coercion.
- 🍌 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🍌 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds emphasis behind and opens the Harvest's wisdom, and grows the seed of debate into the mechanism of disputation — zero disconnected episode.
- 🍌 The scale adds the sequencing of speech and completes the Fruit's dimensions, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 🍌 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom completes the fruit.
- 🍌 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 🍌 Five original plates in the fruit palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge; the three-station caravan included.

The Fruit's Sequencing

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens —
and grow ordered speech that leads and persuades.

Noor has learned to light the key word — but when she tries to persuade her friends, her speech comes out scattered, and no one can follow her good idea. When the Scattering Dust tells her to fling every thought at once, and her words blow off and reach nowhere, the remembered wisdom of the imam of rhetoric — carried by a grandmother — teaches her that speech is a caravan with a beginning, a road, and a destination. So Noor learns to drive her speech in three — an opening, an argument, a close — and lead her listeners step by step to “yes,” until even the scattering dust gathers into an ordered caravan that reaches its goal. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen of scattered clips — only a voice learning that ordered words lead like a caravan to their goal.

“I drive my speech in order — so it persuades.”

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has reached the Harvest, where the fruits of a whole journey are gathered. The first of the harvest: wisdom. Having learned every art of speech and of silence, she now learns their essence — to say the right word, at the right time, to the right person. Wisdom is not to know all things, but to choose the word well and its season — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT) (نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقَرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ; Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — presence, ripened into judgement. Every skill of the journey now converges: WISDOM IS TO GATHER THEM AND CHOOSE THE RIGHT WORD, AT THE RIGHT TIME, FOR THE RIGHT PERSON — THE DELIBERATION THAT TURNS A WORD FROM A STORM INTO A FRUIT. It reaches back through the whole vine and forward to the last book, legacy — and here the seed of debate bears its full fruit: a disputation whose aim is the showing of the truth, not the victory.

Integration Map — wisdom gathers the whole journey; the first fruit of the Harvest.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

👉 Proactive caution. This book grows wisdom and deliberation. Deliberation does not mean staying silent about the truth, or shirking a hard moment. Teach the learner that some words — a call for help, or reporting a harm that befalls him or another — do not wait for a time, but are said at once, and to those he trusts.

👉 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). The tale opens the Harvest: Noor has completed her ripening, and now gathers the first fruit of a lifetime — wisdom in speech.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Harvest — a harvest gathered (the opening of the Harvest stage)
AGE BAND	19+ years · a flexible overlap for the advanced or the delayed learner
CORE ROOT	ḥ-k-m (Ḥikma, wisdom): to say the right word, at the right time, to the right person
ROOT FAMILY	ḥikma · ḥakīm · muḥkam · aḥkama · ḥukm (all from ḥ-k-m)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Deliberates and thinks before he speaks, choosing the word fit for the situation, the person, and the time
METAPHOR	A harvest comes only in its season; and wisdom is a word said in its time, so it bears fruit
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays (invoked through Grandmother Ramla) + Grandmother Ramla
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor (the harvest — she grows across the books)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Reckless Storm — symbolic (non-historical), embodying a rushing without deliberation or wisdom, and learns patience and so hits the mark
MASTERY CRITERION	A harvest gathered: deliberates and weighs his speech, and says the right word in its fit time
CASEL DOMAIN	Responsible Decision-Making + Self-Awareness
INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS	CEFR C1 (choosing apt speech for the situation and managing dialogue with wisdom) · ACTFL Advanced Low · CASEL Responsible Decision-Making

The Heart of the Book

Noor has reached the Harvest, where the fruits of a whole life's journey are gathered. The first of the harvest is wisdom. Having learned every art of speech and of silence, she now learns their essence: to say the right word, at the right time, to the right person. For wisdom is not the knowing of all things, but the good choosing of the word and its season.

🌿 Historical footnote. al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays (d. c. 67 AH), a chief of the Arabs proverbial for forbearance, wisdom, and deliberation, would take his time and weigh his words, and so hit the mark. From him we draw that wisdom is the fruit of deliberation and of the good choosing of the word in its time. (In this harvest-world he is honoured through Grandmother Ramla's telling, not present in person.)

The Root & Its Kin — a Skill and a Language

🌿 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of the pause — a hand laid on the chest, a breath, a silent count of three, weighing before the word leaves the lips. He does not parse letters; he feels the deliberation settle him, and the word ripen before it is spoken. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
ḥ – k – m	ḥikma · ḥakīm · muḥkam · aḥkama · ḥukm

🐼 How to explain it to the child. “The word ḥikma (wisdom) has siblings! The owner of wisdom is ḥakīm; firm, well-made speech is muḥkam; and when you perfected a thing and completed it, you aḥkamta it. All one family from one father: ḥ-k-m.”

🐼 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (ḥ-k-m) is sound. Its origin is restraint (“he reined the beast”: he held it by its bridle); hence wisdom, which restrains its owner from a slip. Point out to the teacher that wisdom is the placing of a thing in its place, and of the word in its time.

✦ The Debate bears fruit (the crown of the thread). Here the seed of debate we planted comes to its fullness — from contentment with the truth (Book 16), to the voice of the argument (17), to the mechanism of disputation (18), crowned now by wisdom. A praiseworthy debate (munāẓara) aims at the showing of the truth, not at victory; a blameworthy wrangling (mirāʾ) aims only at a triumph for the self. It is told that the grammarians Sībawayh and al-Kisāʾī disputed the “Wasp Question” (المسألة الزنبورية): Sībawayh's view was the sounder to the grammarians, yet the “win” in the gathering fell to the other. The wise lesson: the victory is not always the truth — so seek the truth, not the applause, and submit to it when it appears, even on your opponent's tongue. That is the perfection of wisdom.

Plate I — She spoke without weighing the word or its time, and it hurt where it might have helped.

Noor had become a full, ripe tree, bearing golden fruit and mastering every art of speech. But she was hasty: she said whatever word came to her at once, at any time, to anyone, without pausing to weigh whether it was the right word, or whether this was its time.

So at times she counselled a grieving friend when it was no time for counsel, or spoke a truth at a wrong moment so that it wounded rather than helped. Noor did not know that a right word in the wrong time can harm. Wisdom is not only in what you say, but in when, and how, and to whom.

❧ II. THE RECKLESS STORM RUSHES WITHOUT PATIENCE, AND SHATTERS ❧

Plate II — “Patience is weakness,” raged the Storm — and it tore up the useful with the harmful.

And on the horizon the Reckless Storm blew up. It rushed with all its force in every direction without patience, uprooting the useful crop with the harmful, and shattering out of season. It said to Noor as it raged:

“Rush without thinking, Noor! Say everything at once, at full force, at any time! Patience is weakness, and rushing is strength! Do not wait for the fit time — all times are the same!”

Noor tried the Storm's way: she rushed out her speech without patience. So she shattered feelings, and spoiled situations, and spoke a right thing at a wrong time so that it became a wrong. She discovered that rushing without wisdom is like the storm: a force that shatters and does not build, and tears up the useful with the harmful.

III. GRANDMOTHER RAMLA BRINGS NOOR AL-AHNAF IBN QAYS'S WISDOM OF SPEECH

Plate III — “Deliberation is not weakness; it is the bridle of wisdom.”

And Noor remembered what is told of the deliberate sage al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays, proverbial for forbearance, patience, and fine speech. And Grandmother Ramla was beside her, reminding her of his wisdom, and she said as if carrying his meaning:

“Noor, wisdom is three: the right word, at the right time, to the right person. Before you speak, deliberate a little, and weigh: will my speech help now? Many a right word has harmed because it was said out of its time. Deliberation is not weakness — it is the bridle of wisdom.”

And Grandmother Ramla added: “Look at your golden fruits, Noor — they were gathered only in their season. Had they been plucked before their time, they would have been bitter. So it is with the word: it has a season. Say it in its time, and it will be sweet and useful, like a ripe fruit.”

IV. NOOR DELIBERATES AND THINKS BEFORE SHE SPEAKS, AND CHOOSES THE RIGHT WORD

Plate IV — She weighed the word and its time, and it fell like a ripe fruit, sweet.

Noor began to deliberate. Before she spoke, she was silent a moment, and thought: what is the right word? and is this its time? and to whom do I say it? When she saw a grieving friend, she did not rush with counsel, but waited until he was calm. And before she spoke, she laid her hand on her chest and counted within: one... two... three — and felt the weight of the pause settle her, then chose a gentle word in its fit time.

And a lovely thing happened: her words came to hit the mark and to bear fruit! The counsel in its time helped, and the fit word healed, and the truth in its season was accepted. Noor learned that the moment of deliberation before speaking is what turns a word from a storm into a fruit. Wisdom is a pause, and then a striking of the mark.

V. NOOR SAYS THE RIGHT WORD IN ITS TIME, AND DEBATES FOR THE TRUTH; THE STORM BECOMES A WISE WIND

Plate V — The Storm gentled into a wise wind that sows the seed in its season.

Noor grew wise: she deliberated, and weighed, and chose the right word in its right time. People came to her to hear her word, for it was little, precious, and true to the mark. She said with the calm of the wise: “I make my word firm, and choose its time.” — and her word came to bear fruit in the hearts as her tree bore fruit. And one day Noor debated a friend on a matter: she drove her argument in order and calm, then listened to his in turn. And when the truth appeared on his tongue, she submitted to it gladly, without stubbornness, and said: “Submitting to the truth is the true victory.” So all who were near her knew that a wise debate shows the truth, and does not seek the triumph.

And the wonder happened: the Reckless Storm saw how Noor's deliberate word bore fruit. And it tried to grow calm and patient... and for the first time its rushing eased, and it came to choose when to blow and where, until it became a wise wind that scatters the seeds in their season only, and makes life spring up wherever it passes! And it whispered: “I used to rush out of season and shatter; now I have taken my time and chosen my moment... and I have become a wind that sows life in its season!”

And the Storm learned that patience turns shattering into sowing, and recklessness into wisdom. And so Noor gathered the first fruit of the Harvest: wisdom — her word became right and useful, and there remained one last fruit for her to gather: to pass on what she had learned to those who come after.

🌻 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Think of an important word you want to say to someone. Ask yourself: is it the right word? and is this its fit time?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

Noor became ripe and eloquent, but she rushed out her speech without deliberation, so she sometimes wounded without meaning to.

The Reckless Storm blew up, rushing without patience and shattering; Noor copied it, and spoiled situations.

Noor remembered al-Ahnaf ibn Qays's wisdom: "Wisdom is a right word, at a right time, to a right person. Deliberate and weigh."

Noor deliberated and chose the word in its time, and it bore fruit, and she said: "I make my word firm, and choose its time." So the Storm became a wise wind.

The Three Rights of Wisdom

al-Ahnaf's wisdom is a threefold measure. Before an important word, weigh it against all three:

THE RIGHT WORD

Is this the fit word — true, kind, and useful?

THE RIGHT TIME

Is this its season — is the listener ready to receive it?

THE RIGHT PERSON

Is this the one it should be said to?

👉 The pause that weighs. Lay a hand on the chest, breathe, and count within — one, two, three — then ask the Three Rights. In the Arabic master: «الْكَلِمَةُ الصَّائِبَةُ، فِي» الْوَقْتِ الصَّائِبِ، لِلشَّخْصِ الصَّائِبِ — for a right word out of its time may harm, and in its time bears fruit.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	He deliberates, then says the word fit for the situation, the time, and the person	Binding speech to wisdom
Bodily movement	He pauses a moment, breathes, and thinks before speaking on an important matter	Embodying deliberation
Relational warmth	He chooses the time of his speech by the state of the listener (waits until the grieving one is calm)	Wisdom is a care for the other
Sensory alternative	He uses the pause rule (count to three and ask: is it right? is this its time?) before speaking	Wisdom made tangible
English bridge	“The right word, at the right time.”	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A harvest gathered (beginning) — deliberates before speaking with a reminder. ← A harvest gathered (mastery) — weighs his speech unprompted, so he chooses the right word in its fit time for the fit person, and it hits the mark and bears fruit.

🐾 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR C1 / ACTFL Advanced Low).

The child can pause and weigh before speaking, choose apt words for the situation, the time, and the person, manage a dialogue or debate to show the truth rather than win, and submit to the truth when it appears — even on another's tongue.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Self-Awareness)

- Deliberates and thinks before speaking on important matters.
- Chooses the word fit for the situation.
- Heeds the fit time and the state of the listener.
- Discerns that a right word out of its time may harm.

The Four Inner Senses of Wisdom

Wisdom, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of the pause that ripens a word. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN WISDOM	A GUIDING WHISPER
The reining pause	The steadying halt before the word leaves the lips	“Feel the pause rein you in, like a hand on a bridle.”
The weighing heart	The inner weighing of the word against its time	“Feel the word settle on the scale — is it right? is this its season?”
The reading of the moment	The sensing of whether the listener is ready	“Feel the moment — is he ready to receive your word now?”
The ripe release	The ease of a word that falls in its right time	“Feel the word fall ripe, in its season — sweet, not bitter.”

🌾 Why this matters. A child who feels the reining pause, the weighing heart, the reading of the moment, and the ripe release owns the first fruit of the Harvest — for wisdom is not many words, but a right word said in its time, so it bears fruit.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

🌾 Safe-stop protocol. Wisdom and deliberation do not mean staying silent about the truth or shirking hard situations, but the good choosing of the word and its time. We teach the learner that some words — a call for help, or the reporting of a harm — do not wait for a time, but are said at once.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Impulsivity / hyperactivity	Teach the tangible pause rule (count to three, breathe, then speak) as a practical tool before speaking.
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Clarify the situations of fit time with concrete examples and social stories, and honour his directness while teaching consideration.
Anxiety or hesitation	Distinguish wise deliberation from a silence of fear; encourage him to say his word with confidence in its time.
Difficulty reading situations	Teach the signs of the fit time (is the listener calm? busy? grieving?) step by step.
An expression-suppressing environment	Reassure him that wisdom is not suppression, but the good choosing of the time, with his right to express himself intact.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing conventions of the timing of speech and of courtesy across cultures.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the screen-box. Put devices away. Screens habituate the hasty, instant reply; we grow deliberation and the wisdom of choosing the word and its time.

ii. During the session — the fit-time game. Present situations and ask: is this a fit time for this word? and why? Train the learner to weigh the word and its time.

iii. After the session — the moment of deliberation. Encourage the learner in the pause rule before speaking on important matters: I breathe, I think, then I speak. Your own deliberation is the most eloquent example.

🌟 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many times did our child deliberate and choose his word and its time wisely, instead of rushing?” A star for each. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen teaches the hasty reply. We teach the wisdom of the word in its time.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Nineteen Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows. The Juthur Scale (JPS) has five cumulative dimensions. The five earlier stages are complete. This book — the first of the Harvest — adds a closing dimension of decision-making: the wisdom of speech and the choosing of the time.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Rushes out his speech with no deliberation; a right word may harm out of its time.
● sometimes	Deliberates and chooses the time only when reminded; does not yet weigh unprompted.
• often	Unprompted, weighs his speech and chooses the right word in its fit time for the fit person, so it bears fruit.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
ḥikma (حِكْمَة)	saying the right thing in its time and place	wisdom
ḥakīm (حَكِيم)	one who weighs his word and sets it in its place	wise person
ta'annin (تَأَنُّنٌ)	deliberating before speaking or acting	deliberation
ṣamt (صَمْتُ)	holding the tongue when silence is more eloquent	purposeful silence
tawqīt (تَوَقِيت)	choosing the fit moment for the word	timing

Output (Arabic): «أَحْكُمُ كَلِمَتِي، وَأَخْتَارُ وَقَّتَهَا، فَتُصِيبُ وَتُثْمِرُ.» — Wisdom is harvested in its season: the right word, spoken at the right moment.

English Bridge: “The right word, at the right time.” — Wisdom is harvested in its season: the right word, spoken at the right moment.

Questions of Understanding

- Why did Noor's words sometimes wound, though they were right?

RECALL

- Why did the Reckless Storm tear up the useful with the harmful?

INFERENCE

- Think of a word you want to say — when is its fit time?

SENSORY

- When did someone say a right word to you at just the right time, and it moved you?

PERSONAL LINK

- The Storm rushed because waiting felt like weakness to it. Have you ever blurted something out to seem strong or quick? What helped the Storm find patience?

EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER

- When did submitting to the truth — even when you had wanted to win — turn out to be the real victory?

PERSONAL LINK

Wisdom is not the abundance of speech, but a right word said in its time, so it bears fruit.

♦ A closing wisdom — the first fruit of the Harvest. “The victory is not always the truth — so seek the truth, not the applause.” Deliberate, weigh the word and its time, and when the truth appears, submit to it gladly, even on another's tongue — that is the perfection of wisdom.

🏆 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “Before you speak on an important matter, deliberate, and ask yourself: is this the right word? and is this its fit time? and to whom do I say it? A wise word in its time bears fruit; out of its time it may harm.” By wisdom, Noor's word hit the mark.

Craft & Media

SCAN TO HEAR THE WISDOM

The drawing. Ask the child to draw a balance-scale: a word in one pan and a clock (the time) in the other, and write beneath it: “The right word in its time bears fruit.”

The play. Children play the “sage of the moment”: a situation is presented (an angry friend, a piece of sad news), and each proposes what the right word is and when to say it. Whoever chooses the word and its time most wisely wins.

Audio. The mark opens the tale, and how the storm of recklessness turns into a wise wind that sows in its season. (The audio address is reserved and will be sealed to the mark before printing.)

The Bridge of Memory — the Cumulative Echo

« Looking back — Book Eighteen and the whole Fruit. “You completed the Fruit — contentment, emphasis, sequencing — and your fruit ripened. Now, in the Harvest, you gather the essence of it all: wisdom. Having learned how to speak, to order, and to highlight, you learn when to say the word and to whom — the fruit of all that went before.”

Looking forward — Book Twenty, the close of the journey (“Roots of the Harvest”) »

“You have become wise, saying the right word in its time. One last fruit remains — the close of the whole journey: legacy — to give what you learned to those who come after, so you become the teacher, and your seed bears new seeds that begin their own journey.”

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a hasty word → a shattering storm → a weighed pause → a word that bears fruit, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — deliberation is never a silence about the truth; the urgent word (help, harm) is said at once.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees open the Harvest arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — Noor rushes, then finds the reining pause; the emotion fits the age.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge binds the whole Fruit and opens legacy, and crowns the seed of debate.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — wisdom becomes the pause rule, the Three Rights, the hand on the chest.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — a harvest comes in its season, as a wise word comes in its time; the metaphor holds.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Storm learns patience and becomes a wise, sowing wind; understood, not defeated.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → the Three Rights → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “the victory is not always the truth” is discovery, not dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — a great male sage (al-Ahnaf, invoked) and a female elder (Ramla) share the wisdom.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the book is passed to the final press:

- 🌱 The approved root (ḥ-k-m) is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the reining pause and the Three Rights for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🌱 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, opening the Harvest arc, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR C1 and ACTFL Advanced Low.
- 🌱 The four CASEL criteria (Responsible Decision-Making & Self-Awareness) are set as observable outcomes.
- 🌱 al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays's wisdom is invoked narratively through Grandmother Ramla (he is not present in person), preserving the line between history and symbol; the Storm is marked symbolic.
- 🌱 The counter-character bears a plausible inner motive (waiting felt as weakness), closed with an empathy question — understood, not evil, gentling into a wise, sowing wind.
- 🌱 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the pause rule, the Three Rights, the hand on the chest), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🌱 A crucial proactive caution (deliberation is not silence about the truth or a call for help) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including ASD and impulsivity) — zero coercion.
- 🌱 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🌱 The cumulative echo is bidirectional: it binds the whole Fruit and opens legacy, and crowns the seed of debate (truth over victory) — zero disconnected episode.
- 🌱 The scale adds the wisdom of speech and the choosing of time, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol — cumulative growth, not burden.
- 🌱 The questions hold a sensory and an empathy question, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom crowns the debate thread.
- 🌱 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.
- 🌱 Five original plates in the harvest palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge; the Three Rights included.

The Harvest's Wisdom

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens —
and grow the wisdom of the right word in its right time.

Noor has reached the Harvest, ripe and eloquent — yet she rushes out her speech without weighing it, so a right word lands at the wrong moment and wounds. When the Reckless Storm tells her that patience is weakness and tears up the useful with the harmful, the remembered wisdom of a deliberate sage — carried by a grandmother — teaches her the three rights: the right word, at the right time, to the right person. So Noor learns to pause, to lay her hand on her chest and count to three, to say the fit word in its season — and when she debates, to seek the truth rather than the win, submitting to it gladly even on another's tongue — until even the reckless storm gentles into a wise wind that sows the seed in its season. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: no screen of hasty replies — only a voice learning that wisdom is a right word said in its time.

The Juthur system · The Art of Expression — twenty books. Noor has travelled, across twenty books, from a small seed to a fruiting tree. And now, at the close, we discover that all we learned of expression — the breath, the voice, the listening, the dialogue, the empathy, the silence, the counsel — could never have borne fruit but for a hidden root that works in silence. And the ripe fruit is not an end, but bears in its heart a new seed — so the circle begins again. This is legacy: not to give the fruit, but to give the seed that renews the life — through Tactile Reading Theory (TrT; نَظَرِيَّةُ الْقِرَاءَةِ الْمَلْمُوسَةِ, Amer 2024).

THE SINGLE THREAD — WHERE THE THREAD BECOMES A CIRCLE. Every book was one skill of presence; NOW THE LAST ROOT, THE HIDDEN ROOT, IS REVEALED AS THE SECRET OF THEM ALL — PRESENCE OF THE HEART, AND THE PASSING OF THE SEED TO THE ONE WHO COMES AFTER. The ripe fruit is not an end: it carries a seed, and the circle turns back to the first breath. Presence is the first manner of dialogue, and all expression begins with our being truly here.

Integration Map — the thread becomes a circle: the harvest returns to the seed.

Before You Begin — for Teacher & Parent

🌱 Proactive caution. This closing book is a mirror and a hope, not a trial. Its aim is a tender wakefulness, not blame, and it does not demonise technology (which is a useful tool; the trouble is only when it absents the present). Let no learner feel his family does not love him, and lay no guilt on a tired mother or father — open the hearts gently. And if a child truly lives with neglect, surround him with warmth and guide him to a grown-up he trusts. Let every parent be reassured: you are not alone in this; awareness is a step of love, not a condemnation — a small beginning is enough.

🌱 How to use this book. Two tellings — brief (3 minutes) and full (7 minutes). This time the tale is real — a dinner table in a home like any home — crowning all we learned of expression and revealing its hidden secret: the root. Here Noor (the symbol of the journey) meets the real world in a child's drawing. A book to be read by the whole family together.

Book Identity Card

LEVEL / DEGREE	Harvest — a fruit that bears a seed (the circle completes and reopens)
AGE BAND	16+ · and for the whole family — the closing book is read in every home
CORE ROOT	j-dh-r (Jadhr, root): the hidden origin beneath the earth that steadies the tree, feeds it, and gives it its lofty voice — and it works in silence
ROOT FAMILY	jadhr · judhūr · tajadhdhara · mutajadhdhir · judhayr (all from j-dh-r)
SENSORY ANCHOR	Is present in heart, not in body only; sets the screen aside, looks into the eyes, and listens to the one who awaits his care
METAPHOR	The hidden root beneath the earth is the secret of the tree's life and voice — as sincere presence is the secret of the life of our bonds
THE TWO WISE FIGURES	The Teacher (the source of the root's wisdom, invoked through the child's tale) + Grandmother Ramla (the silent presence at the table)
SYMBOLIC CHARACTER	Noor — present in the child's drawing (the tree of the whole journey, with its little root)
COUNTER-CHARACTER	The Distributed Distraction — symbolic, not one person but a preoccupation living in every pocket (the screen that brings the absent near and absents the present); it awakens when an innocent child's question wakes it
MASTERY CRITERION	A fruit that bears a seed: is present in heart, sees the hidden root in his bonds, and passes on what he learned to the one who comes after
CASEL DOMAIN	Social Awareness & empathy — and this closing book gathers the competencies of the whole journey

The Heart of the Book

Noor has come, across twenty books, from a small seed to a fruiting tree. And now, at the close, we discover that all we learned of expression — the breath, the voice, the listening, the dialogue, the empathy, the silence, the counsel — could never have borne fruit but for a hidden root that works in silence. And the fruit, when it ripens, is not an end, but carries in its heart a new seed, and so the circle begins again. This is legacy: not to give the fruit, but to give the seed that renews life.

👤 Historical footnote. In this closing book the wisdom comes from two sources near to every child: a teacher who poses a question that opens the mind, and a grandmother — Ramla, who has walked with us since the seed — present, silent, at the table. And we draw from it that the greatest wisdom may come from the smallest mouth: from a child who sees what we do not see.

The Root & Its Kin — the Root that Names the Whole 👤 Body before symbol (the first TrT principle). The child meets this root through the body of presence — the screen laid down, the eyes lifted to another's eyes, the ear turned to the one who waits. He does not parse letters; he feels what it is to be truly here, and that the deepest thing between people is unseen, like a root. The morphology below is for the teacher alone.

ROOT (THE SKILL)	ROOT FAMILY (WORDS OF THE SAME LINEAGE)
j – dh – r	jadhr · judhūr · tajadhdhara · mutajadhdhir · judhayr

🌱 How to explain it to the child. “The word jadhr (root) has siblings! The many branching origins beneath the earth are judhūr (roots); a tree that has fixed and settled in the earth has tajadhdhara; a deep, firm, settled thing is mutajadhdhir; and a small root is a judhayr. All one family from one father: j-dh-r.”

🌱 Morphological note for the teacher. The root (j-dh-r) is sound. Its origin is the origin and base of a thing. From it come the root of a tree (its origin beneath the earth) and the root of a word (the origin it branches from — the heart of the Juthur system). Point out to the teacher that what is beneath the earth of a root is often greater than what is above it, as a person's hidden origin is deeper than his outward show.

— The Full Telling: “The Roots of a Table” —

For reading and reflection in the family · seven minutes · with five original plates in the harvest palette

❦ I. THE SILENT SUPPER: A FULL TABLE, ABSENT HEARTS — AND GRANDMOTHER RAMLA WATCHING IN SILENCE ❦

Plate I — A full table, and hidden screens beneath it — and Grandmother Ramla watching, quietly sad.

After a long day's effort, the weary mother gathered her scattered family around the supper table. She had made each one what he loved: for this one his favourite dish, for that one her sweet, and for the little one the pizza he adores — and he was the last to come, for he wished to finish something “important” first.

They sat. But the table was silent. The elder brother was finishing his game, the sister was messaging her friends, the father was following a news item, and all — the wonder of it — hid the phone beneath the table, stealing glances at it in secret, as if it were a secret. Present in body, absent in heart. And Grandmother Ramla looked at them in silence, a quiet sorrow in her eyes.

II. THE SILENT WOUND: A CHILD HOLDS HIS DRAWING, WAITING TO BE SEEN, AND MEETS A PRETENDED CARE

Plate II — He lifted his drawing and waited; “lovely, dear,” came the answer, without a glance.

The little one was carrying something precious: a drawing he had made that day in class. His teacher had told him it was the loveliest drawing in the class! So he had waited for this moment — the supper, when the family is gathered — to surprise them with it, for it is the only time he finds them together.

He lifted his drawing and said with joy: “Look what I drew!” But... no one raised his eyes. One of them said without looking, “Lovely, my dear,” and went back to his screen. They mimed their care, their hearts far away. The little one laid his drawing quietly on his lap, and the light in his eyes dimmed. He was not angry — only sad, for he had wanted them to see him, and no one saw.

III. AN INNOCENT QUESTION BREAKS THE ICE OF SILENCE, AND THE HEADS AND SMILES RISE

Plate III — “I’m the only hungry one — hungry for you, not for food!” — and the ice broke.

The little one looked around him: everyone bent over his lap, and the light of the screens dancing on their faces. So he thought with his child's logic, then asked, in his small voice, a question that made them all laugh:

“Mama... are the phones hungry too? You all feed them and look at them all the time... I'm the only hungry one — but I'm hungry for you, not for the food!”

The father laughed, the sister smiled, the brother lifted his head. The innocent question broke the ice of silence, and did what lectures cannot: it touched the hearts with honesty, not with blame. They looked at one another, as if they had just woken.

❧ IV. THE BREAD BASKET GATHERS WHAT THE SCREENS HAD STOLEN: A LOAF FOR EACH, AND THE PHONE IN THE BASKET ❧

Plate IV — Bread for each, and the phone in the basket — and the hands emptied of screens, the table filled with faces.

And suddenly, the little one rose, and took up the bread basket. He carried it round to everyone, and said as if it were a beloved game:

“This is a game! I give each of you a piece of bread... in exchange for putting his phone in the basket! Bread is eaten together, and the phone can wait.”

They all laughed and agreed. Each took his bread and placed his phone in the basket. And so the basket that had carried the bread — what gathers us — came now to carry the phones — what steals our presence when we misuse it. And for the first time in a long while, the hands were emptied of screens, and the table filled with faces.

❦ V. THE DRAWING AND THE ROOT: A TREE (NOOR)
WITH A LITTLE ROOT, A QUESTION THAT OPENS THE DOORS, AND A MOTHER'S TEAR ❦

Plate V — A tree named Noor, and beneath it a little root — the secret of all that grew.

Now that the hearts had returned, the father — who a moment before had been the least attentive — said: “And now, my little one, tell us about your drawing.” The child's face lit, and he lifted his drawing: a lush and lovely tree, and beneath it — below the line of the earth — a little root, drawn in childlike strokes.

And he began to tell, in his small words, what the teacher had said: “Today she challenged us to draw what we cannot see! She said: do you see the tree in front of the class? Draw it with no leaves and no fruit... draw what is under the earth — she meant the roots! And she said: a tree cannot live without the part no one sees; it is the unknown soldier, the secret of survival we never notice, yet it gives the tree its firmness, its life, and its lofty voice... and it works in silence.”

The table fell silent — but this time it was the silence of reflection, not of distraction. Then the child lifted his eyes, and asked a question that shook the hearts:

“And I was thinking... does a person have a root, like a tree? Is there something in us that is the secret of our lasting — but we cannot see it?”

No one answered in words. But the mother's eyes filled with tears — not from sorrow, but because her youngest had said what she, for all her effort, could not. And each looked at those around him, as if seeing his roots for the first time. And the drawing lay at the centre of the table: a tree named Noor, and beneath it a small root — the secret of all that grew.

And in that moment they all understood — without anyone saying a thing — that the hidden root of their family was this very moment: to gather, and to listen, and to see what lies beneath the words. They were gathered... no longer apart, though they had been present all along. And on the table the drawing seemed to pulse: a tree bearing a fruit, and in the heart of the fruit a small seed, waiting... to begin the story anew.

And it was as though Noor — who began, in the first book, a small seed learning to breathe — had become today a fruiting tree, living on in this child who was present in his heart, and so woke the hearts. And he, in his turn, carries a new seed... so Noor does not end, but is born again in every child who is present, and listens, and asks, and speaks with the heart to those around him. For presence is the first manner of dialogue, and all expression begins with our being truly here.

🕯 The Silence of the Bodily Question (4–5 seconds). “Sit a moment, and imagine a supper table where everyone is present in body, absent in heart. What is the hidden root that ties your hearts? And when was the last time you looked into the eyes of one you love, with no screen between you?”

The Brief Telling (for the youngest · 3 minutes)

Short sentences, the selfsame meaning.

The weary mother gathered her family for supper and made each one what he loved, but all were busy with the phone beneath the table, glancing at it in secret.

The little one held up his drawing — the loveliest in the class — to show them, and no one raised his eyes, and his light dimmed.

He asked innocently: “Are the phones hungry? I'm the one who's hungry — for you!” They laughed and woke, then he gathered their phones in the bread basket in exchange for a piece of bread each.

He told of the teacher's challenge — “draw what you cannot see: the root” — and asked: “Is there a hidden root in us, the secret of our lasting?” The mother's eyes filled, and the hearts gathered without parting.

The Bread Basket & What We Cannot See

Two small, tangible rituals carry the whole meaning of this book — one for the table, one for the heart:

♦ The Bread Basket

At the meal, each places his phone in one basket and takes a piece of bread. Bread is eaten together; the phone waits. The basket that gathers us carries away what scatters us.

♦ Draw the Root

Each draws the tree of his family — and beneath the earth-line, the hidden root that binds them (love, memories, moments together). Draw what cannot be seen.

🍷 The lesson. The greatest roots are the most hidden, and the truest presence is to see the one before you. In the Arabic master: «مَا لَا نَرَاهُ، قَدْ يَكُونُ أَهَمَّ مَا فِيْنَا» — what we cannot see may be the most important thing in us.

The Five Elements of Application

ELEMENT	ACTIVITY	PURPOSE
Language output	"I teach you what I learned, so the roots endure" — he passes on a skill	Binding legacy to language
Bodily movement	Sets the screen aside and is present in heart: a look in the eyes, an ear for the one who waits	Embodying presence
Relational warmth	Teaches one younger than him a skill he mastered (he bequeaths what he harvested)	Legacy joins the generations
Sensory alternative	The "tree of roots": he draws what he learned in the roots and what he will pass on in the fruit	Fixing legacy through the senses
English bridge	"What we cannot see is the secret of our lasting."	Linguistic balance

Sub-Degree & Mastery Criterion (graduated)

A two-stage criterion. A fruit that bears a seed (beginning) — turns to the one who awaits his care with a reminder, and is present in heart for moments. ← A fruit that bears a seed (mastery) — is present in heart, not in body only, sees the hidden root in his bonds, and passes on what he learned to the one who comes after — so his fruit bears a new seed.

🍌 TrT Can-Do (a communicative criterion; CEFR C1 / ACTFL Advanced Low).

The child can be present in heart with another (looking, listening, setting distraction aside), narrate and reflect on an affective situation, perceive the unseen root beneath the surface of people and things, and teach a skill he has mastered to another — turning a learner into a teacher.

CASEL Behavioral Criteria (integrative — the journey gathered)

- Is present in heart in his meetings (he looks, he listens, he sets distractions aside).
- Notices the one who awaits his care and turns to him sincerely.
- Sees beneath the surface: the hidden root in people and things.
- Passes on what he learned to another, so every fruit becomes a new seed.

The Four Inner Senses of Presence

Presence, too, is felt in the body before it is a skill. TrT awakens the child's interoception of being truly here. Guide the child to notice, without naming the terms:

INNER SENSE	WHAT THE CHILD FEELS IN PRESENCE	A GUIDING WHISPER
The laid-down screen	The lightness of the freed, empty hand	"Feel your hand rest empty and open — nothing between you and them."
The lifted gaze	The meeting when the eyes rise to another's eyes	"Lift your eyes to his eyes — feel the meeting there."
The turned ear	The attention that leans toward the one who waits	"Turn your whole self to the one who waits — feel him seen."
The unseen root	The sense of the deep thing beneath the words	"Feel the root beneath — the love that no one sees, and everyone needs."

🌱 Why this matters. A child who feels the laid-down screen, the lifted gaze, the turned ear, and the unseen root owns the root of the whole journey — for presence is the first manner of dialogue, and the greatest roots are the most hidden.

Safe-Stop Protocol & Inclusion

👉 Safe-stop protocol. This book is a tender wakefulness, not a trial. We do not turn it into blame of the family or a demonising of technology (the screen has its good; the trouble is only when it absents the present). And we let no child feel his family does not love him — we open the hearts gently. Legacy is a love passed on, not a guilt passed on.

CONDITION	SUGGESTED ALTERNATIVE
Autism spectrum (ASD)	Eye contact may be hard; accept presence of the heart in other forms (sitting together, listening, sharing food) without requiring a look in the eyes.
A busy family	Offer the model gently, without blame, and begin with a small step: one screen-free meal a week.
A child who feels truly neglected	Surround him with warmth, reassure him that the grown-ups' busyness is not because they do not love him, and guide him to one he trusts if the pain endures.
An over-digital environment	Teach balance, not deprivation; the screen has its time, and presence has its time, and the household are the model in it.
Language difficulty	Accept presence expressed by a deed (sharing food, a drawing, an embrace, sitting together), not by words alone.
Cultural difference	Respect the differing conventions of the table and of gathering across families and cultures.

Guide for Parent & Teacher

i. Before the session — the presence basket. Place your phones in one basket — like the child's basket in the story — for the whole session. Make it a habit at every table. Bread is eaten together; the phone waits.

ii. During the session — draw “what we cannot see.” Ask each one to draw or write the “root” of his family: what binds you that cannot be seen? Then share what you drew, and reflect on how much of the root works in silence.

iii. After the session — the “I see you” moment. Give each child, each day, one moment of full, screen-free attention: look into his eyes, and ask, how was your day, really? The child who is seen learns to see others.

🍷 Make it measurable. Record on the fridge ledger: “How many meals did we gather with no screens this week?” A star for each heart-present meal. Count the stars at week's end.

“The screen brings the absent near and absents the present. We choose to be present for those we love.”

The Juthur Scale (JPS) — Book Twenty Unit

 Important. The Juthur Scale is a pedagogical observation tool under development — not a psychological or medical diagnosis. Its readings are advisory and pass no verdict upon the child.

 How the measure grows — and completes. With this closing book all the dimensions of the Juthur Scale (JPS) are complete — from the breath to the counsel. And the closing dimension gathers them: presence of the heart and the passing-on of what we learned.

Filled twice, by two independent raters where possible; if not, one direct observer suffices. The marks are behaviorally anchored:

MARK	BEHAVIORAL ANCHOR (WHAT YOU ACTUALLY OBSERVE)
◦ rarely	Present in body, absent in heart; does not notice the one who awaits his care.
◐ sometimes	Is present in heart only when reminded; does not yet see the hidden root or pass on what he learned.
• often	Unprompted, is present in heart, sees the hidden root in his bonds, and passes on what he learned to another.

The Book's Words

WORD	SIMPLIFIED MEANING	ENGLISH
jadhṛ (جَذْر)	the hidden origin beneath the earth, the secret of the tree's life	root
judhūr (جُذُور)	many branching origins beneath the earth	roots
badhra (بَذْرَة)	the origin of the tree to come, carried by the fruit	seed
irth (إِرْث)	what we leave to those after us, that they carry on	legacy
ḥudūr (حُضُور)	to be here in heart, not in body only	presence

Output (Arabic): «نَحْنُ حَاضِرُونَ بِالْأَجْسَادِ... فَلْنَحْضُرْ بِالْقُلُوبِ. وَفِي كُلِّ ثَمَرَةٍ بَذْرَةٌ تَنْتَظِرُ. وَالْجَذَرُ يَعْمَلُ فِي صَمْتٍ، فَيَمْنَحُ الشَّجَرَةَ صَوْتَهَا.»

English Bridge: “We are present in body — let us be present in heart. And in every fruit waits a seed. The root works in silence, and gives the tree its voice.”

Questions of Understanding

- Why did the little one wait for the supper to show his family the drawing?

RECALL

- Why did the child's innocent question change the table more than lectures and advice?

INFERENCE

- Imagine your table now — who is waiting for you to truly see him? What would you say to him?

SENSORY

- What is the hidden root in your life — the thing you do not see, but that is the secret of your lasting and your firmness?

PERSONAL LINK · EXISTENTIAL

- The family reached for their screens because the quiet felt empty; the child reached for their hearts. Which reaching lasts? What did the child see that they had missed?

EMPATHY FOR THE OTHER

- What one skill from this whole journey will you pass on — and to whom?

LEGACY

What we cannot see may be the most important thing in us; the greatest roots are the most hidden, and the truest presence is to see the one before you.

♦ A closing wisdom — the root of it all. “In every fruit a seed; in every seed a tree; in every child a root waiting to grow.” All the eloquence of these twenty books begins with one thing: that we be truly here. Presence is the first manner of dialogue.

👤 Behavioral translation (not a slogan only). Teach the child: “When you sit with one you love, set the screen aside, look into his eyes, and ask: how are you, really? Sincere presence is a root that feeds hearts, and is not seen.” By presence, the smallest child became the root of his family.

SCREEN-FREE

The drawing. Ask the child to draw the “root of his family”: a tree that stands for his household, and beneath it the hidden roots that bind them (love, memories, moments together). Draw what cannot be seen.

The family deed. A screen-free table — try the “bread basket” once: a phone in the basket for a piece of bread, for the whole meal. Then tell one another: what did you discover in each other's faces?

The Closing Project — Design Your Own Book

You are now an author, no longer only a reader. Choose one skill you mastered on the journey (a breath, a voice, a dialogue, a wisdom...), then make “your own Book Twenty-One”: invent a linguistic root, a hero, a short story, and one sensory anchor the reader can try with his body — then teach it to someone younger than you. And so the circle closes: you have become a seed that sows a seed, a learner become a teacher.

Scan the mark with a grown-up for a short listening — or read it aloud with no screen, which is lovelier and more lasting. In a book that lifts up presence, the screen is the last of the means, not the first.

The Bridge of Memory — the Circle Closes and Reopens

« Looking back — Book Nineteen and the whole journey. “You gathered wisdom, and your speech became a ripe fruit. And now, at the close, you discover the deepest secret: that all you learned of expression, from the breath to the wisdom, could never have borne fruit but for a hidden root that works in silence. The ripe fruit reveals the root that fed it.”

Looking forward — back to the beginning (Book One: “Breath of the Seed”) »
“And here the circle closes... and reopens. Your fruit carries a seed in its heart, and the seed begins a new journey: a breath, then a voice, then a gaze... just as Noor began. For everyone who learned teaches, and every fruit is a seed, and every child a root waiting to grow. Return to the first book — not to repeat it, but to plant it in a new child, so that life goes on.”

And in every fruit a seed... and in every seed a tree... and in every child a root waiting to grow.

The Twelve Zero-Standards

The covenant of “nothing missing, nothing forced” — twelve zeroes the closing book must hold.

- 🐼 Zero logical error — the tale runs a silent table → an unseen child → an innocent question → the bread basket → the root revealed, unbroken.
- 🐼 Zero moral coercion — a tender wakefulness, never a blame of the family nor a demonising of technology; a tired parent is spared guilt.
- 🐼 Zero structural contradiction — the two sub-degrees close the Harvest and the whole arc consistently.
- 🐼 Zero psychological gap — the family drifts, then wakes to presence; the emotion is true and gentle.
- 🐼 Zero disconnected episode — the bridge is circular: it binds the wisdom of the Harvest and returns to the first breath.
- 🐼 Zero passive activity — presence becomes the bread basket, the drawing of the unseen, the “I see you” moment.
- 🐼 Zero stock icon — the seal and all five plates are original vector art.
- 🐼 Zero symbolic error — the hidden root is the secret of the tree's life and voice, as presence is the secret of our bonds; the metaphor holds and names the whole system.
- 🐼 Zero psychological miscue — the Distributed Distraction is awakened by a child's honesty, not shamed; understood, not vilified.
- 🐼 Zero architectural break — identity → root → tale → the basket & the unseen → application → measure → review is whole.
- 🐼 Zero cognitive coercion — “does a person have a root?” is a child's discovery, not a dictation.
- 🐼 Zero cultural imbalance — the wisdom comes from two women near every child (the Teacher, invoked; Grandmother Ramla), and the greatest insight from the smallest mouth.

The Binding Covenant

Sealed before the closing book is passed to the final press:

- 🐼 The approved root (j-dh-r) — the root that names the whole Juthur system — is morphologically sound, framed as body-before-symbol (the laid-down screen and the lifted gaze for the child; morphology for the teacher) — zero symbolic overreach.
- 🐼 The sub-degree is graduated and two-staged, closing the Harvest and the whole journey, with a TrT communicative Can-Do mapped to CEFR C1 and ACTFL Advanced Low.
- 🐼 The CASEL criteria are integrative, gathering the competencies of the whole journey as observable outcomes — as befits the closing book.
- 🐼 The two wise figures are female (the Teacher + Grandmother Ramla); the Teacher is invoked narratively through the child's tale, and the Distraction is marked symbolic, not an individual to be vilified.
- 🐼 Noor is present in the child's drawing (the tree of the journey with its little root), and the counter-character (the Distraction) turns by discovery, not by coercion.
- 🐼 Every skill is turned into a sensory anchor (the bread/phone basket, drawing the unseen, the look in the eyes), and the four inner senses are named for the guide — zero passive activity.
- 🐼 A tender proactive caution (a wakefulness not a trial; no demonising of technology; no guilt on the weary parent) + safe-stop protocol + 6 inclusion alternatives (including ASD and the truly neglected child) — zero coercion.
- 🐼 Two tellings (brief/full) heeding differences of attention.
- 🐼 The cumulative echo is circular: it binds the wisdom of the Harvest and returns to the first breath (Breath of the Seed) — a ring, not a line.
- 🐼 The scale adds the closing dimension (presence of the heart and legacy) and completes all the journey's dimensions, behaviorally anchored, with a discrepancy-resolution protocol and a prominent “observation tool, not diagnosis” note.
- 🐼 The questions hold a sensory question and an open existential one, and the lesson becomes a behavioural rule; a closing wisdom crowns the whole — and the Closing Project turns the learner into an author and a teacher.
- 🐼 Vowelling (tashkīl) verified on every word of the Arabic master edition from which this English Heirloom edition is faithfully translated.

- 🐼 Five original plates in the harvest palette, each with poetic alt-text + audio mark + bilingual bridge; the bread basket and the root-beneath-the-earth included.

Roots of the Harvest

To free the world's children from the epidemic of screens — and grow hearts that are present, and pass on what they learned.

A weary mother gathers her family for supper and makes each one what he loves — but every heart is bent over a screen hidden beneath the table. A small child lifts his drawing, the loveliest in the class, and no one looks up; his light dims. Then, with a child's honesty, he asks, “Are the phones hungry too? I’m the one who’s hungry — for you,” and gathers their phones in the bread basket in exchange for a loaf each. And when at last they ask about his drawing, he shows them a tree — named Noor — with a small root beneath the earth, and repeats his teacher’s challenge: “draw what you cannot see.” “Does a person have a root, like a tree,” he asks, “the secret of our lasting that we cannot see?” — and a mother’s eyes fill. Across twenty books Noor came from a breathing seed to a fruiting tree; and here she lives on in every child who is present, who listens, who asks with the heart — for the fruit carries a seed, and the circle begins again. A tangible, sensory tale in the tradition of Tactile Reading Theory: not a screen that absents the present — only a family learning that what we cannot see is the secret of our lasting.

“What we cannot see is the secret of our lasting.”
